destroy the voice of the majority. These, in brief, were the accounts given in the nonpartisan press of the disgraceful outrages that attended the recent elections, and, so far as I have seen, these reports are without serious contradiction, and it was but just and fair that they should be investigated. Mr. Blaine proceeded:

But we do not need investigation to establish certian facts already of official record. We know that one hundred and six representatives in Congress were recently chosen in the States recently slave holding, and that the Democrats elected one hundred and one, or possibly one hundred and two, and the Republicans four, or possibly five. We know that thirty five of those representatives were assigned to the Southern States by reason of the colored population, and that the entire political power thus founded on the number of the colored people has been seized and appropriated to the aggrandizement of its own strength by the Democratic party of the South.

The issue thus raised before the country, Mr President, is not one of mere sentiment for the rights of the negro, nor is the issue one that involves the waiving of the "bloody shirt," to quote the elegant vernacular of Democratic vituperation; nor still farther is the issue as now presented only a question of the equality of the black voter of the South with the white voter of the South; the issue, Mr. President, has taken a far wider range, one of portentous magnitude; and that is, whether the white voter of the North shall be equal to the white voter of the South in shaping the policy and fixing the destiny of this country; or whether, to put it still more baldly, the white man who fought in the ranks of the Union army shall have as weighty and influential a vote in the government of the republic as the white man who fought in the ranks of the Rebel army. The one fought to uphold, the other to destroy, the union of the States, and today he who fought to destroy is a far more important factor in the government of the nation than he who fought to uphold it.

Let me illustrate my meaning by comparing groups of States of the same representative strength North and South. Take the States of South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana. They send seventeen representatives to Congress. Their aggregate population is composed of 1,035,000 whites and 1,224,000 colored; the colored being nearly 200,000 in excess of the whites. Of the seventeen representatives then, it is evident that nine were apportioned to these states by reason of their colored population, and only eight by reason of their white population; and yet in the choice of the entire seventeen representatives the colored voters had no more voice or power than their remote kindred on the shores of Senegambia or on the Gold Coast. The 1,305,000 white people had the sole and absolute choice of the seventeen representatives. In contrast, take two states in the North, Iowa and Wisconsin, with seventeen representatives. They have a white population of 2,947,000,—considerably more than double the entire white population of the three Southern States I have named. In Iowa and Wisconsin, therefore, it takes 132,000 white population to send a representative to Congress, but in South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana every 60,000 white people send a representative. In other words, 60,000 white people in those Southern States have precisely the same political power in the government of the country that 132,000 white people have in Iowa and Wisconsin.

Take another group of seventeen representatives from the South and from the North. Georgia and Alabama [illegible] population of [illegible] population [illegible] They send seventeen representatives [illegible] Congress, of [illegible]

Let us carry the comparison to a more comprehesive generalization. The elveven States that formed the Confederate government had by the last census a population of nine and a half millions, of which, in round numbers, five and a half millions where white and four millions colored. On this aggregate population seventy-three representatives in Congress were apportioned to these States—forty-two or three of which were by reason of the white popnlation, and thirty or thirty-one by reason of the colored population. At the recent election the White Democracy of the South seized seventy of the seventy-three districts, and thus secured a Democratic majority in the next house of representatives. Thus it appears that throughout the States that formed the late Confederate government 65,000 whites—the very people that rebelled against the Union—are enabled to elect a representative in Congress, while in the loyal States it requires 132,000 of the white people that fought for the Union to elect a representative. In levying every tax, therefore, in making every appropriation of money, in fixing every line of public policy, in decreeing what shall be the fate and fortune of the republic, the Confederate soldier South is enable to cast a vote that is twice as powerful and twice as influental as the vote of the Union soldier North.

But the white men of the South did not acquire and do not hold the superior power by reason of law or justice, but in disregard and defiance of both.

Mr. Blaine argued that the Fourteenth amendment of the constitution was intended to operate in in such a way that it any class of voters were denied or in any way abridged in their right of suffrage, then the class so abridged should not be counted in the basis of representation; or, in other words, that no state or states should gain a large increase of representation in Congress by reason of counting any class of population not permitted to take part in electing such representatives. Mr. Blaine discussed his points ably and very forcibly.

True Heroism.

BY G. W. HUBBARD M. D.

During the prevalence of the great epidemic that has devastated so many of our Southern cities for the last few months, both sides of human character have been presented.

Indifference, selfishness and abject cowardice have shown themselves side by side with generosity, unselfish devotion, and unflinching courage.

Whenever assistance was called for, money was poured out as freely as water, and noble men and women offered their services as physicians and nurses, well knowing the dangerous work in store for them.

Those who thus volunteered were not animated by love of glory, or hope of renown; but with a desire to save the lives of their fellow-men.

Although the foe with which they contended was invincible, it was none the less dangerous, and from this battle field many a brave and gentle soul never returned.

Among the heroes in the fight were some of a darker complexion than their fellows, and it is in regard to those we propose to write.

Dr. Lorenzo Dow Key, son of Rev. H. W. Key of the Tennessee Conference, was one of the three gradnates of the Meharry Medical Department of Central Tennessee College of February last.

Since that time he has been practicing medicine at Mason, West Tennessee.

When the yellow fever apppeared at that place, and many fled to escape from danger, he remained at his post and attended those who needed his assistance, and notwithstanding the danger to which he was exposed, his life was providentially spared, it is to be hoped, for many years of usefulness among his people.

Dr. John S. Bass graduated at the same time, and located at Murfreesboro, where he succeeded in building up a fine practice.

When the yellow fever appeared at Chattanooga, and additional [illegible] were needed to attend [illegible] with the disease, [illegible] realizing that [illegible] health [illegible] duty [illegible] colored people who were sick in the infected district of that city.

He remained there two weeks, until the scourge had so abated that the assistance of the volunteer physicians was no longer needed.

During the time he remained there he attended sixty-four yellow fever patients, making in all three hundred and fifty professional calls.

Of these sixty-four patients, two were sent to the hospital, where one of them afterward died.

One died while under the care of another physician; twelve were still sick (some of them dangerously) when he came away; while the remaining forty were either convalescent or entirely well.

There are but very few physicians that can show a better record than this.

The following extract from a letter from Dr. P. D. Sims, the medical director, shows how his services were appreciated by the citizens of Chattanooga:

"You will allow me, in the name of the profession, and afflicted people of Chattanooga, to express our gratitude, for your magnanimity, and our high appreciation of your zeal and efficiency in your attendance upon the sick."

Dr. E. M. Wight, city physician, and late Republican candidate for Governor, endorsed the above, and added:

"I desire to express my thanks for your efficient aid to me, and to the sufferers who were recommended to your care by me."

On his return to Nashville, he delivered a lecture, giving a brief history of the disease, its symptoms and treatment, and also giving a short sketch of his personal experience in that plague-stricken city.

At the close of his lecture he was presented with a copy of "Roberts' Theory and Practice of Medicine," which contained the following inscription:

"Presented to Dr. J. S. Bass by the Faculty and students of Central Tennessee College, as a slight token of their appreciation of his generous and self-sacrificing efforts to relieve those afflicted with yellow fever at Chattanooga, Tennessee, October 1878."

The following account of his reception at Murfreesboro, is taken from the American, the leading Democratic paper in Tennessee:

"Dr. J. S. Bass, the colored physician who volunteered his services in behalf of the stricken of his color at Chattanooga, was received here to-day by a large concourse of citizens.

He was escorted from the depot to his office by one of the largest processions that ever paraded our streets.

The Mayor, Board of Aldermen and many of our most prominent citizens participated in the reception.

Elder H. W. Key, of the Colored Methodist Church, extended Dr. Bass a welcome in a few well-timed remarks, to which Dr. Bass responded in a very appropriate manner.

Altogether the affair was a marked compliment to the colored doctor, and the hearty manner in which the whites co-operated with the colored in this reception, should be highly appreciated by that race, and be codsidered by them as an assurance that when right, they will be given that consideration which their acts merit."

With one more instance we will close.

Rev. D. W. Hayes, a former student of the College, and now one of the trustees, has had charge of the colored Methodist Episcopal Church at Chattanooga during the past year. When the fever came, he remained with his congregation, visiting and praying with the sick, and ministering to their spiritual and temporal necessities, showing the people that one shepherd, at least, wonld not forsake his flock when danger approached.

Our Work in Alabama.

Our church work in Alabama is composed in two Annual Conferences, the Alabama and the Central Alabama. These Conferences have just been held.

The Alabama Conference is composed of white ministers and membership. The minutes show an increase in membership and probationers of two hundred and eighty-six. The absence of a large part of the conference made the statistical reports imperfect. The membership of the Churches will probably foot up 6000. Bishop Wiley president and Dr. Rust was present. The sermons of both these distinguished men were instructive and eloquent. Rev. T. A. Pharr, J. W. Ballew and P. T. McWhorter were transfered from Georgia. Mrs. [illegible], a licensed local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was present and preached, and is spoken of as a very succesful minister of the Lord Jesus.

The following resolution was passed on Sunday School work, and Andrews Institute:

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Resolved. That we rejoice to learn that Dr. Ford proposes to visit each of our districts during the opening year to hold Sunday-school Institutes. We heartily invite Dr. Ford to come amongus in this work and we earnestly pray that God may open his way and bless his efforts to help us to increase the interest on the subject of Sunday-schools among our people throughout our whole conference.

EDUCATION.

Resolved, That we have heard with great pleasure, of the efforts of brother J. M. Wesson and others to erect a suitable building for the use of Andrews Institute, and that in view of the great demands of our educational work, we approve these efforts, and urge the prosecution of this work, with the view of completing the building within eighteen months from this time, and that we rejoice in a resonable assurance, that if the building shall be completed within that time, provision will be made for furnishing it in good style, not exceeding $1,-000.

Rev. Dr. Miller, a member of this Conference, is an efficent agent of the American Bible Society.

The Central Alabama Conference met at Marion, Nov 28th. Bishop Wiley president. Drs. Fuller, of Atlanta, Dr. Rust, of Cincinati, were present added much to the interest of the occasion. Several leading citizens gave the visiting brethren and several members of the Conference a good entertainment. Bishop Wiley preached in the Southern Methodist Church. The statistics are imperfect but show an advance. The increase in the number of probationers is 130, members 809, local preachers 7—total membership 6,945. Children baptized, 307; adults baptised, 687; Sunday-schools, 102; officers and teachers, 415; scholars, 4,614; increase, 851. The Conference raised for missions, $50; Church Extension, $8,50; Tracts, $3 75; Sunday-school Union, $13,35; Freedmen's Aid Society, $12,05; Episcopal Fund, $15,75—total $104,40, against $42,85 last year.

The Largest of Our Conferences.

BY BISHOP HAVEN.

The cars took us on a bright October morning from our late new, but now old friends at Oil City, where the Erie Conference has just met, to those yet unmade at Corning. We stopped over a train at Meadville, to visit Alleghany College, the oldest incorporated institution of learning in our Church, though not our oldest institution. Dr. Bugbee, its president, drove us around its pleasant grounds, turning over the carriage at the start by way of variety, but allowing us to pick ourselves up without especial damage. The College sets in a lovely seat. Its grounds are prettily shaded, and the outlook sweeps over the pretty city at its feet, and the rolling country beyond. It has a pleasant seat. Here Dr. Hyde, master of many tongues, dispenses lingual learning, and his coworkers filtrate among his immense oil beds their diverse knowledge. What a blessing it is, nay, what a providence rather, that nine-tenths of the colleges of the world are in the hands of Christian men. Only here and there in America, and in State colleges almost exclusively, does infidelity get a chance to prove its scientific worthlessness. It is not less notable that every leading English sceptical scholar has no connection with her Oxford and Cambridge. Spencer, Darwin, Huxley and Tyndall are private tutors, not professors in either of these universities.

A day's ride on the Erie railroad brought us to Corning and the Gennessee Conference. No other conference has an equal number of members. It has over three hundred on its roll. It is so large that it has for several years made no effort to take care of all its preachers, a third of them, at least, paying their own board. Over a hundred boarded at one hotel. The landlord did not do much business at his bar that week, but the next week a Democratic Convention was to be held, and he said he would more than make up for his loss of custom the conference week. Prayers were held in the parlors and singing, and Christ, for once, was found in an inn.

A body so large that it almost itself filled the church would seem to be unwieldy, but Methodism is used to handling large masses whether at camp-meeting or conference. The big body managed itself, and the routine went as smoothly as if its membership were like the last one I have attended, less than a dozen. Its leaders, Drs. Hunt, Huntington, Hibbard. (How the H's have it!) Jervis, next to H. Wentworth, Muller, Stratton, Gracey, Dennis, long the father of Lima, and many others known to Methodistic fame, have filled that rich region with their labors. Our churches are everywhere and often of great influence. The Delaware Avenue Church in Buffalo is one of the finest churches in the country. Stone from foundation to the tip of its tall steeple, a gift of one hundred and seventy-five thousand without debt to the Church. Bro. Root was its chief donor. The Conference is more conservative than its neighbor, the Central, though Wm. Hosmer, the father of central New York Methodist Abolitionism, is a member of this Conference rather than that. Its debates were vigorous, its love for Methodism fervent, its future magnificent.

BRAINS VS. FEET.

At Corning we were invited to visit very fine glass works, where a specimen of the difference between skilled and unskilled labor was strikingly exhibited. Men were treading the mud, to make moulds for the glass, to get it into proper consistency and combination. A dollar a day was good wages, for feet and legs are numerous and cheap. A German brother, a member of our Church, sat at a table drawing scroll work and delicate tracings on the various articles manufactured there, and he receives three thousand dollars a year for his easy labor. Six dollars a week against sixty, and all because eye and hand are trained, while foot and leg are untrained. Educate, my brother in the South, educate yourself. Whatever your previous condition, your future is your own. Educate yourself if you would be a graceful artist instead of a plodding tramper, which a horse might as well or better be. If a minister, much more educate yourself, that you can rightly devide the word of truth.

Our host, Mr. Pritchard, and his father, a pioneer Methodist, made the hours go swiftly and pleasantly. A ride in the carriage opened lovely Autumn vistas, bluff and meadow glowing in gold and green. How happy a minister of the gospel whose life is passed amid such happy homes and heavenly service. It is a Beulah land all the way through, from the wicket gate to the Celestial City. The largest of our Conferences may, by more equitable arrangements, become smaller, but it will never be small or uninfluential. In a chosen seat, it will be, as potent as Ephrim in Israel.

The Matter of Fraternity in Texas.

The Texas Christian Advocate, Galveston, the organ of the M. E. Church in the South, has the following in its issue of Dec. 15th;

A FRATERNAL MORSEL.

We find in the Northwestern Advocate, of Chicago, a report of the late session of the Austin Conference of the M. E. Church, North, over which Bishop Haven presided. We extract from it the following fraternal morsel:

"The presence of Dr. Hartzell, of the SOUTHWESTERN, was like sunshine after rain. His address on 'The work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States,' was words fitly spoken, and nowhere more enjoyed than in this center of political and religious strife, where every sentence was verified and illustrated. 'Fraternity' is a myth here, except as conquered or compelled."

Without doubt Dr. Hartzell, and the clan he represents, would gladly rule as conquerors over the South, and compel its people to accept their opinions by all the terrors of the secular arm. Such men are born out of time. They belong to the dark ages and would have made first class inquisitors. The spirit of Torquemada survives in them. They only need the troopers of Claverhouse, with muskets and thumbscrews, to compel men, whom God has made free, to submit to their fraternal embrace. It is very clear that "fraternity" is a myth with such men. They may have read the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians, but certainly to very little profit. They need to bring them within its hallowed precincts—not compulsion—but the grace of God.

In the face of the bitterness, breathed into utterances of Hartzell, Haven & Co., respecting the Southern people and the Southern Church, we have faith to believe that there is some genuine fraternity somewhere in the Northern Methodist Church. But we walk by faith, not by sight.

Rev. M. A. Daugherty, of our Austin Conference, (Texas) sends the following reply to the above. We make our own comments editorially, on the subject of fraternity in Texas.

Editor of the Texas Advocate.

"Will you permit a member of the Austin Conference to reply to your article of last week's issue, entitled, 'A Fraternal Morsel?'

The words of the report named, to which you object, convey the truth intended when taken in their true meaning, to wit: that 'fraternity is a myth here,' except whenever and wherever, by reason of success and influence in the community, it is better to be fraternal than otherwise. When we have conquered success, success completes fraternity. This may not be more palatable than the construction you force upon the words, but it is their true sense.

This is a question of fact. Not by rhetoric, nor argument, nor hard names, nor ill nature, nor ill manners by either party can, editors either elicit or hide the truth. An appeal must be had to facts and experience. If this statement is not true, it is easy to produce the facts that will disprove it.

There certainly was no fraternity exhibited at Austin by the M. E. Church South. There was no unfriendly word spoken of Southern Methodism, or the Southern people, nor any unfriendly act done by Bishop Haven, Dr Hartzell, or any of the 'clan he represents.' 'The clan' have no hostility to either, are true friends of the South, laboring for the interests and salvation of its people. We are here to help, and not to hinder, as friends of all, and foes of none. We are here to reach and save multitudes that Southern Methodism cannot reach; to render aid in giving to society and to Methodism a hermogeneity which sectional Methodism cannot give. We wish for fraternity. It shall not be our fault if it does not exist. But we have no opinions that we desire to 'compel' the people to accept, or any fraternity we desire enforced 'by the terrors of the secular arm.' The only favor we ask of 'the secular arm,' is to protect us in our rights as citizens, not of the 'North' or of the 'South,' but of the United States, our common country. 'Muskets' and thumbscrews the Methodist Episcopal Church has never used, nor any measures which they symbolize. Nearly the whole country has outgrown the barbarism of 'Torquemada' and his inquisitors and 'Claverhouse and his troopers.'

Evidently 'A Fraternal Morsel' and the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians, are not on fraternal terms, and the 13th chapter does not need the 'grace of God.'

Very truly yours,

M. A. DAUGHERTY.

How one Freedmen's School was Organized.

Rev. Dr. Rust, Corresponding Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society, gives the following account of the organization of our Normal School at Waynesboro, Georgia:

The school comprises a large two-story brick building, with a beautiful chapel, two school rooms and about a dozen dormitories for the accommodation of the students, and an additional convenient residence for the principal. The history of this school has never been written, but if it ever is it will be replete with thrilling incident and hair-breadth escapes. We furnish the following as a brief contribution to this history:

In response to an earnest appeal from a large number of colored people from Burke and adjoining counties, which are largely peopled by them, and is called the Black Belt of Georgia—one of our missionaries appealed to the Corresponding Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society for a teacher, and on her arrival South, accompanied her to Waynesboro, Georgia, to start the school. Prior to this, the presiding elder at a quarterly-meeting had barely escaped with his life. Two weeks afterward, Dr. Fuller, of Atlanta, held a quarterly-meeting here in imminent peril of his life, the rebels being determined to break up our mission there and prevent the establishment of the school. The doctor assured them that he had come there to hold a regular Methodist quarterly-meeting, and by God's help and grace he meant to do it. Nearly a hundred muskets, shot-guns, and pistols were piled up under the pulpit in the grove, where they had assembled, for self-defense, and the colored peopled were instructed that in case of necessity they should use them. The meeting was held, and great good was accomplished.

No place for the teacher to board could be found in the town, except in the rude cabin of a poor colored woman, and the lady who taught the school assured me that she spent most of her time out of school upon her knees agonizing with God in prayer for protection from those threatening to drive her away, take her life, and break up the school. Behold what God hath wrought! Now there is a flourishing school and Church here, preparing teachers and ministers, and the whole region feels the elevating influence of the school.

Mrs. Goodier, a devoted teacher, died while engaged in this work, and in her dying moments requested that her body might be buried in sight of the seminary, that her grave might prove an inspiration to the pupils, and that with them she might rise in the general resurrection. Her grave is covered with flowers, planted and watered by the pupils, and a plain marble monument has been erected at the head of the grave, with the following inscription: "This monument is erected by the colored people in memory of their teacher, whose life was devoted to their elevation, and whose many virtues and godly example will ever be held by them in remembrance."

Our school has already accomplished great good, many have gone from it to engage in teaching, and a few have entered the ministry. But the good work has just been commenced. The poverty of the people is so great that but few can send their children from home to be educated, yet the [illegible] of the school is improved, the instruction is more [illegible], and the progress of the [illegible] rapid. Southwestern.

39 Natchez St., New Orleans, La.

THURSDAY, JAN. 2, 1879.

Do not fail to read again our circular for 1879 on the next page, and then tell your people and friends that we give a beautiful steel engraving of John Wesley to every subscriber, and silver communion ware to churches.

Papers on Trial.

Push the canvass, brethren, from every pulpit. Send on all the names you can get and we will send the papers a month on trial, and give that much time for the people to pay. At the end of the month we will stop all papers not paid for, and for which you will not be responsible. Show the people the engraving of John Wesley, and let them fully understand our offer to give it to every subscriber as soon as the paper is paid for.

That Fraternal Morsel.

On the first page of this issue we publish "That Fraternal Morsel." Read it. We have no reply to make for Bro. Daugherty has replied well. We have only to remark that if Dr. John thinks he can afford to speak thus of us personally and the "clan"—that is the Methodist Episcopal Church—which we represent, he is to be pitied rather than scolded.

Your Last Paper.

We send this copy of the SOUTHWESTERN to all old subscribers for 1878. Next week we will mail from the new list for 1879. So that this is the last paper to all old subscribers unless they have renewed.

We do not want to lose a single old subscriber, so hope that all who have not renewed will do so at once.

The Next Thirty Days.

Our agents will please remember that the next thirty days will practically decide the size of our subscription list for 1879. Let us hear from every agent. The lists are coming in splendidly, but we can take care of many more.

The re-election of the Hon. and Rev. P. Landry, of Donaldsonville, to the State Senate of Louisiana is a compliment to a very worthy man. He was voted for by all parties, and goes into the Senate as the representative of all the people.

Rev. D. McLachlan writes us from Okolona, Miss., that he held a meeting for the SOUTHWESTERN, at Aberdeen, Monday night, and secured forty subscribers for 1879. This was a good night's work, and so it goes over the whole field.

In quoting from that "Fraternal Morsel" in the Texas Christian Advocate on our first page, the error was made of speaking of that paper as the organ of the M. E. Church in the South. The error was in putting in the words, in the. The error was corrected on the press, but not until the "outside" was mostly printed.

The Old and New Year.

By the time that our present issue reaches our readers the old year will have passed away and the new will have dawned upon them. How suitable that we turn the eye backward upon the events and scenes that have now become a part of our personal history, whose record is written in God's Book of Remberance and to be reproduced in flashing lines of light in the Great Day! How much reason for gratitude in innumerable mercies received! Life preserved; health restored, strength renewed; wants of the body supplied; gathering clouds that obscured our sky dispersed and the bright and cheerful beams of hope assured in their place; the comforting sense of God's favor; the fulfillment of His precious promises to us; prayers answered; these and others crowd upon the memory as it recalls the past and bow our hearts in thankfulness at the feet of the Giver of all good. But with these sweet thoughts how many others also will arise as grim spectres to remind us of duties neglected; vows unfulfilled; opportunities unimproved; afflictions that have not chastened us; weariness in well doing; lack of zeal; want of faith; deficient prayerfulness and labor for Christ! Shall not these dark figures of the past year melt our hearts in penitence and confession. Shall they not lead us down into the valley of humiliation and make us feel that sackcloth and ashes become us!

The Roman god Janus, from whom the first month of the year derives its name, had two faces; the one looking backward, the other looking forward. The change of the year has also two faces; the one looks back into the past, the other onward to the future. The look backward is in order to the look foward. As we enter upon the new year we cannot but have a feeling of uncertainty! It is like embarking on a new and untried sea. Shall clear skies be over our heads and prospering gales fill our sails? or shall our frail bark have to encounter the blackness of tempest and the rough billows lashed by furious winds? God only knows. We can but commit the future into His hands. There our interests are safe. All things shall be made to work for our good. As we have looked back we have seen evil resulting in good, sorrow producing strength and joy, happy intervals of brightness and peace between days of gloom and toil. The same Almighty Wisdom, Goodness and Power are over and around us. We must let Faith take the helm and Hope spread our sails as we venture upon the New Year. In the twenty-third Psalm the Psalmist reviewing his life receives many indications of the constant and tender care of the Lord, his Shepherd, and ends the Psalm with a joyful conclusion; "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord." We have here the solution of one of the most difficult problems of practical religion, how to meet to-morrow and the next day with a confident smile and a friendly greeting. Hope plants itself firmly upon the experience of God's goodness and mercy in the past, and looks forward with confidence to its contribuance in the mysterious time to come, while Purpose expresses itself in the words, "I will dwell in the house of the Lord;" a resolution to serve him in a grateful spirit, with increasing earnestness and zeal.

What shall be our watchword for 1879? Let it be JESUS. Let Him be more elevated in your affections; more the great subject of your daily thoughts; and let Him have supreme control of your life. For Him, spare not yourself any sacrifice, shrink not from any service, be ready, willing, glad to be and do all for His praise and glory, for His cause and kingdom. This consecration is the more necessary in these times when there are so many adversaries on all sides arrayed against his crown and kingdom, and clothed in the garb of science, falsely so called, of spiritualism with its witcheries, of Popery with its abominations, and of sensualism, whose cry is, "let us eat and drink and be merry; for to-morrow we die," and whose look is entirely at "the things temporal."

Our Work in Texas.

We have lately completed a tour of over two thousand miles in the great State of Texas, attending our four Annual Conferences in that State and visiting a goodly number of its principal towns and cities. [illegible] Conferences and their work [illegible] We now [illegible] of the [illegible] our [illegible] and what [illegible] in the [illegible] division [illegible] Church

South, our Church had missions in Texas. Dr. Ruter, the historian whose remains lie buried in Texas, and Drs. Alexander and Thrall who are still prominent ministers in the Church South, in that State, were the first missionaries. At the separation in 1844 all Texas Methodism which then was, went with the M. E. Church, South, except the anti-slavery element along the northern border of the State. In this section the old church in later years found some active friends, and in 1858 Bishop Janes met the Arkansas Conference in Bonham, Texas, and we had sufficient work to organize a Texas District, and to this Anthony Bewley was appointed as presiding elder. In 1859 Bishop Ames presided at the same Conference, and returned Bewley to the same work. The conference at Bonham in 1858 was ordered from the State by a pro-slavery mob, and the society in Bonham immigrated en masse to California, and a year later, Bewley was hung and our people, everywhere driven from the state, or compelled by the mobocratic defenders of slavery to abstain from a free expression of their opinions.

Our church next entered Texas by way of Galveston, in 1867, and the Texas District was again formed, but this time as a part of the Mississippi Mission Conference, which had been organized a year before by Bishop Thompson, Dr. Newman and others, in New Orleans. Since then, our work has steadily grown. In 1873, the German work of the state was organized into a Conference. Later, the West Texas was organized, and three years ago the Austin Conference was organized. The Texas and West Texas Conferences include our work among our colored people, and the Austin Conference, among our white, English-speaking people. Steps were taken this year to organize a North Texas Conference, which will probably be accomplished next year.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in Texas is now a great factor among the evangelizing forces of that State. It is firmly rooted and established on Texas soil, and if any should yet be inspired by the spirit of 1858, they are powerless; for over this whole Southland has swept, since then, a revolution, decreed of God, which not only destroyed slavery, but which slowly and certainly is re-adjusting all classes in the South to a civilization better than that represented by slavery.

The following are the statistics of our entire work in Texas:

MEMBERSHIP.

Probationers	2467
Full members	14207
Local preachers	308
Traveling Preachers appointed	221
Total membership	17203

BAPTISMS.

Adults baptized	1482
Infants baptized	1384
Total baptisms	2866

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Number of schools	177
Officers and teachers	870
Scholars	13822

CHURCH PROPERTY.

Number of churches	174
Probable value	$183,904 00
Number of parsonages	35
Probable value	13,883 00
Total church property	$197,287 00

BENEVOLENT COLLECTIONS.

For Missions	$2,113 10
For Board of Church Extension	215 75
For Tract Society	46 55
For Sunday-school Union	68 40
For Freedmen's Aid Society	126 10
For Bible Cause	99 70
For Woman's Foreign Mission	32 70
For Education	916 10
Total	$3,618 40
Raised for church building and paying debts in 1878	$23,486 61

Considering all the circumstances this showing is most gratifying. We know by personal inspection that these statistics are reliable. Each year there is a healthy increase in members and property, in ministerial efficiency, and what is better than all, in Christian life and church efficiency. We have been especially gratified in visiting the Sunday-schools. They are large and in most cases well organized. In church building no church in the State is doing as much as we. On all questions of reform our conferences and ministers are in the front rank.

God's blessing is upon the brethren of our Church in Texas, and may it be multiplied more and more, day by day.

The Difficulties of the Work of Punishing Conspirators.

The speech of Senator Blaine, delivered before the United States Senate, December 11th, was a graphic outline of the work of conspirators against the national laws, and of the profits they expect to derive from their iniquity. The resolution advocated by him in that speech, and adopted by the Senate, leads to the general inquiry as to whether at the recent elections the constitutional rights of American citizens were violated.

The Attorney General of the United States has been officially informed of the outrages in South Carolina and Louisiana, prior to and subsequent to the passage of the Blaine resolution. The subsequent crimes of the Louisiana conspirators are of a startling character to the sober men of the North, who but vaguely realize their import.

J. R. Hornsby, a Justice of the Peace of Natchitoches parish, caused the arrest of Dr. Scruggs and others of that parish, by a U. S. Commissioner, on charges of threats and intimidation. His presence was required before the Grand Jury of the United States Circuit Court to testify relative to the late election. He was arrested by virtue of a bench warrant from Natchitoches, on a charge of assault and battery, and an affidavit of Recorder Miltenberger of New Orleans, that he was a fugitive from justice, and lodged in the parish prison to await the arrival of the Sheriff of his parish. United States District Attorney Leonard applied to Judge Billings, of the U. S. District Court for a writ of habeas corpus adtestificendum, directing the Marshal to take Hornsby out of prison that he might appear as a witness. The writ operates in the bringing of Hornsby before the Court as a witness, and subsequently returning him to prison; thence to be taken to Natchitoches by the Sheriff and lodged in jail in the immediate vicinity of the men against whom he is compelled to testify by judicial process. The well known insecurity of Southern jails against mobs of masked men is known to the witness, and it will require the courage of a martyr on his part to face the conspirators with the truth. Another witness, James H. Alston, will be subjected to similar process to secure his presence as was resorted to in the case of Hornsby, Judge Billings having granted the writ of habeas corpus applied for.

The affair of the Caddo witnesses has been published to the country. A Deputy Marshal of the United States, in the parish of Caddo, started from Shreveport on the steamer Danube with two colored men he had subpœnaed as witnesses in prosecutions for violations of national election laws. A Constable named Jeff. Cole boarded the steamer, took them from the custody of the Marshal, and while at Beard's plantation, en route to Shreveport, the two men were attacked by a mob and brutally murdered.

It will thus appear that the machinery of State government, supplemented by mob violence, is being used to break down the work of prosecution instituted by the government. There appears to be no social or political influence, or power of its executive officers, that may be looked to as a means of thwarting the designs of the conspirators in Louisiana. The tactics pursued are similar to those of South Carolina, where the authority of trial justices, and affidavits prepared for the occasion, are exercised to defeat the ends of justice. Shall there not arise an honest indignation throughout the whole land to reverse this condition of affairs? This is the hope and the trust of the law-abiding friends of the union in the South.

Bishop Haven in Texas and New Orleans.

Bishop Haven's administration in Texas gave universal satisfaction. It is a pleasant fact to witness that all our Bishops are popular among the Conferences. Each has his special lines of strength, and yet all have breadth of capacity to grasp the work, and executive force and wisdom to plan and execute. One of the benefits of our General Superintendency is, that every Conference receives the combined wisdom of the entire Board of Bishops in its work. Each in his turn presides, and on difficult points represents the united wisdom of all his predecessors.

We met Bishop Haven at Austin November 15, and left him at Marshall December 19th, to return to New Orleans, while he made a second visit to Austin and return to Atlanta by way of Galveston and New Orleans. He presided over the Austin, Southern German, West Texas and Texas Conferences. He traveled in the State over two thousand miles, visited a score of cities and towns, preached eighteen times, besides his addresses to the Conferences. He personally inspected and gave directions at several important points relative to purchasing property, settlement of disputes, and plans for buildings. Wiser and more thorough episcopal work has never been done in Texas than that just accomplished by Bishop Haven.

Bishop Haven arrived in this city from Texas on last Thursday evening, having spent a day at the Orphan's Home on the Teche, on his way from Galveston. The announcement that he would preach brought a large audience to Ames Church Sunday morning. He preached an instructive and interesting sermon on the Anti-naturalism of the Gospel. The Times of this city gave a full abstract of the sermon, the point of which was to show that the Gospel (1) in its lowest materialistic forms, (2) in its spiritualistic power on the present, and (3) its assured future triumphs was not only supernatural, but was often contrary to nature, being the acts of God, who as creator of all law could suspend or use nature's laws for his own gracious purposes. In the afternoon the Bishop addressed a union love feast of our three city German churches, and at night preached to a large audience in Union Chapel. The night sermon was on The Two Paradises. He showed wherein the Garden of Eden was similar to Heaven and wherein they differed. On Monday morning he spent an hour with the New Orleans preachers, and in the evening left for his home in Atlanta, Ga.

The Fort Worth Dedication.

It was a great pleasure to us to be with Bishop Haven, Presiding Elder Brush and pastor Webb, at the dedication of our new and beautiful church at Fort Worth, Texas, December 15th. One year ago, we had nothing at Fort Worth. Bro. Webb, being in Texas for his health, asked of Bishop Foster the privilege of going there and seeing what could be done. He went in the name of the Lord, and finding friends, began holding services, and the work grew. Lots were bought and buildings begun. The Board of Church Extension made a donation, and loaned $500. At the close of the year the property is worth $3,500, on which only $400 is due the Board of Church Extension. The Sunday-school is large, and the membership numbers nearly one hundred. A more intelligent, active and thoroughly Methodistic congregation we have never seen.

Nearly every State in the Union is represented in the church and congregation. Great credit is due Bro. Webb, and many were the words of commendation of him and his work from the people.

The dedication services occured in the forenoon. The singing was in charge of the pastor. Miss Rey, late from Pennsylvania, presided at the organ, and acquitted herself finely as an organist and singer. Mrs. Walker, of the Baptist church, assisted in the singing. Bishop Haven preached a very able and interesting sermon from the words: "The wilderness and the solitary places shall blossom as the rose," showing clearly the financial, social and moral value of the Christian church to the rapid settlement and permanent development of this empire State. After the sermon, $300 were raised to pay debts due.

In the afternoon a union Sabbath-school gathering was held. All the schools in town were represented. Revs. Wells, Stephens, Taylor and Gillespie, pastors of other churches, were present. Addresses were made by Bishop Haven, Dr. Brush and ourself. After the addresses enough money was raised to complete paying for the church organ.

At night we spoke on the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. Brother Webb asked for subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN and twenty responded, and in a note since says he will have the list to thirty.

May the Lord pour His spirit on that devoted pastor and his noble flock, and may they have an immediate and great ingathering of souls.

Sacred Tableaux and Christmas Tree.

Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church Sabbath-school held their usual Christmas festival, on Friday evening last. The church was crowded with children, parents and friends. The exercises consisted of songs and sacred tableaux, and the distribution of presents from a well laden and beautifully lighted Christmas tree. All the tableaux were delightful, but that of the Queen of Sheba at the court of Solomon was really superb. Miss Jesse Hay personated the Queen in dress and manner that was splendid. "Clinging to the Cross," "The Ten Virgins," "The Sweet Bye and Bye," were very attractive, and reflected great credit upon the young people engaged in them. The report of the school for the year was very encouraging, in spite of all the drawbacks of the epidemic. None seemed more pleased than Bro. Wayne, pastor of the church, unless it was the children, when Santa Claus arrived in his sleigh with many greetings and gifts. We wish them many returns of so pleasant an occasion.

A theological institute is to be held at Clark University, Atlanta, Ga., beginning January 6th, and continuing two weeks. Distinguished ministers are to lecture from abroad, beside Drs. E. Q. Fuller and J. Mitchell, of that section.

President Hayes sent a communication to the Senate favoring steamship lines to South America.

OUR Southern Methodism.

KENTUCKY.

Rev. Scott Ward, Shelbyville: "We have been conducting a series of meetings at St. John's M. E. Church, Shelbyville, on the Louisville district, for six weeks. There have been accessions and conversions, and the meeting continues with unabated interest."

TEXAS.

Rev. M. Henson, Victoria: "We hold an educational mass meeting here to-morrow night, and will take up a collection for our school in Austin. The people are interested in the enterprise."

Rev. Andrew Noris, San Antonio: "I have arrived at my post and found every thing all right. Bro. Richardson, came over last Friday, and the quarterly conference commenced at four o'clock, and heard from him a very impressive address.

TENNESSEE.

Rev. L. Patton, Nolensville: "We have enjoyed a bountiful year. A Christmas tree and festival was prepared. Our church is doing good work, and we are at peace with each other.

Rev. E. Provine: "Fell a sleep in Jesus, in Alexandria, Tenn., the 24 of October, 1878, Mrs. Hattie Phillips, the wife of Rev. Anderson Phillips, of the Tennessee Conference. Sister Phillips joined the M. E. Church in 1868, and proved faithful to the end of her journey. She triumphed as she fell. Bros. Manson, Pickett and Green, her pastor, attended her funeral services. A large congregation followed her to her last resting place. She leaves two children and an affectionate husband to mourn their loss, but their loss is her gain."

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. G. W. Chaney, Fayette: "Our Sunday-school has increased, and we have from 127 to 150 pupils in attendance, with Bible, Testament and catechism classes."

Rev. Wm. McDonald, State Line: "My congregation has purchased a bell for the church. I have, since the last quarter, received 8 converts, 10 probationers. Four Sabbath schools are in good condition. Another church has been added to my circuit."

Rev. J. M. Nevils, Ripley: "When we came here we found this place unorganized, but thank God that He has been with us, and we are now organized, and have in this place 80 members, and 20 probationers. We have six appointments on this work."

Rev. C. Frierson, Louisville: "We have closed our protracted meeting, which resulted in 35 converts, 58 additions to the church, 30 baptized. The Sunday-schools are doing well. The Louisville circuit needs to be built up. I hope they will get a good man and one of power for the year 1879."

A new house of worship has been dedicated in Macon, under the pastoral care of Bro. Mosley. Notwithstanding the hindrances of yellow fever, his congregation kept at work on the new church building. It is 32x48, and a frame structure. The Church Extension Society gave $50 in its aid, which was gratefully received. Rev I. Mosley was assisted by Rev. John Evanil.

Charles Patterson, Goodman: "We have been engaged this year in building a church. We have succeeded, and our church, 30x40, is dedicated and in use, and has been for some time. The church and lot is worth $700 or $800. Our membership is very weak at this point, about 30. The whites of the place aided us in the building of our church, and we only had the aid of $75 from the Church Extension Society. The work on the church was done principally by Bro. Walden, he being a workman and a preacher too. I think the Conference did us a great kindness when they sent us Bro. Walden. We think if he had not been sent here we would be without the church. He gave us his labor, but we are going to try to compensate him."

LOUISIANA.

R. Anderson, Evergreen circuit, Nov. 18: "Since the great distress of disease has passed among our people a great revival of religion has taken place. We have just closed an eight days protracted meeting, and are blessed with nine converts and seventeen accessions to the church."

S. P. Bell, Cypremort: "Sister Freeman was born in Kentucky, August 17, 1798, and died October 17, 1878. She was a faithful member of the Baptist church for full forty years and died in the triumph of faith. She left to mourn her departure four children, three sons and one daughter. Her funeral was attended by Revs. James Hayward, H. A. Lewin, R. L. Beal and a large concourse of friends. Our Sunday-school is prospering: numbers 115, and is increasing every Sunday. Several of the young men speak of entering the New Orleans University this winter. Our Sunday-school treasury flourishes. We have now on hand, in cash, something over fifty dollars, with which we propose to purchase a good supply of books soon."

Murfreesboro Conference.

The Murfreesboro district conference will begin Jan. 9, 1879, at Stone River Chapel, Rutherford Co., Tennessee. The programme of exercises will be as follows:

Opening sermon, by Rev. O. Green.
An Educated Ministry—B. B. Munson.
An Essay on the Ressurrection of Christ.—A. Phillips.
The Old and New Covenant Reconciled.—Thomas Ward.
The Future of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South.—H. W. Key.
A Call to the Ministry.—P. Brooks.
Sabbath school Work connected with Church.—E Provine.
Sermon, Ecclesiastes xii, 1.—W. C. Miller.
Natural Attributes of God.—G. W. Hause.
Christian Perfection.—B. James.
Immortality of the Soul.—F. Summerhill.
Family Worship—Wesley Lillard.
The Fall of Man.—C. Burlington.
How to take the Benevolent Collections.—C. Seward.

Superintendents of Sabbath-schools will select their own subjects on Sabbath-school work. The pastors will please notify district stewards to be present.

B. B. MUNSON, P. E.

Corner-Stone Laying.

The friends of Mount Zion Church assembled on an elevated plain, overlooking the city of Brenham, Texas, on November 28th, to lay the corner-stone of a new building which they intend to erect for the worship of God.

The presiding elder, V. M. Cole, opened the proceedings in the usual form. Rev. S. Hardwell, Rev. O. Watrons, Rev. A. J. Neely, and Rev. Edward Lee, who gave an address in his usual earnest manner, assisted. A collection of twenty-three dollars and fifty cents was taken on the ground.

The site is the prettiest on the west side of the city, and though friends are few, we are looking to the Lord for the fulfillment of His promise to help those who ask His aid. The building is to be fifty-six feet long, and thirty-four wide, on a lot seventy-five feet long, and sixty-five feet wide, costing $125. Brethren, pray for our success.

S. HARDWELL, Pastor.

Central Tennessee Correspondence.

The preachers within the bounds of the Central Tennessee Conference have entered their fields with strong hopes of great success.

Sabbath, December 1st, a memorial service was held at the Sixth St. M. E. Church, Memphis. Rev. J. W. Reggister, presiding elder of Memphis district, preached the discourse to a full house. This church lost sixteen members by the yellow fever, and St. John's, 3 members.

Rev. B. J Tillar, the new pastor at St. John's, is earnestly at work, spending this week in revival efforts. He is assisted by Bros. Reggister and Williams.

The effects of the late epidemic are seen in Memphis. Every assembly is noted for the many persons dressed in mourning.

Rev. J. M. Carter expects to begin a protracted effort af Shelbyville during the week of prayer.

The City.

Police make frequent complaints of the failure of contractors to remove garbage.

A number of special agents have visited the Customhouse, and more are coming, it is reported.

Administrator Houston suffered the loss of his son, William F. Houston, aged four years, a bright and intelligent child, on Sunday last.

The synagogue of the Dispersed of Judah held a lodge of sorrow last Sunday in memory of the dead of the B'nai B'rith.

Louis Alexis, an unfortunate man who frequently became intoxicated, was lodged in the station by the police on Saturday night and was picked up dead on Sunday morning.

The congressional yellow fever commission, composed of Senators Eustis, Lamar and Paddock and Congressmen Gibson and Chalmers, met Monday morning at the St. Charles hotel.

Gens. John S. Barnard, John N. Macomb, Zealous B. Tower, H. G. Wright and Col. Wm. E. Merrill, a commission of U. S. engineers to examine the jetties, arrived on Sunday.

At the Seamen's Bethel, one evening last week, a Christmas entertainment was given for the benefit of sailors in port. Rev. Dr. Witherspoon was instrumental in getting it up, but unfortunately was prevented by illness from being present.

Judge J. B. Robertson, while attempting to jump from a Morgan train while in motion, at Bayou des Allemands station, lost his hold and fell under the wheels of one of the cars. One of his legs was badly crushed. He was brought to his residence in this city, and amputation near the thigh was found necessary. He expired on the fourth day afterward, and was buried Sunday last.

General News Items.

The Denison (Texas) Herald says: "Rev. M. A. Daugherty was appointed by the bishop at the Austin Conference, presiding elder of the San Antonio district and pastor at San Antonio. A very important and difficult work is committed to him. His district embraces Southwest Texas, with San Antonio as headquarters, the Rio Grande on the west and the gulf on the south as its limits, a territory out of which two or three great States could be made, and in which ten millions of people will live when Texas is as well settled as New York."

Lost Friends.

NOTE.—We receive many letters asking for information about lost friends. All such letters will be published in this column. We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notices. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN:—I wish to inquire through your paper for father and mother. My father's name was Walter, my mother's was Sarah. I have a brother and sister. My name is James Fuller. Our fathers were different. We belonged to Samuel Cobes; on his death we were sold to Mr. Frank Payne. Mr. Thomas Nicholls bought my brother James, though we lived together at the same place in Clark county, Alabama, near the Oven Bluff and the new salt works. Brother James belonged to a church, George Bush being the pastor. I go by the name of my last owner.

Jan. 5, 1879.—THE SECOND TEMPLE.

SCRIPTURE.—Ezra 3: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid."—11.

TOPIC.—Joy in Service and in Sacrifice.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

The Connection.—The facts that we need to group together in order to a perfect understanding of the present lesson are to be found in the preceeding chapters of Ezra. They concern the return of the people of Judah to their native land. That occurred in the year 536 B. C. It will be noticed that they came back for a specific purpose. They did not come back with the intent simply of returning to their native land. The re-establishing of the nation was not the object which they had in view; for they were subjects of the Persian Empire, no matter whether they resided on one side of the Euphrates or on the other It was not love of country, but love of the house of God, which brought them back. Cyrus issued his edict, saying that the Lord had charged him to build him a house at Jerusalem. By the terms of the proclamation no one was compelled to go up to Judah who did not desire so to do. Those who preferred to remain where they were born, were permitted to do so, but were enjoined to help their departing brethren with silver and gold, and with goods, and with beasts, and with a freewill offering for the rebuilding of the temple. He himself set a generous example in bringing forth the vessels taken from the temple by Nebuchadnezzar, and [illegible] them to the care of the people from whom they had been pillaged. Besides this, he con[illegible] a royal grant the permission which he had given them to build the temple, and incorporated into that firman the order that the expenses should be borne out of his own treasury. 6: 3, 4.

In the second chapter is given the genealogical record of those who took advantage of this permission to go and build their ancient house of worship. In all there were 42,360 persons, with 7,337 slaves, 736 horses, 435 camels, 6,720 asses.

Nehemiah gives the same genealogical record, but, doubtless, owing to clerical errors, there are slight differences in some of the items.

We see that the people are no longer classified by tribes, but by families. The captivity seems to have had the effect to obliterate the tribal idea. [illegible]

[illegible]

The two leaders in the work of restoration were Zerubbabel, the governor, and Jeshua, the high priest. Jeshua, with his brethren, the priests, and Zerubbabel, with his brethren, the men of Israel, "set the altar upon his bases." That is, they put it upon the very spot where it had been before.

The Offerings Renewed (4: 6).—After seventy years, once more the smoke of the morning and evening sacrifices ascended up towards heaven. By that act heaven and earth were once again prought near together. The sinner no longer was deprived of a means of approach to the deity whose laws he had transgressed. The upright had opportunity to express in sacrifices their gratitude and their devotion to the Lord who had brought them through their trials and restored them to the lond of promise. The smoke of the sacrifice began in the seventh month—a month which was peculiarly a festival month. In that occurred the feast of trumpets, the day of atonement, and the feast of tabernacles.

After the feast of tabernacles was over, they provided for the observance of all the other feasts and sacrifices in their regular order. From the first day of the seventh month until the fifteenth they offered up the daily burnt offerings in the morning and in the evening. From the 15th to the 22nd those sacrifices were offered which were peculiar to the feast. After this the daily offerings were resumed, and, at the times designated for their observance, they faithfully kept the directions for the offerings of the new moons and "all the set feasts of the Lord." This was done before the laying of the foundation of the temple. The altar, therefore, was the central thought. It was more necessary to have an altar than to have a temple. There is no need to wait for the building of a costly church before a community can worship God. If the altar is erected, the temple will follow in due time.

The Materials Gathered (7).—When the temple is in the heart, it does not need a guaranty that it will be erected. With the altar rebuilt, the need of a temple daily would become more and more apparent. Its exposed position would call for a sacred enclosure, and the benison of the shadow of the house of God. The sacrifices upon the altar reminded them of the closer communion with God which took place in the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies. So they immediately began to get together the materials for the purposed building. The masons and the carpenters were paid in cash for their work out of the funds which had been collected, but the people of Tyre and Sidon were paid for their cedar trees in grain and in wine and oil, in the same way that Solomon had dealt with them in the building of the first temple. The cedar trees were brought by way of Joppa. And all this was done in accordance with the grant of Cyrus, king of Persia. The carpenters and the masons had a design to work after which he had furnished. They were but carrying out his plans. He had said of the Lord: "He hath charged me to build him a house at Jerusalem which is in Judah.

The Foundation Laid (8-14).—That was laid in the second year, and the second month—a portion of the year which is nearly the same with our May. Zerubbabel and Jeshua were still the leaders in the work. They called a meeting of their brethren—the remaining men of Israel and the remaining priests—and the gathering appointed the Levites of twenty years old and upwards to oversee the work of building. Two things about this are noticeable. Every one seeming to have a voice in the matter. All went by the name of "brethren."

There were three classes of priests who were appointed to have the oversight the erection of the temple. These were Jeshua, with his son and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, and the sons of Henadad.

The laying of the foundation was celebrated in a memorable sort of a way. The priests were once more arrayed in their rich vestures, and, as of old, sounded the trumpets, while the sons of Asaph clashed the cymbals as directed in the time of David. They sang together "by course" or "responsively. Part of the song being, "O, give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good," and [illegible] seen the ancient temple. That was destroyed in B. C. 588, and as this was in B. C. 534, it was not needful that the "ancient men" should have been beyond three score years and ten to have had a clear recollection of the former temple. It appears that there were "many" of the priests and the Levities and the chief of the fathers who had beheld the first temple, and who had outlived the captivity. When the foundation of this temple was laid before their eyes, these men "wept with a loud voice." It was the contrast between the new and the old which touched their hearts.

But to the multitude this was an occasion of unmixed joy. The noise of shouting so mingled with the noise of weeping that those at a distance could not distinguish one from the other. It all seemed to be a shout of joy. The weeping and the shouting both indicated how large a place God occupied in the hearts of the people. And, if it had been but rightly looked at, there was nothing over which to weep. For, though the new temple was not to be so glorious as the other in outward appearance, yet it was to have the presence of God within it. And that was far better than to have a house, like the ancient temple in its late days, whose glory had been driven away by the presence of polluting idols. It was in answer to the sorrow exhibited by the ancient men that Haggai spoke his words of prophetic cheer. For he said to those who mourned over the disparity between the old and the new: "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of host; and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts." Hag. 2: 1-9.

New Publications

The Guide to Holiness begins its thirtieth volume with the Janurav number. W. C. Palmer, publisher, 43 Bible House, New York.

The Botanical Index, of L. B. Case, Richmond, Indiana is a quarterly magazine and catalogue, Price 25c per year. The January number is attractive.

Vicks Floral Guide is at hand, No. 1 for 1879. It is a handsome publication, issued by the seedsman and nurseryman James Vick, Rochester, N. Y. It is worth many times its price.

Golden Hours, for January is a delightful publication to place in the hands of children. Engravings and stories are happily selected. Terms $1.60 per year, single copies 15 cents. Nelson & Phillips, New York.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Review, for December, has articles on "Contemporary Literature," "The Fruit and Vintage of Herefordshire," "The Progress of Naval Architecture," "The College by the River," and "The Berlin Settlement." Its contents are of that character which renders the number acceptable to close readers of literature. The reprint of the Leonard Scott Publishing Co, is found at the newstands at 25c per copy, or may be had of the publishers at $4 per annum.

A seasonable and interesting account of "Afghanistan," with illustrations, begins in the January number of the National Repository. It is written by the editor, and is alone worth the price of the entire volume. Nor less valuable for its historical interest and its sixteen illustrative pictures is "Old Colonial Days," by Prof. J. H. Worman. Rev. J. T. Gracey writes of "Incongruities and Absurdities" in an amusing article; while Mrs. Dickinson continues her admirable story, "Among the Thorns." An appreciative and kindly notice of "Rev. Charles Hodge, D. D.," by Prof. Henry A. Buttz, will be welcomed even by those whose theological tenets differ from those of Princeton. Two or three shorter articles and poems, with the "Editorial Miscellany," fill the number. Our readers who want a good magazine, filled with literature of a sterling character, will do well to subscribe for the National Repository. Price, only $3.00 a year. Address, Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, O.

Petersons' Counterfeit Detector gives the earliest possible, as well as fullest and most accurate descriptions of counterfeit notes and coins placed in circulation by passers of spurious money. It is a publication that is taken, preserved, and daily consulted by brnkers, brokers, hotelkeepers, manufacturers, merchants, and storekeepers. The Detector is, as is well known, an infallible safeguard against loss from counterfeit money, of which there are enormous quantities now in circulation. All bogus bills and coins are immediately described in the Detector as soon as they make their appearance. In its pages are also given valuable news concerning money, stocks, bonds, national and State banks, and other information of great value to business men, etc., and is, in short, a very valuable publication, and no business man in the country should be without it. The rate of subscription for the Monthly issue is on y $1 50 a year; Semi-monthly, $3 00 a year. Address all communications to the publishers, T. B. Peterson & Bros. No 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Penn. Petersons' Coin Book, containing [illegible] fac simile impressions of the Coins of the World, will be sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of $1.

There are estimated to be twenty-three millions of Methodists in the world.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in his lecture on "The wastes and burdens of society," claims "man's natural life to be 80 years, and as the average life is but 33 years, there must be a waste of 47 years." There is much of truth in this statement. If a man be unfortunate in business, it is attributed to the violation of some commercial law. Now, if a person be taken off in the prime of life, ought it not be attributed to the violation of some pysiological law? If people only knew better, they would live better and longer; but how can they profit by that which they know not of? The only popular work that meets this great want is Dr. Price's Common Sense Medical Adviser. In it the great problems of disease and health are fully discussed. The work contains over 900 pages and 250 colored plates and wood-cuts. Price, $1.50 (post-paid). Address the author, R. V. Price, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

A GOOD ACCOUNT.—"To SUM it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters, taken by my wife, who has done he own housework for a year since without the loss of a day and I want everybody to know it for their benefit.

The Quickest Time East.

The Great Jackson Route is now making the quickest time to New York ever known, leaving New Orleans daily at 5:45 p. m., and arriving at New York at 6:35 a. m. Allowing for the difference in time between the two cities, the run is made in the unprecedented time of fifty-nine and three-quarter hours. This quick time is made only by the Great Jackson Route, and is the result of its enterprise in rebuilding its track with steel rails and new ties, at heavy expense, and the thorough system of ballasting that has been undertaken. This fast train will be of great advantage to the people of this city, which it is hoped they will show their appreciation of by their patronage. Only one change of cars, which is made at Columbus, O., where breakfast is taken in the splendid dining hall at that place at 8 a. m.

This route also makes the quickest time to Boston, arriving at 2:40 p. m. Actual running time, sixty-seven and one-half hours. This the most desirable route for all New England points. The time to all intermediate points is correspondingly less, thus making this the quickest and best route to all the Northern and Eastern cities.

Excursion tickets to Waukesha, Oconomowoc and all the Northwestern summer resorts, to Niagra Falls, Put-in-Bay, etc., are on sale at the lowest rates with the quickest time made by any line, and only one change of cars.

The Methodist Hymnal,

AND

Hymnal with Tunes.

We are now prepared to fill orders for the following editions of the "METHODIST HYMNAL:"

Pearl, Plain	$0 40
Pearl, Red Edge	0 50
24mo, Plain	0 50
24mo, Red Edge	0 65
24mo, Roan, Embossed	0 75

16mo, Roan Gilt Edge	1 40
*Hymnal with Tunes, 12mo	1 00
Hymnal with Tunes, 8vo	1 75

Since the manuscript of the Hymnal was delivered by the Committee, October 26th, last, time has been required to prepare and perfect the indexes, to complete the arrangements of the Hymns and Tunes, and to adjust all to a system of uniform numbering. Time has also been consumed in the transmission of proofs to and from the members of the Committee, but there has been no unnecessary delay. In view of these facts, and the amount of work involved in issuing so many editions in good style, we think that it has been completed at the earliest moment practicable.

The new book contains a great variety of the best spiritual songs, adapting it both to public and social worship. It should be used in social meetings and Sunday-schools, and thus be the means of familiarizing our children with the living hymns of the church. The cheaper editions will cost little more than the ordinary Sunday-school song books that last but a season. The Hymnal with Tunes is a rich and varied treasury of sacred music, and the 12mo edition is the cheapest complete Hymn and Tune Book in the land.

We ask all pastors to aid in the general and immediate introduction of the Hymnal, and Hymnal with Tunes. Let it be the occasion of an effort to intensify the true spirit of worship where it flourishes, and to revive it where it languishes, that the Methodist Episcopal Church may soon become, as aforetime, mighty in song.

COURSE OF STUDY FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 89, §5 of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

I. Let candidates for license to preach be examined in the common branches of an English education, and on their general acquaintance with the Bible and the doctrines and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

II. FIRST YEAR. The Bible—History. Binney's Theological Compend. Steele's Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.
TO BE READ. Scripture History—Old Testament. Smith's. Watson's Life of Wesley. A Hundred Years of Methodism.—Simpson.

III. SECOND YEAR.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Merrill.
TO BE READ.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the United States.—Ridpath. Ruter's Church History—1 vol., 8 vo.

IV. THIRD YEAR.—The Bible—Sacraments. Wakefield's Theology—Last Four Books. Christian Perfection—Wesley's Plain Account.
TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons.—Vol. 1. Introduction to the Gospel Records.—Nast. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation—In one vol., 8 vo.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.
TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Our Class Leaders.

We are often asked for the names of books suitable for class leaders. We recommend the following and ask the Presiding Elders and Pastors to do all they can to put these books in the hands of the leaders.

1. The Class-Leader: His Work, and How to do it. With illustrations of principles, needs, methods and results. By Rev. John Atkinson, A. M. 12mo., $1.50.

2. Address to Class-Leaders. By Bishop Janes. 12mo., 20c.

3. Seed-Thought; A Hand-Book of Doctrine and Devotion. By Rev. Geo. C. Robinson. Price $1.00.

4. Father Reeves, Methodist Class-Leader. By Edward Corderoy. 18mo., 35c.

5. All for Christ: How the Christian may Obtain, by a renewed Consecration of His Heart, the fullness of Joy Referred to by the Savior just Previous to His Crucifixion, with illustrations from the lives of those who have make this consecration. By Thomas Carter, D.D. 16mo., 75c.

For any of these books address Nelson & Phillips, New Orleans.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADNOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.

2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

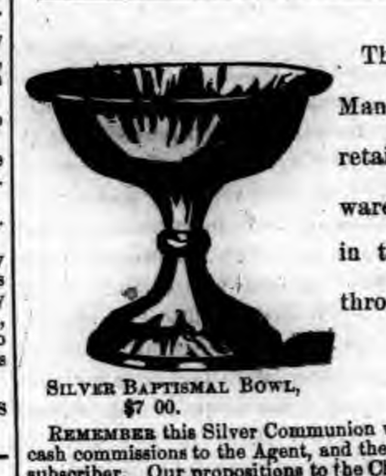
We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:

SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 14 00

SILVER PLATE.
10 inches wide, $4 00



SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL,
$7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country

SILVER GOBLET.
1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.

2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.

3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total 18 50.

4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.

5. To any Church sending up Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

☞NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us, This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceeding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregation where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

☞Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.

2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.

3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission; the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.

4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,
Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo. $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

Cheap Organs.

We will sell a $200 Estey Organ for $100 cash, and a $275 Beatty organ for $90, cash.

These organs are entirely new and will be sent directly from the factories. This is a rare chance for a church or Sunday-school to get a first-class instrument very cheap.

CAN YOU?

Can you make a rose or a lily—just one?
Or catch a beam of the golden sun?
Can you count the rain-drops as they fall?
Or the leaves that flutter from tree-tops tall?
Can you run like the brook and never tire?
Can you climb like the vine beyond the spire?
Can you fly like a bird, or weave a nest?
Or make but one feather on robin's breast?

Can you build a cell like the bee, or spin
Like the spider, a web so fine and thin?
Can you lift a shadow from off the ground?
Can you see the wind, or measure a sound?
Can you blow a bubble that will not burst?
Can you talk with echo and not speak first?

Oh, my dear little boy! you are clever and strong,
And you are so busy the whole day long,
Trying as hard as little boy can
To do big things like a "grown-up" man!
Look at me, darling! I tell you true,
There are some things you never can do.

The sacredness of the ballot is indispensable to the safety of a republic. When mobs and rifle-clubs take the place of majorities of the citizens, the existence of the nation is impaired. Such brute force must be reduced to reason and right, or it will trample these principles in the dust. The boast that cities and States are carried by fraud and violence, augurs ill for the peace and prosperity of a great people. The question of a free ballot is supreme. It rises above material interests; it is more important than the ordinary issues of parties. No party can afford to insure its ends by such means; no patriot can hesitate to denounce such tactics by whomsover employed. To innaugurate the rule of violence is to defeat the purposes of all legitimate and trustworthy parties. A sold South, secured by these methods, is a menace to the nation. To allow such immorality to succeed is to abandon the ship of State to the pirates who have boarded her. The same patriotism that planted the Republic, and redeemed it from the curse of slavery, will not fail to rise so far above party as to insure the rights of the humblest citizen.—Zion's Herald.

Two Illinois deacons turned some calves loose in the same pasture. Two of the calves happened to be so much alike that no man could tell one from the other. One of these two disappeared. Each deacon thought the remaining calf his own. At last one of them sold the calf, and the other one insisted that it was his calf, and that the proceeds should be paid to him. There was a stormy dispute between these two deacons, and each threatened to go to law against the other. After letting the breeze blow for awhile, they concluded to refer the matter to the minister, with power to make a satisfactory settlement. The minister advised them to put the $16 which the calf had sold for into the missionary treasury, and assured them if they had any doubt in their minds as to which of them it was who was giving the money, the Lord knew all about it, and he would settle it justly and equitably. The Board of Missions got the $16 and entered it "calf money." The deacons were happy over it, and the minister was pleased to have been the means of settling what might have ripened into a congregational squabble and split the church in pieces.

The Inter-Ocean says: "Last year 138,459 immigrants arrived in the United States. Germany sent the most, 29313; Canada came next with 19,129; England sent 19,405; Ireland, 16,982; China, 8,992; Sweden, 5,390; Norway, 4,759; Hungary, 4,504; France, 4,159; Italy, 4,131; Scotland, 3,502; far-off Iceland sent 108. Of the total, 1,510 were professional men and women. Of these 51 were actors; 80 were artists; 18 were authors; 319 were clergymen; 13 were editors; one gave his business as that of an inventor; one said he was a 'statesman;' 26 were lawyers; 81 were doctors; 396 were musicians. There were 16,532 skilled mechanics, 26,566 laborers; 14,842 were farmers; 39 auctioneers; 24 bankers; 35 bar-keepers; 26 said they were 'capitalists,' and had no business; one said he was a gentleman;" 70 were chimney sweeps; one was a magician, and there was 170 Sisters of Charity."

A Rhode Island legislator, who took the ground that it was no advantage to have the people understand the laws, said that they were not afraid of anything they understood; that it was the Latin words they were afraid of, and proceeded to illustrate his position as follows: "Mr. Speaker, there was a man in South Kingstown about twenty years ago who was a perfect nuisance, and nobody knew how to get rid of him. One day he was hoeing corn, and he saw the sheriff coming with a paper and asked what it was. Now, if he had told him it was a writ, what would he have cared? But he told him in Latin a capias satisfaciendum, and the man dropped his hoe and ran, and has not been heard of since."—[illegible] taxes are very light. During the year, while every other State in the Union has suffered from financial depression and decrease in the value of property, in Maine the value of property has been steadily on the increase; drunkennes is almost unknown in parts of the State; the attendance at school is larger in proportion to the population than in any other State. What is the cause? Simply a prohibitory law, backed by public sentiment."

If you aspire to be a son of consolation; if you would partake of the priestly gift of sympathy; if you would pour something beyond commonplace consolation into a tempted heart; if you would pass through the intercourse of daily life with the delicate tact which never inflicts pain; if to that most acute of human ailments, mental doubt, you are ever to give effectual succor, you must be content to pay the price of the costly education. Like Christ, you must suffer—being tempted.

A blind man has been elected to serve in the Legislature of Indiana; and the incident is spoken of as being of an exceptional character, when every one knows that scores of blind men are elected, annually or biennially, to all our Legislatures, from that of Delaware to that of the nation, commonly called Congress—men as blind as ignorance, passion, selfishness, credulity, egotism, and so forth, can make them.

The late Bishop Janes, ten years ago, sent a Japanese youth to the Methodist school at Wilbraham, Mass., with a note of introduction, in which he said: "If no one undertakes to pay his bill I will be responsible." The young man afterwards returned to Japan, and is now the minister from that country to the United States, and attends the Foundry church at Washington.

The Bible is the pure flame of truth. It shines with a white light that reveals man's secrets to himself. What countless torches of thought and devotion have been lighted at this central fire, and scattered through the darkness of the world! And this fire shall never be put out, though heaven and earth pass away, and the sun itself burn out in its golden socket.—Evangelical Messenger.

We will not be likely to pray too much. God never tires of hearing us if our petitions are nonest and earnest, and as for ourselves we cannot exaggerate our exdressions of want or gratitude. We explain away the meaning of Paul's direction to pray always, and do it probably to excuse our own neglect. Time spent in legitimate praying is never lost time.

ANTI-FAT

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week. In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen:—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN'S drug-store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from 192 pounds to 192 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, SMITH, DOOLITTLE & SMITH, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks, and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N. Y., write: "TO THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen,—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp.

WOMAN

By an immense practice at the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, having treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman, I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and positive remedy for these diseases.

To designate this natural specific, I have named it

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon personal observation. I have, while witnessing its positive results in the special diseases incident to the organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. On its merits, as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. (For conditions, see pamphlet wrapping bottle.)

The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhœa, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing-down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, and Female Weakness. I do not extol this medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.

Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, a book of over 900 pages, sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.

Favorite Prescription sold by Druggists.

GRATIAS AGIMUS.

A Psalm of the People of 1878.

[illegible]

Beneath the smiles of heaven a fair land lay
In the bloom and promise of early May.

[illegible]

And the cotton fields all their wealth unfold,
And the precious juice from the cane is press'd
O thee the Frosty Knight of the Sparkling Crest
A crystalline carpet o'er earth he spreads,
He breathes the air which the monster dreads,
He drives out the poison from wold and waste,
And the dreaded fever departs in haste.
A thousand welcomes, O Frosty Knight!
With thy cooling breath and thy helmet bright.

XIII.

Now, Spirit of Thankfulness, arise
To the Ruler of earth and sea and skies—
To the Power Supreme that the low can raise,
And the wrath of His creatures turn to praise,
He gives to the generous impulse birth,
Turns the miser's dole to a deal of worth,
Crowns the ministry of disease and pain
With a moral good—an eternal gain.
To Him let our highest thanks ascend—
The orphans' Father! the widows' Friend!

XIV.

And, through the Ruler, our thanks are due
To the open-handed, the good, the true,
Who stirred by the warmth of a love divine
Gave help to our needy, and oil and wine—
A Benjamin's portion with generous trust
That relief might follow where pity must.
But not to our own broad land alone
Our thanks are tendered for kindness shown—
For fruits of mercy came fair and free
From our worthy kindred beyond the sea.

XV.

Now let our people in gladness raise
This grateful incense of song and praise.
While crushed with sickness and blinding grief
The world [illegible] to afford relief;
Party and sectional [illegible] seal,
Gave way to such thoughts as the godlike feel.
A nobler Union arose to bless,
All those who felt and relieved distress,
Affirming forever that Union be
The proof of a high Humanity!

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

The Texas Conference Session.

The Texas Conference held its last annual meeting at Bryan, beginning on the 15th inst. We arrived at the Conference just at the close of the first session. We found Bryan to be a very pretty place, beautifully situated in a rich tract of country. The town shows marks of thrift and general prosperity. Our people at that place, with Edward Lea as their pastor, also show themselves to be up to the times. They have done much in the past year to improve their property, and are rewarded by having a very pleasant place of worship, neatly finished and furnished. The Conference, though partaking of stern business features, was altogether enjoyable and encouraging. By the reports, we have evidence that the Church to which we belong, here as elsewhere, is progressive as well as aggressive. The benevolent collections were considerably in advance of those of last year, and there seems to be an improvement in nearly every respect. Some of the unruly and careless members have been laid aside, and altogether we can safely look for still better work the coming year. A good interest is taken in the work of education; not so much as we think the subject demands in the present condition of our work, but enough to give hope and courage to those laboring in this special field. At the suggestion of W. L. Molloy, each preacher was asked, on call of the roll, to pledge to raise something for new buildings at Wiley University. About four hundred dollars was pledged by the preachers of the Conference. This, though not a large sum, looks favorable, and shows an interest in this work, and where there is a good will there is always a way to do the right thing. [illegible] knows the difficulties connected with the work of the Texas Conference, without sharing in its [illegible] as much as the preachers [illegible] they had it [illegible] yet an active, live Methodist preacher can hardly fail to do something for the educational work as well as the other departments of church enterprise. [illegible] ADVOCATE was represented by the editor, and general interest manifested therefor. There is a promise of a large increase of circulation of our Church paper in this Conference. Throughout the session the Conference was harmonious and pleasant, and we turn our faces homeward as anxious to [illegible] as we were to meet at the [illegible] Conference.

W. H. DAVIS.

Marshall, Texas, Dec. 26th, 1878.

The [illegible] the [illegible] congregation is [illegible]

Bishop Simpson on the Personal Habits of Ministers.

Your first duty is to get such a conception of Christ, in all his glorious offices, as will enable you to present him vividly before the people. You must study the record of every utterance which he made and every act which he performed. You must enter into the spirit of his compassion, his condescension, his diligence, and his love. To do this fully, you will need the light of prophecy concentrated upon him, and a view of the circumstances of the people among whom he dwelt. You must study not only the history of Christ, the lessons taught, and the works performed, but you must study him personally, until you have taken into yourselves the impress of his character, the stamp of his own image. You must then translate all these into the circumstances of to-day. In your associations you will think, What would Christ have said? what would have been his spirit? Amid opposition you encounter, How would Christ have borne it? Amid work to be done, How would Christ have performed it? and so, in all your intermingling in society, you are to manifest the spirit of Christ. To manifest it successfully, you must have it; you must realize the full meaning of those words, "Christ in you, the hope of glory." With this image of Christ in your mind and his Spirit in your heart, you will survey the work to be accomplished, bearing in mind that neither argument nor oratory of your own can save the people; and yet that the best powers of those which you can possibly gain may be wielded by the Holy Spirit for the salvation of men. Your one work must be to hold up Christ before the people, and present him, as you see him, and realize his power, that the people shall see him through your life as well as through your representation. People judge not so much of truth in its abstract as in its embodied form. You may speak of the meekness and love of Christ, but you stand in Christ's stead before their eyes. They look for that meekness and love in you, and you dishonor your Master when you exhibit a spirit which differs from his. You must realize with the apostle, "For me to live is Christ." Your life must be hid in him so that you shall indeed be "as Christ" to the people. Thus "lifted up," he draws "all men unto" him.

Paul said to Timothy, "Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in character, in spirit, in faith, in purity." You stand before your congregation to show them how a Christian should live, how he should converse, how he should mingle in society, how gentle, patient, and loving he should be. If the fugleman, who stands before the undrilled soldiers to show them by his example what the word of command means, commits an error, his example is copied and the drill is imperfect. So are you to stand as fuglemen before your Churches. If your spirit is wrong theirs will be also.

That you may gain this high condition, daily reading of the holy Scriptures is essential. The soul needs them more than the body needs food. Jesus says: "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life." Your object in thus reading should be not to gain matter for sermons, nor for the proof of favorite doctrines, nor for the purposes of controversy, but to sustain your spiritual strength. You should discipline yourself to read personally, not professionally. In his reading, the young minister is too liable to apply passages to those around him, and thus he fails to realize spiritual profit to himself. He is like the maiden lady, described by the humorist, that always cast glances on those around her when she joined in the response: "Have mercy upon us miserable sinners!"

So, also is it essential to be a man of prayer. While the minister prays for his people, he must pray especially for himself. He must indeed, bear upon his bosom, as did the old high priest, the names or remembrance of his people. But, first of all, he must bring his own sacrifice to the altar. Successful ministers have always been men of prayer. You have read how Livingstone and Calamy spent whole nights in prayer before their wonderful sermons. So, also, did Fletcher, of Madeley. In this they copied the great Master. See Luther wrestling on the floor all night in agony of prayer at the Diet of Worms, and you will not be surprised at his triumphant answer next day, nor at his subsequent decloration: "Bene orasse est bene studuisse."

Another element of success is faith, personal faith in the atoning merits of Christ— our sacrifice, and our only mediator. Through it we enjoy the consciousness of the forgiveness of sins, and the assurance of our acceptance with God. We also need that faith which accepts the Bible as God's word; that believes implicity all his precepts, and all his promises; that feels perfectly satisfied that God's word will have its corresponding fruit, and that Christ's presence every where, and at all times, accompanies his minister, so that in the pulpit and at the bedside of the sick there is the assurance af an accompanying Savior.

In the ministerial deportment the utmost care must be used. Conversation should be genial and pleasant, and at the same time pure and instructive. Neatness should be cultivated without affectation, and cheerfulness without levity. We must beware of thinking ourselves better than others because we have different work to do, or of in any way separating ourselves from the society around us. We are ministers, and yet servants. Christ identified himself with the common people. They "heard him gladly," and felt that he symathized with their sorrows. Even the poor outcasts approached him tremblingly, and yet with hope. In the pulpit and everywhere we must manifest the spirit of the blessed Master, and be ready to extend a helping hand to the distressed.

To accomplish the most for humanity, you must carefully guard your own health and strength. No definite rules can be given to suit all circumstances. You must carefully watch the effect of your food, and eat chiefly what is plain and simple. You will have kind friends who will invite you to their hospitable homes and to their bountiful tables; they will urge you to partake freely, but let them not "kill you with kindness." Remember that the wise man says: "When thou sittest to eat with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee: and put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite. Be not desirous of his dainties; for they are deceitful meat." In addition to simple diet, let me caution you against late suppers. Mr. Wesley believed they produced nervous diseases, and strongly cautioned his young preachers against both meat suppers and late suppers. My own observations have led me to the same opinion. Early in my ministry it was the common practice of those who preached at night to eat very little supper, frequently none at all, before preaching, and to eat a regular supper, or partake of refreshments, at nine or ten o'clock at night. I adopted a different course: ate at the regular hour, though sparingly, before preaching, and resolutely refused all food, except sometimes a cracker, after preaching. Nearly all of those who indulged suffered in the end, while my health improved. As there is no one law, however which will suit all constitutions and temperaments, each must be a law to himself. If his meals make him heavy and unfit for study, let him guard against repetition; if, on the other hand, he has a feeling of buoyancy, and can study clearly and profitably, he has partaken well.

And in food, so in sleep. The same law will not suit all persons. As a rule, from six to eight hours are sufficient. Some are able to do with much less, John Owen, in his university life, slept but four hours, and Lord Brougham about the same. Napoleon allowed himself five hours. Mr. Wesley about six, or from six to seven. Each must determine for himself, guarding against unnecessary waste of time. When a student, I required seven hours. My custom was to retire at nine, and rise at four. But every few days I found myself oversleeping my time some five or ten minutes, or more. I became fully satisfied that I required full seven hours, and that whatever moments I lost before I dropped to sleep, or if I chanced to wake in the night, must in some way be made up. I had a fellow-student older than myself preparing for the ministry among the Covenanters, who scarcely ever retired before eleven, and was at his studies again between two and three in the morning. He was diligent and faithful; but it seemed to me that he never got wide-awake all day. The hours of rising will also vary. I was brought up in the old-fashioned way of rising early; but that, like many other old fashions, is at present considered by many as a relic of antiquity, if not of barbarism. I may be influenced by early associations, but my conviction is that the morning is the favorable time for study. An old proverb reads: "The morning hour has gold in its mouth." Protracted study at night I believe to be unfavorable to health. A slight fever of excitement rises in the system from the labors and anxieties of the day. The pulse becomes a little faster and fuller. Under this excitement the brain may act more rapidly and one may compose for a time with more ease; but it makes a draft on the system, and sooner or later will produce nervons prostration and severe disease.

For and Against Temperance Legislation.

The East Texas Synod of the Presbyterian Church, at its late session, spoke out these splendid words on the question of good temperance legislation in Texas:

"Whereas, in the opinion of this Synod the laws of the State authorizing the making and sale of intoxicating liquors of every kind are productive of great evil to the country at large, and of very little good, therefore be it Resolved, That this Synod join in the other Judiciatories of our own Church, and those of any other denomination, in a general petition to the Legislature of the State, to repeal all such laws, and to enact a law making all persons selling or giving away intoxicating drinks of any kind, bound to pay all damages arising through the gift or sale of said liquors; and it shall be the duty of the clerk of this Synod to send a transcript of this paper to the Vidette, at Terrell, Texas, and also to the Legislature at its next term."

The Temperance Vidette, of Terrell, Texas, from which we quote the above, says that the North Texas Conference of the Methodist Church, South, refused to petition the Legislature for a law similar to the Maine law, stating as a reason that the Church could not interfere in any political matter.

On this last matter, the Vidette comments thus:

"The Methodist Church is exceedingly squeamish on the subject of interfering with political matters. The fact of the business is that the Methodist Church has too many within her communion who are liquor-sellers, and some of them are too strong financially for the church to assume a position prejudicial to their interest."

Prayer Answered.

Two ladies resided in a large town, in which they ever busied themselves much among the poor and suffering. The long continued commercial depression had very much affected the means of these ladies, and also, in the depth of last winter, had aggravated the disease around them more than ever beyond their power to relieve. One day the younger lady came in especially downcast—"Oh! how I wish some one would send me a little money," she exclaimed, "it is so hard to be unable to help—, had we not better lay the whole matter before God in prayer?" The ladies knelt together. Within a day or so of this a friend called After a while she said a little money had been intrusted to her for distribation among the necessitous. Feeling sure that Miss —— would find ample use for some, she had brought her a guinea. A day or two passed again, when a note was brought in, saying that a kind friend had sent the writer a check for a sum of money to be used among the suffering poor. Knowing how many cases come under the notice of the lady, he inclosed to her several pounds. Another short interval, and a lady living at a distance drove up to the door, to leave, as she passed on to her work in the town, a basket for her friend, containing suitable stores of various kinds, accompanied also by a guinea. Unable herself to go about much, it had occurred to her to take these to one she well knew would make good use of them. This lady was then told of the longing for means to help, of the prayer offered, and how her coming was the third answer that had been received to that prayer in the course of a very few days.—May, in The Christian.

Portland Press (Rep.): The South itself has reopened the Southern question. If it wishes to close that question forever it must cease its efforts to destroy personal liberty, to disfranchise voters, to carry elections by terror and fraud.

The Promise Proved.

A poor traveler called upon a certain good man named Fenneberg, to borrow three dollars; this was the whole amount of money possessed by this modern Nathaniel; but as the poor traveler asked for it in the name of Jesus, he lent him all he had, even to the last penny.

Some time after, being in absolute want himself, he remembered the fact while at prayer, and with child-like faith and simplicity, he said: "O Lord, I have lent Thee three dollars, and Thou hast not given them back to me, though Thou knowest how urgently I need them; I pray Thee to return them to me." The very same day a letter arrived containing money, which Gossner delivered to the good man, with these words: "Here, sir, you receive what you advanced." The letter contained two hundred dollars, which were sent to him by a rich man, at the solicitation of the poor traveler to whom he had lent his all. Fenneberg, quite overcome with surprise, said in his child-like way: "Oh, dear Lord, one cannot say a single word to Thee, without being put to shame."—Life of Pastor Gossner.

Mr. Wesley and the Bull.

In the winter of 1763, during a very hard frost, Mr. Wesley visited Sheerness. His carriage could not cross the ferry, it being frozen over, and several friends went to meet him. When about half-way between the "half-way house" and Sheerness they saw a bull coming towards them, foaming at the mouth, and a number of men running after it, and calling to the party to get out of the way; but this was impossible, there being a wide moat on each side of the road. As the bull approached, Mr. Wesley saw their danger, immediately took off his hat, knelt down, and said, "Let us pray." The bull came up, made a dead stand, looking at Mr. Wesley for two or three minutes; it stood perfectly quiet, and seemed to be awed and restrained by a supernatural power. Mr. Wesley was at the head of the party and nearest to the bull, my grandfather and his son Thomas next. The men then came up, and the bull made a rush, passing by them without injuring any one. Mr. Wesley then gave out a hymn, in which all heartily joined.—Cor. Methodist Recorder.

The South Finding out its Mistake.

The South wants immigration from the best classes in the North. To secure it, all persons must be convinced that freemen can express and act upon their political opinions without ostracism, as at the North. We regret to confess that this condition has not yet seized the minds of the desirable classes the South needs. The Northern man who purchases a farm in a Southern community does not relish being classed as carpet-bagger because he may desire to take a hand in politics, as in his own home. He does not propose to come as an inferior, nor to be treated as one. For the wide-spread belief that he will incur popular displeasure for exercising the rights and privileges to which he has ever been accustomed, and which no true man will yield, the politicians and presses always so ready to excuse or deny instead of condemn crime, and always so ready to cast epithets and appeal to the sectional prejudice, are directly responsible. They have determined that the people of the two sections shall not understand each other.—Mem. (Tenn Avalanche (Dem.)

John Newton.

As John Newton, in his old age, read the expression, "By the grace of God, I am what I am," he paused for a moment, and then uttered this affecting soliloquy:

"I am not what I ought to be: ah! how imperfect and deficient—not what I wish to be. Soon I shall put off mortality, and with it all sin and imperfection! But though I am not what I ought to be, or what I wish to be, or what I hope to be, yet I can truly say I am not what I once was, the slave of sin and Satan; and with the apostle I can thankfully say, "By the grace to God, I am what I am!"

The Rev. Augustus Toplady, author of the favorite hymn, "Rock of Ages Cleft for Me," was Rector of Broadhembury, Devonshire, England. It is said that he often, instead of entiring to rest, would put on his surplice, go out doors, and thus attired walk for hours in the [n]ight singing hymns.

Good Reading.

A writer has truly said that the "prosperity of your church is to depend greatly upon the reading introduced into your homes. Your church is to be just what your family is. If your children are growing up giddy, wild, vain, gadding about the streets, loafing about the stores and hotels, or chasing after every 'entertainment,' the hope of your church is gone. Parents, if you don't have anything else in your home, you must have a table or stand in the center of your room, with a good light on it and a few good books and papers for your children." We do not mean such trash as the New York Ledger, and those kindred sheets, but we mean good substantial reading, calculated to instruct in morals, enlarge the intellect, and cultivate manners. Anything short of this is unfit and injurious to religious prosperity. There can be no apology made for neglecting this thing, but the most extreme poverty. All our church papers contain general intelligence and the best of reading, but are published on terms far below their real value, and are inferior to no other publications in true merit.

A Profitable Nose.

A bodily deformity, or a stump of a limb, has been a "fortune" to many a beggar—and even a fine young lady (if she has a taste for trading) can speculate with a scratched nose.

American girls will learn with interest that the value of a French girl's nose has just been judicially placed at a thousand dollars. Some time ago a Paris omnibus horse became frisky, there was a collision, a window was smashed, and a passenger, a young demoiselle, received some of the broken glass in her face. It was at first thought the hurts were trifling, and her parents declined the proffered service of the omnibus company's doctor. But the scratches did not heal as they were expected to, and the girl's father brought suit against the company, alleging that her nose had been permanently marred, and that this seriously diminished her prospect of establishment in life—in other words of getting a husband. He obtained two hundred dollars on the first trial and one thousand dollars on the second.

A Hard Task.

I know that it is dreadful work to be bound to preach when one is not concious of the aid of the Spirit of God. It is like, pouring water out of bottomless buckets, or feeding souls out of empty baskets. A true sermon such as God will bless, no man can preach of himself; he might as well try to sound the archangel's trumpet. We must have thee, O God, we must have Thy power, or every action we perform is but the movement of an automaton, and not the acceptable act of a living spiritual man.—Spurgeon.

Every object in nature is impressed with God's footsteps, and every day repeats the wonders of creation. There is not an object, be it pebble or pearl, weed or rose, the flower-spangled sward beneath, or the star-spangled sky above, not a worm or an angel, a drop of water or a boundless ocean, in which intelligence may not discern, and piety adore, the providence of him who took our nature that he might save our souls.—Guthrie

The highest honor that can be conferred on any man is that Jesus loved him. Yet this is an honor that all may possess, but which none can inherit without His spirit, and without loving Him. It is an honor which cannot be won by wealth or adorning of the body; by charms or accomplishments; by trappings or palaces or earthly learning or honors; but only by the possession of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.—Albert Barnes.

The teacher who feels it is a burden to teach will make it a burden to his class to hear him. If he loves his work and his class, his class will love him and his work. We want no unwilling carpenters at work around our dwelling. The gaping seams will prove them to have been unconscientious workmen.—S. S. Magazine.

THURSDAY, JAN. 9, 1879.

Do not fail to read again our circular for 1879 on the next page, and then tell your people and friends that we give a beautiful steel engraving of John Wesley to every subscriber, and silver communion ware to churches.

Papers on Trial.

Push the canvass, brethren, from every pulpit. Send on all the names you can get and we will send the papers a month on trial, and give that much time for the people to pay. At the end of the month we will stop all papers not paid for, and for which you will not be responsible. Show the people the engraving of John Wesley, and let them fully understand our offer to give it to every subscriber as soon as the paper is paid for.

Bishop Keener on our Southern German Work.

Bishop Keener, of the Methodist Church, South, in writing to the Advocate of his Church, in this city, has the following to say of our German work in Louisiana and Texas:

At nearly every appointment of ours in Texas and Louisiana, the Northern Methodist Missionary Society has planted a German church beside our German church. The community, probably large enough to support one church, is thus made to draw on the Missionary Society of both Methodisms for money enough to support two. This is folly only less than sin. It is the war feeling surviving the war, and, to the great delight of the devil, calling itself missionary enterprise. This is fraternity with a vengence. Let us have prayer and peace.

It is certainly to be regretted that Bishop Keener should have it in his heart to pen these words. In the first place they are false in statement, whether Bishop Keener knows it or not. Of the thirty-three appointments of our Southern German Conference in Texas, only eight are in the neighborhood of any appointments of the German Conference of the Methodist Church, South, and some of these are in large cities like Houston and Dallas, where there is abundant room and work for two. In New Orleans each church has three German churches, and no one will pretend to say that among the 50,000 German people of this city there is not enough for these churches to do. We know that our churches are steadily growing in numbers, character and spiritual power. If those of Bishop Keener's church are not prospering, the cause must be within those churches themselves.

This false statement implies a slander on the Methodist Episcopal Church. That implied slander is this—that the M. E. Church should make it her business to go anywhere and plant churches for the purpose of tearing down or hindering those of a sister church. Our church goes into every Southern State, just as she goes into Nebraska or Kansas, and offers her assistance and privileges to all the people, and wherever a company of people, be they German or English, of one race or another, wants to come within her fold, she welcomes them. She does among the Germans of Texas just what Bishop Keener's church is doing in several of the Northern States. His church has a conference in Illinois, one or two in California and others in other Northern States. Could not the Methodist Episcopal Church, with her great conference organizations all over the North, and her powerful and wealthy benevolent organizations, care for these few thousand Southern Methodists in the North better than does, or can, the Methodist Church, South, with her feeble benevolent societies? Every one will answer certainly, provided, those few Southern Methodists in the North were in the Methodist Episcopal Church. But they are not, and for the present, at least, have no thought of being. Herein lies the real question; shall the Methodist Church, South, be adjudged guilty of "folly only less than sin," because she opens her arms of churchly protection to receive, and gives largely (as she does) of her missionary money to support churches among her adherents in Illinois, in California, or any other State? We answer no, and further state, that not to go to her people wherever they are, is to show herself unworthy her name and place among Episcopal Methodisms. It is a fundamental law, and an imperative duty, in every church organization, to care for its own, and by preaching and all legitimate evangelistic efforts to seek to multiply her influence and power. The "folly only less than sin," rests with the man or men who, through ignorance or wilful passing over this fundamental law and this imperative duty, seeks to prejudice the masses against Christian effort by sister churches.

But the Bishop not only slanders by implication, but does so directly. He pronounces the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church among the Germans in the South—"the war feeling surviving the war, and, to the great delight of the devil, calling itself missionary enterprise." We pronounce this a slander unworthy the lips or pen of any Christian brother, and here repeat what we said at first, that we regret that Bishop Keener should have it in his heart to write such words.

Who organized Methodism among the Germans of New Orleans? Not Bishop Keener or his church, but Rev. Dr. Nast and missionaries [illegible], and both he and they [illegible], if living, yet are, ministers in the Methodist Episcopal [illegible] [illegible] kept by the "war feeling" before the war; and, that only the fear of Dr. Nast that his coming would be regarded as unfraternal kept him away. Until after the war the properties of these German churches were held by their local trustees, and their voluntary appeal to Dr. Nast showed where their hearts were, and indicated where they felt their real church home was. After the overture of these churches to Dr. Nast became known, then began the operations of "the war feeling surviving the war," set in motion by Presiding Elder (now Bishop) Keener and others: and that feeling was propagated until the titles of church properties were changed to the Church, South. It was not until 1870 that a large company of German Methodists in this city appealed to the old church through Dr. Matlack for admission. He was one of the most prudent men our Church has had in the South, and he only after being fully satisfied that it was right, received the people. From that beginning has grown our German work in Louisiana and Texas—which now reports a membership of 1241 and church property worth $38,600 This work of our Church among the Germans in Louisiana and Texas is but a small part of her work among Germans. Our German membership numbers tens of thousands, scattered all over the United States, Germany and Switzerland. On the other hand, the German work of the Methodist Church, South, is limited to Louisiana and Texas, and is not as strong as that of our church even in these States. And we have it from reliable sources that it is the "war feeling surviving the war" kept up and encouraged by the leaders of the Southern Methodist German Conference that prevents its handful of churches from following, even now, the example of the first churches which appealed to Dr. Nast immediately after the war.

We suggest that good Bishop Keener take his exhortation "fraternity with a vengence" to himself, and we are sure if he does, no such unbrotherly words as the above will again be penned by him. If in this we are mistaken we suggest then the "prayer" he recommends, which if faithfully followed, will bring "peace."

The Negro as a Planter.

The Iberville South, a Democratic newspaper published at Plaquemine, Louisiana, says:

"In spite of all that may be said against the Negro or about his inferiority as a human being, there is a glaring fact staring us in the face, that as an agriculturist he is fast coming into prominence. When we call upon the country to view this race as "sugar planters" we are backed by facts, which will startle all who have ever despised their ability in this capacity. For instance: T. T. Allain leased a tract of land, a year or two ago, from the Citizen's Bank, and went into agriculture. Last year, having no sugar house, he made some $5,000 clear on his crop of cane, which he sold to a neighboring planter. This year he ground "on shares," and saw his cane turn out 64 hogsheads. Mitchell Jackson leased the Restalrig Plantation this, the first year, and turned out 96 hogsheads. Wm. Martin was employed as manager and overseer on the Kuneman Place, and was in full control of the plantation. He delivered 675 barrels of syrup as the result of his efforts. Philander Johnson, in charge of the Doolittle farm, for the past crop, turned out 25 hogsheads. These colored men are all freedmen.

There were before the war, in this parish, several colored people of free ancestry for several generations, who were extensive slaveowners and held and ran, successfully, several of the finest plantations on the Coast, but they were educated and refined to a high degree, as a rule, receiving the advantages of the best schools of France. Of these, however, we do not write. We call attention only to the late slave. There are many also who are buying land, and not in small lots, in different portions of the parish, and thus we see unmistakably forming, the breach which is to separate the thrifty negro from the idle, dissolute, and vagabond horde, who will be spurned even as hirelings, by their former companions in slavery."

The New Orleans Observer, Republican, gives these instances, gathered during a short visit to St. James parish, La., and has promise of many more:

"On the right bank of the Mississippi, in the parish, is Mr. A. Tureaud, a small planter, who cultivates cane and corn on a farm of 40 acres, valued at $1500. The net income this year, deducting all expenses, will be about $1000. Mr. Henry Reley, grandfather of Mr. Como, owns a farm of 60 acres with a sugar house attached. They cultivate cane and corn. Their place is valued at $6000. This will net them about $2000 this year, apart from the percentage received for the use of their mill in grinding cane of other small farmers. Edward Tureaud, Isaac Robinson and Pierre Phillips each own places of 20 acres, valued at about $1200 each. They raise corn and garden vegetables, and will net from sale of produce about $800 each. Wm. Pickett and Balthazar Alaside own farms of 10 acres each, valued at $800. Having raised corn and garden truck they will put aside $100 clear of expenses for their year's work. Thomas Reed & Bros., own a farm of 60 acres, valued at 2500. They will realize in profits this year from their crops fully $400. Eugene Lagrue owns a fine farm of 90 acres. He cultivates cane and corn. His place, valued at $2500, (he has no sugar mill), will net him this year fully $1000."

The parishes cited above are Republican ones, free from bulldozing and terrorism; but despite all obstacles presented in other parts of the State, the colored people are rapidly becoming farmers and property-holders. Their children throng the school-rooms, the number subscribing for newspapers increases yearly, and these, together with many other evidences, illustrate the wisdom of the Republican party in emancipating, enfranchising, and endeavoring to protect the citizens' rights of the blacks in the South.

Ministers and Tobacco.

We lately commended the West Texas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on its enforcement of its rule, at its late session, refusing admission to any minister who used tobacco, unless he solemnly pledged to quit it. We stated, also, that we did not think that any body of ministers in the Southern States, outside of our Church, had placed on record any protest against the use of tobacco. We are glad that at least one other body of ministers of a sister church has spoken out on this filthy, if not sinful, practice.

The Little Rock Conference of the M. E. Church, South, at its late session, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we feel that the time has fully come when our ministers should furnish our people a good example of self-denial in quitting the use of tobacco, and especially request that our ministers and members should not use it in the church."

This action is heartily commended by the Holston Methodist. That paper says:

"The use of tobacco by a minister of the gospel looks very much like an inconsistency. When Paul was preaching temperance to Felix it is hardly probable that Felix would have trembled as much as he did, if Paul had had a quid of tobacco in his mouth and Felix had known it. When the blessed Saviour said, "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me," how would he have looked if he had paused between two of the simple sentences in that statement of the condition of discipleship to spurt an accumulation of tobacco juice on the ground."

The Distress in England and What it Means.

The distress in the mining and manufacturing districts of Great Britain is unabated. The reports from all directions of the falling off in the demand for operatives are alarming. The English Board of Trade's returns show a steady decline in exports. November shows a decrease of $4,000,000 over the same month of last year. The diminution in the imports is over $30,000,000, which proves a great falling off in the purchasing power of the country. Mr. L. H. Courtney, M.P., says, in the last number of the Fortnightly Review:

England's manufacturing supremacy is slowly ebbing away; and the young Western giant, in whom Mr. Gladstone has recognized the future pioneer of progress, is to surplant John Bull in the industrial race. Having all the minerals and ores whose supply has enabled England to go ahead in the past in immensely greater quantities than they exist in our soil, America will distance us, and leave us lumbering far away in the rear, until at no very remote period England will be as Holland, and the dales and valleys which are now blackened with the smoke from a thousand chimneys, and re-echo from every nook the clang of hammers or the whirr of machinery, will have become primitive pasture grounds, supporting only a scanty population, in place of the teeming millions that now throng their every corner.

Pestilence in Brazil.

One of the northerly provinces of Brazil is suffering from an appalling pestilence. Ceara, in Brazil, has a large frontage upon the Atlantic coast, and in this portion of it the climate is delightful. In the interior and mountainous districts it is hot—the streams dry up in summer, and the lands often are so baked that vegetation is destroyed. At such times the inhabitants of these districts flock to the cities of the coast. An exchange says: "This year they gathered in large numbers at the capital, Fortaliza, and there the small-pox broke out and is raging with such virulence as might be expected of a crowded population. Three hundred deaths occur at this place per day." There are no medicines, or nursing, or food. In the interior the inhabitants are reported as feeding upon the bodies of their fellows, and perishing with thirst. The history of the famine and pestilence in China is not more horrible in its facts than that of Ceara.

Dr. Godman and his Work.

Rev. Dr. Godman and his troupe of Louisiana singers were well at last accounts, and are having success in raising money on the debt of the Orphans' Home, December 15th. Dr. Godman preached at Rhinebeck, New York, with great acceptability, and the collection on Sunday, and concert on Monday night footed up $130. One of the hearers was a lady belonging to the elite of New York society. She remarked: "I have heard Lablache and all the eminent profundo bassos of this country and Europe for the past forty years, but I never heard one whose voice was equal in combined melody and power to that of this young colored man."

The report that $100,000 of the bonds issued by the Southern Methodist Publishing house, to cover its debts, have been sold, is a very gratifying fact. This is about one-third the whole issue. With this beginning the salvation of the House would seem assured. Dr. McFerrin, the new agent, is doing nobly. This is the honorable way out of their financial troubles for our Southern brethren. The claims for money from the United States government, to pay for the use of their building in Nashville, during the war, is disgraceful, and success in that line would be a calamity to that Church, and an example of rewarding disloyalty to the government which would be a dangerous precedent, and be sure to be followed by a multitude of worse but kindred claims.

Prize Poem.

The Times of this city offered a prize for the best poem expressive of the gratitude of the South for the help received during the epidemic. A very large number of poems were written. "Andromeda Unchained" won the prize, and was published in the Times of the first inst. The author is Mr. Henry Guy Carleton, of the United States Army. The poem is classic in its conception, and indicates upon the part of the author a good poetic talent.

Among the very best poems which came before the committee was one by Col. Bigney, editor of the City Item. This we publish on our first page.

Specie Resumption.

On the first of January, for the first time since 1862, gold stood at 100 at New York—that is, it was worth no more nor less than a greenback dollar. The day was christened "Resumption Day" in New York, and everywhere there was joy. The great event made no perceptible effect in any of the great cities of the country. Two hundred millions of gold dollars will go into circulation, and thus the bulk of money will be enlarged. Gold can no longer be bought and sold as a speculation. The general effect on business must be good.

The Texas Christian Advocate (Southern Methodist) gives in its issue of January 4th, from the New York Advocate, the statistics of our Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. We have no doubt these figures which show how wonderfully God has blessed our work in the South, will help the cause of "fraternity" among the readers of that journal. And we have no doubt, also, that after reading them, many will wonder how the editor of that journal could have permitted such unchristian sentiments to be printed in his paper, as appeared lately under the heading "A Fraternal Morsel."

We have received the annual circular of Andrews' Institute, Alabama. Rev. J. T. Blakemore, A. M., is president. The second term began Monday of this week. This is a good school. The tuition is from $5 to $15 a term, and board and washing costs $6 a month. Address Prof. Blakemore, Andrews' Institute, Alabama, for information.

Rev. Dr. Rust, who has just completed an extensive tour in the central South, was heartily and formally welcomed to his home in Cincinnati by the Lincoln Lyceum. The Doctor is popular because his labors are abundant and successful in the work of educating the colored people of the nation.

The New Orleans Democrat says that it is reliably informed that the contracts for building the Morgan Louisiana & Texas Railroad to Orange, Texas, have been signed, and that the road is to be finished by January 1st, 1880. This is good news for New Orleans and the whole Southwest.

Centennary M. E. Church, Camden, New Jersey, raised a debt of $20,000, Dec. 19th. Rev. J. Y. Dobbins is pastor. One gentleman, not a member of any church, gave $1,000 in the morning, rented a pew in the evening, and was converted to God in his private office, on Monday morning.

The City.

Gen. Cyrus Bussey, of New Orleans, is in Washington City.

United States Senator Kellogg spent a few days in the city last week.

The Yellow Fever Commission is in the city, busy taking testimony. We will publish results.

The cases of Paul Trevigne and others against the New Orleans City School Board, for excluding their children from certain schools because the children were colored, are now before the Supreme Court of this State awaiting judgment. The Constitution and Laws of this State are explicit in forbidding discriminations in the schools on account of color.

The presence of United States Senator Kellogg in the city last week was made the occasion of a complimentary dinner, given him by the Republican leaders in Louisiana. A large number were present. The chief importance to be attached to the affair was that it brought together, in a seemingly happy union, those leaders of the party who heretofore have been bitter political enemies—and also brought to the front again some of the old leaders who were foremost in the first days of reconstruction. Hahn, Kellogg, Antoine, Pinchback, Warmoth, Lewis, Rondanez, Brown, Anderson, Bonzano, Shaw and perhaps fifty others were present.

Judge Billings of the United States Court in his charge to the United States Grand Jury, Dec. 16, set forth the law by which the offenders against the election laws, can be indicted. He gave the authorities showing that the United States had full power to protect all citizens entitled to vote by State laws, in their voting for Congressman, irrespective of the fifteenth amendment and the legislation it authorizes. He also gave the law showing that in the elections for State officers, the United States can punish any who interfere with voters, or discriminate against them because of race, color, or previous condition.

TEXAS.

Rev. E. E. Cooper of the West Texas Conference, was appointed in charge of the La Grange Circuit. In the published appointments, that circuit was by mistake published as being left to be supplied.

Rev. Paul Douglas, Galveston: "On watch night we had a good time. The roll of membership was called. A goodly number responded. Rev. S. Hardwell was present and preached, after which 13 joined the church, and one professed religion. We are doing all we can for the SOUTHWESTERN."

Rev. Wm. J. Grant, Lawrence: "Our third year at this place opens pleasantly. We were favored with a visit from Bishop Haven and Dr. Hartzell a short time since. Their visit will long be remembered by our people. We are using the new M. E. Hymnal, and have a song service every Sunday night for twenty minutes preceding public service. Our Sunday school enjoyed the Christmas eve festival grandly. In behalf of the Missionary Society, we raised a Christmas offering to spread the glory of Christ among men."

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Holly Springs: "At our Fourth Quarterly Conference which was held recently, there were six received into full membership, and eight on probation. More than one hundred members communed together in the Lord's Supper. On the 25th we received $60 from Dr. R. S. Rust of Cincinnati, Ohio, to be distributed among those suffering from yellow fever. We have several widows and orphan children who are in actual need of help. On the 2nd inst, at Asbury Chapel, Hon. Robert Cunningham, a member of the Mississippi Legislature, and Miss Nettie Johnson, were united in wedlock. All of Holly Springs. The pastor performed the ceremony. A grand reception was given at the residence of the bride's mother, and a very fine supper was enjoyed and the evening was passed very pleasantly."

ARKANSAS.

On the night of Dec. 18 the building of the college, under the patronage of our Arkansas Conference, was burned by an incendiary. The school was being held in a temporary building and had seventy-five scholars in attendance. The building burned was a new one not yet occupied. The college is located at Harrison, Boone Co., Ark.

TENNESSEE.

Dec. 20 the many friends of Rev. J. M. Durham, pastor of the Second M. E. Church in Knoxville, gave him a surprise party—leaving behind substantial evidence of their good wishes.

What the Okolona District Conference thinks of the Southwestern.

The following were appointed as a committee on periodicals: The presiding elder, James J. Shumpert, and M. Proctor. The committee offered the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That we heartily recommend the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to every family in our respective neighborhoods, and do all we can to promote its future success; as the paper is an able exponent of the polity, doctrines and usages of the M. E. Church. Its merits as a family newspaper should place it in every family in our State.

Resolved, That the ministers and members of the Okolona District will work hard to secure the splendid silver communion service offered as a premium to the churches by the SOUTHWESTERN.

Resolved, That hereafter we will not license, nor renew the license of any person to preach or exhort, unless he is a subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

The presiding elder supported the resolutions in an earnest address, showing how indispensable it is for preachers and exhorters to have a church paper, and how easily the above could be accomplished. The resolutions were adopted by a unanimous rising vote.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 22, 1878.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN: Please publish my inquiry for friends. My mother's name was Mary Glover, father's Squire West. They belonged to a man named Bladburn. My sister, Lucy Nelson, belonged to Tom Bladburn; my brothers Brooks and Wilson West belonged to the same owner. My name was Minnie West. I was sold from home when a little girl about 16 years old to Henry H. Collins by Burbridge Bladburn. My parents were living in Lexington and Frankfort, Kentucky. Yours truly

JAN. 12, 1879.—THE DEDICATION

SCRIPTURE.—Ezra 6: 14-22.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of hosts; and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts." Hag. 2:9.

TOPIC.—Joy in Fulfilment.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

Between Lessons, Note these facts;

1. The cessation of building. That came about by those who are called "the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin." 4: 1. They would, at the first, however, have disguised themselves in sheep's clothing; for they came to Zerubbabel and the chief of the fathers desiring that they might build with them, alleging that they sought the same God, and made sacrifices to him since the days when they were first brought into the country. Their false motives are plainly visible, the reply of the leaders harsh. "Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God, but we ourselves together will build," etc. The refusal corresponded with the commands of God to have nothing to do with the idolatrous inhabitants of the land. For, though they professed to seek the true God, yet they also worshiped idols, and did not consider the one inconsistent with the other. 2 K. 17: 33. The reply indicates a sturdy independence in regard to aid, which might have compromised them, of which the church would do well to take heed. The design of these enemies was, first, to prevent any possible danger of their expulsion from the land, as had happened to other peoples before them; and, second, to obtain such a share in the temple as to have an equal authority with the Jews, in all matters, civil as well as religious.

The disappointed schemers, not prompted by a genuine love of God, immediately went to plotting to prevent the building of the temple at all. They did what they could to weaken those at home, and hired counselors to sow a distrust of their undertaking in the Persian court. They delayed the work for about twelve important years. They alleged that the Jews were building the walls of the city, and meant again to struggle for independence. By this misrepsentation they obtained a decree from the false Gomates forbidding them to go on.

2. The Renewal. Work was resumed upon the temple in the second year of Darius, without waiting for any recall of the royal prohibition. The two men which brought about this revival of interest were the prophets Haggai and Zachariah. The venerable Haggai reproached the people for living in paneled houses while the house of God was going to waste. He ascribed the poverty of the land to their niggardliness with relation to the temple. And to those who were bemoaning the passing away of the glory of the former temple, Haggai declared: "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of hosts." Zechariah, the younger prophet, stirred up the hearts of the people with predictions of the future glory of Jerusalem. He depicted Jerusalem as once more eminent among cities, as having outgrown her enclosures, and as having the Lord himself as a wall of fire round about her. He positively affirmed that the hands of Zerubbabel, which had laid the foundations of the house, should also finish it. Under the impulse of these prophecies the work upon the temple was resumed. Zerubbabel and Jeshua again were foremost in this duty, their example inspiring the hearts of the people with fervent zeal.

Tatnai, the governor west of the Euphrates, was soon aware of what was going on, interviewed the builders, found that they claimed to be working under a royal grant from Cyrus, and wrote the king, fairly stating the claims of the Jews, and making known their wish that the archieves of state might be searched for the purpose of corroborating their affirmations.

3. The Permission. At the request of the Jews, search was made "in the house of the rolls, where the treasures were laid up in Babylon." The quest there was ineffectual. Something discovered there, however, must have directed the attention of those making the exploration to Achmetha, a fortress in the province of Media. There the roll was found, and in it, it was discovered, the alleged permission had been granted, Cyrus himself had planned the temple, and decreed that expenses of its building should be borne out of his own treasury, and that the gold and silver vessels of which the temple had been rifled by Nebuchadnezzar should be restored to their place. The result of this investigation was that the governor, Tatnai, received a letter from the king enjoining: 1. That the Jews be permitted to build the house which they had begun. 2. That the expenses of the building be met out of the tribute collected in his taritory. In that way the Samaritans did have an unwilling share in the work of rebuilding the temple. 3. That he should supply the priests with all the animals and the materials necessary for the daily sacrifices. He did even better than Cyrus had purposed to do. 4. That he should punish with death any one who attempted to nullify the words of that decree. In the last part of our lesson we are told that the Lord had "turned the heart of the king of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel." That accords with the reason given by Darius for his extraordinary liberality: "That they may offer sacrifices of sweet savor unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king and of his sons."

The Temple Finished (14, 15).—In the two verses of this division of the lesson, we have a statement: 1st. Of who builded. They were the elders of the Jews. 2d. Of the means by which they were incited and encouraged to their work. The prophesying of Haggai and Zechariah. When the command came to cease building they stopped, for the time, out of compulsion, but, after awhile, remained idle from the lack of desire to begin. These two prophets brought about a revival. Again a whole community was stirred up to their duty by two men. When God touches the lips of his servants their fellow men will listen. They preached, not about themselves, but the temple—the temple! They were men of one idea. They would not let the people rest, but all the while insisted that they should obey the commands of God and restore the house of the Lord. The command of God preceded all other encouragements, and was the foundation of all that followed. The commands of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes. The last named king ascended the throne too late to have had anything to do with the building of the temple The historian, however, can not forbear to speak of Artaxerxes on account of the gifts which he gave, and caused to be given, for its endowment. 7: 15–22. How many things were necessary to the rebuilding of the temple! 1. The will of God. 2. The will of the people. 3. The will of the kings. 3d. Of the time when the temple was finished. It was completed on the third day of the month Adar, or March, in the sixth year of the reign of King Darius, B. C. 515. The restoration [illegible] years after the [illegible] of the first temple.

The Temple Dedicated (16–18).—The [illegible] of the people for [illegible] was shown in [illegible] the dedication [illegible] of God with joy." [illegible] in this ceremony [illegible] priests and the Levites [illegible] here called "the [illegible] sons of Israel"; [illegible] of the children of the [illegible]

[illegible]

Their weary captivity was over, and now, again, they stood redeemed in the sight of the Lord. The Passover lamb, with its mystic drops of blood, foretelling the greater Passover yet to come, was the sign of their safety in God. They kept the feast of unleavened bread with joy; "for the Lord had made them joyful." He had made them joyful through their obedience to him, in regard to the corection of the temple, and, putting away all the heathen filthiness with which those who had remained in the land had been defiled. In our new passover, the Lord's Supper, when the ministers serve with pure hands, and the people have put away all filthiness, we have no occasion of the most exalted joy.

Another occasion for joy was the fact that God had turned the heart of the king toward them. That he should have acted with such liberallity toward such a small and insignificant province in his great dominion is explainable only on the basis here affirmed. The Lord turned his heart toward the people There was a manifest divine influence over the three kings whose names are mentioned. God never lacks for means to carry out his will. In using them, there was a perspicous fulfilment of the prophecy: "And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers." Is. 49: 23.

Those Murdered Witnesses.

The reported murder of the two colored witnesses who were on their way from Shreveport to testifiy before the United States Court in this city, is confirmed. The New Orleans Times speaks out and says

"The time has come for these things to be suppressed with a stern and inexorable hand."

The National Democrat of Peoria, Ills., says of this awful crime:

We think it is high time for Democratic papers everywhere, especially in the North, to "dry up" about the "bloody shirt" and "Southern outrages." The sneaking, cowardly murder of White and Clark, two colored witnesses on their way to New Orleans, to testify, under subpœna of the United States Court, before the United States Grany Jury, is an "outrage" that cannot be excused, palliated, patched up, nor defended by any honest white man, and the sooner Blaine and his whole committee and the Federal army too, get after the perpetrators the better for the peace of the country.

In Memoriam.

DIED—Very suddenly, of appoplexy, at Pass Christian, Miss., Dec. 26, 1878, Mrs. Ruth G. Peaslee, wife of O. Peaslee, formerly of Delaware, Ohio.

Sister Peaslee was about fifty-three years old. She was converted at the age of twelve and united with the M. E. Church. About two years ago she joined the Presbyterian Church in this place. She lived and died a consistent Christian. Her remains were taken to Delaware, Ohio.

L. BRADFORD.

Pass Christian, Dec. 28, 1878.

For nearly half-a-century, Christian missions seemed to make but little improvement in India, but during 1878 over 50,000 Hindoos renounced their faith, and all India seems to be on the verge of a mighty religious revolution toward Christianity.

New Publications

The Preacher and Homiletic Monthly for January reports many able sermons, an interesting paper on "Effective Preaching in this Age of Popular Indifference and Philosophical Skepticism," by W. Sidney, Randall, D. D.; "A Study in the Book of Revelation," by Rev. D. C. Hughs; a lengthy interview with the founder of the Fulton Street Prayer-meeting; a Suggestive Commentary by the Editor on a Harmony of the Gospel; "Preachers Exchanging Views;" and "Hints at the Meanings of Texts." A new department opens, edited by [illegible], and entitled "Helpful Data in Current Literature." The Magazine is proving very popular among clergymen of all denominations. Published by The Religious Newspaper Agency, New York. Price 25 cents per number; $2.50 per year.

The number of Littell's Living Age for the week ending January 4, begin its one hundred and fortieth volume. George MacDonald's new serial story, "Sir Gibbie," will be continued from week to week until completed; a new serial, "The [illegible]," by Sarah Tytler, whose stories "What She Came [illegible]" and "Rev. Adam Cameron's [illegible] to London" attracted so much attention in the Living Age, will be begun in January; a serial [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Carpenter, Prof. Max Muller, Matthew Arnold, and others, with sketches by R D. Blackmore, author of "Lorna Doone," Wm. Black, Mrs. Oliphant, Anthony Trollope, etc. With the recent great impetus given to foreign periodical literature, The Living Age promises to be richer than ever in the work of the ablest minds of the time, and will give their productions with a completeness not elsewhere attempted. The beginning of a new year is a favorable time for the beginning of a subscription; and the publishers still present to new subscribers for 1879 the six numbers of 1878 containing the first parts of "Sir Gibbie." New Books.

A PRESIDING ELDER'S HAND BOOK! Hill Brothers, New Haven, Conn.

This is a hand book for Presiding Elders which is well worth the dollar it costs. It is a well bound little book with pages so arranged that all the information a Presiding Elder needs concerning any charge can be put in a page for reference and preservation. One column is devoted to officers, another to committees, and another to questions. With this book in his pocket, a Presiding Elder has a perfect knowledge always at hand of his district. Address Hill Brothers, New Haven, Conn., sending $1.

EVOLUTION EVOLVED, containing a review of Darwin, Huxley and Haeckle. Hall & Co. publishers 284 Broadway New York.

The book will attract great attention among thinkers of all classes. The author writes under the nom de plume of Wiltord. He or she, as the case may be, has evidently studied the great question of evolution very fully. The discussions are fearless and to the point. We have only glanced over the work, but have read enough to convince us that the author has shown the absurdity of many of the so-called scientific facts of this day. The entire work will comprise a double column octavo volume of 527 pages. The frontispiece contains portraits of Darwin, Haeckel, Helmholtz and Mayer, and will be sent at the low price of $3 00.

CATARRH AND ITS CURE.—Rev. T. P. Childs publishes to-day a wonderfully accurate description of the causes of Catarrh, and the results from inattention to the first symptoms of this terrible disease. From the details given of his method of cure, it seems to be easily applied and very simple in its action. Inhalation is evidently the most rational and sensible way of reaching any disease of the air passages; Mr. Childs' application of this principle in his medicine, together with the knowledge of the inhalants to be used, have given him wonderful success in the treatment of Catarrh and Bronchitis. To judge from the published statements of some of his patients, the medicine Mr. Childs' contrives to place, by the use of his inhalers, just where it is needed, must be most powerful and searching in its character to produce such surprising results. None need feel any hesitancy in placing their case in Dr. Child's hands for treatment. The number and character of the certificates, as well as the favorable notices from well-known publishers, who have carefully examined the subject, must dispel every doubt in regard to his reliability. We would call especial attention to the advertisement, and request a careful perusal of the facts as set forth.

THE U. S. SIGNAL SERVICE.

Gradually, the wild and ungovernable forces of nature are, through science, made of us to man. Following in the wake of the ingenious inventions for the use steam and electricity, comes the organization of the U. S. Signal Servce. Is it not wonderful that a system could be orignated and perfected whereby an orator can accurately predict the weather of a distant locality! And yet experience proves our "storm signals" to be reliable. Equally great are the advances made in science of medicine. Step by step, uncertanities and doubts have yielded to absolute certainty. The discoveries of Harvey and Jumer have been succeeded by the Golden Medical Discovery of Dr. R. V. Pierce. No longer need people despair because so me physician have pronounced the lungs unsound. Hundreds of testimonials are on file in the office of Dr. Pierce from those who had abandoned all hopes, and had been given up to die by physicians and friends. Incipient consumption, bronchitis, scrofulous tumors, speedily, surely, and permanently, yield to the healing influences of the Discovery. If the bowels be constipated. use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. For full particulars, see Pierce's Memorandum Book, given away by all druggists.

THE GREATEST BLESSING.—A simple, pure, harmless remedy, that cures every time, and prevents disease by keeping the blood pure, stomach regular, kidneys and liver active, is the greatest blessing ever conferred upon man. Hop Bitters is that remedy, and its proprietors are being blessed by thousands who have been saved and cured. Will you try it. See other column.

The Quickest Time East.

The Great Jackson Route is now making the quickest time to New York ever known, leaving New Orleans daily at 5:45 p. m., and arriving at New York at 6:35 a. m. Allowing for the difference in time between the two cities, the run is made in the unprecedented time of fifty-nine and three-quarter hours. This quick time is made only by the Great Jackson Route, and is the result of its enterprise in rebuilding its track with steel rails and new ties, at heavy expense, and the thorough system of ballasting that has been undertaken. This fast train will be of great advantage to the people of this city, which it is hoped they will show their appreciation of by their patronage. Only one change of cars, which is made at Columbus, O., where breakfast is taken in [illegible] dining hall at that place at 8 a. m.

This route also makes the quickest time to Boston, arriving at 2:40 p. m. Actual running time, sixty-seven and one-half hours. This the most desirable route for all New England points. The time to all intermediate points is correspondingly less, thus making this the quickest and best route to all the Northern and Eastern cities.

Excursion tickets to Waukesha, Oconomowoc and all the Northwestern summer resorts, to Niagra Falls, Put-in-Bay, etc., are on sale at the lowest rates with the quickest time made by any line, and only one change of cars.

THE GENUINE

DR. C. McLANE'S

CELEBRATED

LIVER PILLS,

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Inhaling Tube!

—AND—

COMMON AIR, WILL CURE

CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaid, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remdy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 tf.

Our Class Leaders.

We are often asked for the names of books suitable for class leaders. We recommend the following and ask the Presiding Elders and Pastors to do all they can to put these books in the hands of the leaders.

1. The Class-Leader: His Work, and How to do it. With illustrations of principles, needs, methods and results. By Rev. John Atkinson, A. M. 12mo., $1.50.
2. Address to Class-Leaders. By Bishop Janes. 12mo., 20c.
3. Seed-Thought; A Hand-Book of Doctrine and Devotion. By Rev. Geo. C. Robinson. Price $1.00.
4. Father Reeves, Methodist Class-Leader. By Edward Corderoy. 18mo., 35c.
5. All for Christ: How the Christian may Obtain, by a renewed Consecration of His Heart, the fullness of Joy Referred to by the Savior just Previous to His Crucifixion, with illustrations from the lives of those who have make this consecration. By Thomas Carter, D.D. 16mo., 75c.

For any of these books address Nelson & Phillips, New Orleans.

COURSE OF STUDY FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 89, §5 of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

I. Let candidates for license to preach be examined in the common branches of an English education, and on their general acquaintance with the Bible and the doctrines and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

II. FIRST YEAR. The Bible—History. Binney's Theological Compend. Steele's Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

TO BE READ. Scripture History—Old Testament. Smith's. Watson's Life of Wesley. A Hundred Years of Methodism.—Simpson.

III. SECOND YEAR.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Merrill.

TO BE READ.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the United States.—Ridpath. Ruter's Church History—1 vol., 8 vo.

IV. THIRD YEAR.—The Bible—Sacraments. Wakefield's Theology—Last Four Books. Christian Perfection—Wesley's Plain Account.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. 1. Introduction to the Gospel Records.—Nast. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation—In one vol., 8 vo.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.
2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.
3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS. Secretary.

The Methodist Hymnal, AND Hymnal with Tunes.

We are now prepared to fill orders for the following editions of the "METHODIST HYMNAL:"

Pearl, Plain	$0 40
Pearl, Red Edge	0 50
24mo, Plain	0 50
24mo, Red Edge	0 65
24mo, Roan, Embossed	0 75
24mo, Roan, Gil; Edge	1 00
16mo, Plain	0 75
16mo, Red Edge	1 00
16mo, Roan, Embossed	1 20
16mo, Roan Gilt Edge	1 40
"Hymnal with Tunes, 12mo	1 00
Hymnal with Tunes, 8vo	1 75

Since the manuscript of the Hymnal was delivered by the Committee, October 26th, last, time has been required to prepare and perfect the indexes, to complete the arrangements of the Hymns and Tunes, and to adjust all to a system of uniform numbering. Time has also been consumed in the transmission of proofs to and from the members of the Committee, but there has been no unnecessary delay. In view of these facts, and the amount of work involved in issuing so many editions in good style, we think that it has been completed at the earliest moment practicable.

The new book contains a great variety of the best spiritual songs, adapting it both to public and social worship. It should be used in social meetings and Sunday-schools, and thus be the means of familiarizing our children with the living hymns of the church. The cheaper editions will cost little more than the ordinary Sunday-school song books that last but a season. The Hymnal with Tunes is a rich and varied treasury of sacred music, and the 12mo edition is the cheapest complete Hymn and Tune Book in the land.

We ask all pastors to aid in the general and immediate introduction of the Hymnal, and Hymnal with Tunes. Let it be the occasion of an effort to intensify the true spirit of worship where it flourishes, and to revive it where it languishes, that the Methodist Episcopal Church may soon become, as aforetime, mighty in song.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADNOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.
2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

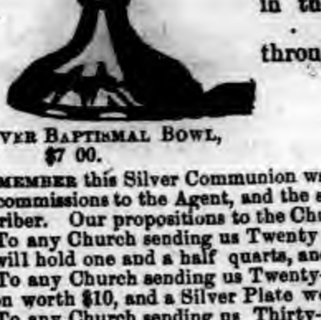
We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:

SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 14 00

SILVER PLATE. 10 inches wide, $4 00



SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL, $7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country

SILVER GOBLET. 1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.
2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.
3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total 18 50.
4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.
5. To any Church sending up Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

☞NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us, This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceeding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregration where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every sobscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

☞Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.
2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.
3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission: the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.
4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

The Class-Leader.

His Work, and How to Do It.

With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M., Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo. $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

OUR BABY.

A fairy girl I know.
With teeth of pearl
And forehead white as snow
She is so dainty sweet
We call her Queen,
And kiss her little feet.

So full of baby grace
And pretty smiles
Is her dear little face.
We joy to see her play;
Our tiny pet,
So artless, winsome, gay.

Thy precious dancing curls
Make sunshine here;
Fairest of baby girls;
Thy sparkling, darkling eyes
Most innocent,
Glance out in sweet surprise.

What tho' the wind may blow,
And cold storms moan,
Her song is sweet and low.
Like little gladsome bird,
About our home
Her baby voice is heard.

Thy rosy finger tips'
Caressing touch,
Thy wee, pink, wild-rose lips!
Bring us on Earth a part
Of joyous Heaven,
O! blessed "pure in heart."

The Curate and the Bricklayer.

A Manchester curate did a good thing the other day. While walking along a street at the dinner hour, he passed a lot of bricklayers smoking their after-dinner pipe, and heard one of them say:

"I'd like to be a parson, and have naught to do but to walk along in a long, black coat, and carry a walking-stick in my hat, and get a lot of brass."

Of course there was a laugh at the parson's expense, but he turned sharp around, and replied:

"So you would like to be a parson. How much do you get a week?"

"Twenty ... " was the reply.

[illegible] ... Nay, man, thou ... like it; thou mun go with the parson chap."

So he put on his coat and started ... amidst a roar of laughter ... parson presently, turned ... and told his companions ... were going to see a ... that he must ... noise going upstairs.

"What ... the matter be with him?" asked the bricklayer.

"Small ..." said the parson. "... the man, "I'll ... you, sir; for I've ... myself, and I've got a wife and children to think of."

"That's exactly my case," replied the curate, "for I have not had it, and I have a wife and children depending on me. But you agreed to come with me wherever I went."

[illegible]

CATARRH

Thousands suffer without knowing the nature of this almost universal complaint. It is an ulceration of the head. Its indications are, hawking, spitting, weak inflamed eyes, frequent soreness of the throat, dryness and heat of the nose, matter running from the head down the throat, often ringing or deafness in the ears, loss of smell, memory impaired, dullness and dizziness of the head, often in the first stages, but more commonly in its advanced stages, attended with pains in chest or left side, and under the shoulder blades. Indigestion usually attends Catarrh: a hacking cough and colds are very common; some have all these symptoms; others only a part. Very little pain attends Catarrh, until the liver and the lungs are attacked in consequence of the stream of pollution running from the head into the stomach.

All persons thus affected take cold easily, and have frequently a running at the nostrils; the breath sometimes reveals to all around the corruption within, while the patient has frequently lost all sense of smell. The disease advances covertly, until pain in the chest, lungs or bowels startles him; he hacks and coughs, has dyspepsia, liver complaint, and is urged by his doctor to take this or that; perhaps cod liver oil is prescribed. Perfectly ridiculous! The foul ulcers in the head cannot be reached by pouring such stuff into the poor jaded stomach. The patient becomes nervous; the voice is harsh and unnatural; he feels disheartened; memory loses her power, judgment her zeal, gloomy forebodings hang overhead; hundreds, yes thousands, in such circumstances, feel that to die would be a relief, and many do even cut the thread of life to end their sorrows.

THOUSANDS ARE DYING

In early life with consumption, who can look back a few years—perhaps only months—when it was only catarrh. Neglected, when a cure [illegible]ossible, very soon it will transform the features of health and youth into the dark[illegible] appearance; while the hacking cough, the excess of blood gushing from the lungs, or night sweats, all significantly proclaim it is too late; and thus a neglected catarrh ends in the consumptive's grave.

NASAL CATARRH.

Sometimes the disease only affects the membranes lining the nasal passages, and they may be easily reached and cured by simple means. But when it is located in the frontal sinus, or in the posterior nares, or if it has entered the eustachian tubes, and is injuring the ears, then nothing but finely medicated vapor can effectually reach it and destroy it. And certainly, after it has affected the throat and bronchial tubes, as all well-read physicians will readily attest, nothing can be relied on to effect a permanent cure but the inhalation of properly medicated vapor. In the same manner that we breathe the common air, we can inhale and breathe a medicated air; and it is perfectly simple, any one can see, thus to treat diseases of the throat, bronchial pipes and lungs. How much better this method by which remedies are conveyed directly to the seat of disease, than to resort to the uncertain and too frequently mischievous action of medicines taken into the stomach.

THE COLD AIR INHALING BALM.

This part of my treatment I regard as very important, especially in warding off colds which is full half of the battle, and in relieving the head and lungs while under their effects. The Balm is composed of several kinds of gums, balsams, firs, and essential oils, which are separately used by the best physicians in treating throat, bronchial and lung diseases. These I have combined, and concentrated their virtues, which, by the inhaling process, are drawn through the various passages of the head and respiratory organs, reaching and healing every irritated spot. If used when cold first makes its appearance—which usually begins by an irritation of the mucous lining of the nose, and a sneeze, which is nature's emphatic warning—it will, most invariably, check it; and by producing a quicker circulation ... the blood to the surface, the bad effects of a cold are warded ... almost instant in its effects.

AMONG WOMEN ... is very common. The decrees of fashion compel women to go from the ... atmosphere ... furnace heated houses, into the open air, with the head but poorly protected ... from bronchitis and difficulties of the throat and lungs.

TEACHERS IN OUR SCHOOLS are greatly subject to this fearful malady. Confinement in close, ill-ventilated school rooms; the overheated atmosphere, charged with the steaming poisonous exudations from the bodies of the not always over clean children, breed this disease with fearful rapidity.

LAWYERS IN THE COURT-ROOM and judges on the bench, from the same general cause, are too often afflicted in the same way.

MINISTERS OF THE GOSPEL after leaving the pulpit, over-heated with the strain of their mental and physical efforts, neglect sufficient precaution, and a cold is the result. This neglected ... way to catarrh, and to a possible loss of voice. I have suffered so keenly myself ... upon public speakers too strongly the necessity of removing the disease ... possible.

MY EXPERIENCE.

Eighteen years of terrible headache, disgusting nasal discharges, dryness of the throat, acute bronchitis, coughing, soreness of the lungs, raising bloody mucus, and even night sweats, incapacitating me for my professional duties, and bringing me to the verge of the grave—ALL were caused by, and the results of Nasal Catarrh. After spending hundreds of dollars, and obtaining no relief, I compounded my CATARRH SPECIFIC AND COLD AIR INHALING BALM, and wrought upon myself a wonderful cure. Now I can speak for hours with no difficulty, and can breathe freely in any atmosphere. At the calls of numerous friends, I have given my cure to the public, and have now thousands of patients in all parts of the country, and thousands of happy fellow-beings whose sufferings I have relieved. My cure is certain, thorough and perfect, and is endorsed by EVERY PHYSICIAN who has examined it. If I can relieve my fellow-beings as I have been relieved of this loathsome disease, which makes the possessor at once disgusting to himself and others, I shall be satisfied, and feel that I have done my little toward removing the ills of mankind.

T. P. CHILDS.

TESTIMONY OF OTHERS.

FROM THE CHANCELLOR OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA.

T. P. CHILDS.—Dear Sir:—I think you have the true theory and practice for the cure of Nasal Catarrh, and also, for the treatment of the respiratory organs. My throat is now so well restored that I lecture daily without difficulty, and I find no difficulty whatever in preaching. You are at full liberty to use my name for the benefit of others.

Yours very truly, E. B. FAIRFIELD, D. D. LL. D., Lincoln, Neb.

JUDGE J. COLLETT, of Lima, O., writes: "You will remember how terribly Catarrh had taken hold upon me at the time you were at my house, making me offensive to myself and to all around, and withal suffering day and night. I began to use your excellent remedy about the 26th of August. Now I am cured; head free, air passages all open, and breathing natural. I express to you again what I said in a recent letter, 'A thousand thanks to you for so sure a remedy, and so very cheap.' I have laid away the instrument, having no further occasion to use it. Thus in about six weeks I have accomplished what you thought could be gained in from three to six months." (Write to him.)

MR. T. GILLESPIE, of Woodworth, Kenosha Co., Wis., writes: "I must say that I never had a medicine take hold of my Catarrh by the root, and root it out as this has."

MR. THOMAS J. DAILY, of Homer, Champaign Co., Ill., one of the worst cases I ever had under my treatment, who was six months bed fast, and nearly blind, one eye utterly ... by catarrh, nose and face much disfigured, and throat and lungs in a critical ...

"DEAR MR. CHILDS: I have used your Catarrh treatment, that my brother, B. O. Daily, of your place kindly sent me, now over three months, and almost all this time in hopelessness, as it seemed I must die. By and by it began to take effect, and I began to have hope. I improved rapidly, soon could spit up, passages of the head began to open, throat and bronchial tubes grew better, cough ceased, and now I can see to write. I now expect to get well and go about my business again. I owe you a great debt of gratitude. Indeed, I owe my life to your treatment. Very truly your friend, THOMAS J. DAILY."

Mr. D. is now (Sept. 10) in Troy, looking quite well; almost every vestige of Catarrh has disappeared.

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

MR. W. S. Sandel, of Willis, Montgomery Co., Texas, writes:

REV. T. P. CHILDS.—Dear Sir:—In 1875 I was attacked with catarrh, slight at first, but it gradually grew worse and worse. In the spring of 1877 the disease assumed a new form. my mouth and throat were attacked, ulcers were formed, and soon the uvula was all eaten away, and large sores through the posterior nares. My condition was not only deplorable, ... hopeless. Large quantities of very offensive matter were discharged from the nostrils and throat; and for days together I could take no food but spoon vituals. I knew of no remedy, and the doctors could give me no relief or advice. My sufferings were intense, and distraction of mind was added to my physical sufferings. At this juncture a friend called my attention to your advertisement. I lost no time in procuring your Specific. I received it the latter part of August and commenced using it immediately, and began to improve right along. My throat healed rapidly, and the change in my appearance for the better was so marked that I was often greeted with, "Why! what a change! How much better you look!" When I think of what I suffered, and the many sleepless nights of agony I spent, I am truly glad there is a remedy for this horrible disease. I shall recommend it to all suffering with Catarrh. I will cheerfully answer any letters addressed to me asking information. Most sincerely your friend, W. S. SANDEL.

WHAT THE EDITORS KNOW OF T. P. CHILDS.

Catarrh ... in its most offensive form, compelled Mr. Childs to give up his charge, after years of public speaking, and constant use of a voice, always strong. After trying all that medicine could do for him, he finally, in despair, attempted his own cure, and, having considerable knowledge of medicine, succeeded, beyond hope, and relieved his own sufferings, enabling him to resume public speaking without difficulty.

Mr. Childs was besieged by others similarly afflicted, until the good man was compelled to go into the manufacture of his medicine, by the number and frequency of these calls.—Correspondence Journal and Messenger, Cincinnati.

The publishers of the Congregationalist, with multitudes of other people, are somewhat ... of patent medicines, as a rule, and when we received the advertisement of Mr. Childs, we at first declined its insertion; but on making inquiry, we received such satisfactory replies, and one especially from a well known Congregational pastor not far from Rev. Mr. Childs, the proprietor of the medicine, that we withdrew our objections.—Congregationalist, Boston.

While not supposing that all cases of catarrh will be cured, by the prescription advertised, the publishers of the Illustrated Christian ... have reason to believe that it has in many cases proved effectual. We do not ordinarily insert medical advertisements.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

The medicine Mr. Childs contrives to place, by the use of his inhalers, just where it is needed, must be most powerful and searching in its character to produce such surprising results. Many of our leading lawyers, divines, and prominent business men have tried this remedy with wonderful success. There is no doubt of the efficacy of this method. We regard Mr. Childs as an honest, Christian man.—Gazette, Cincinnati.

Mr. Childs gives a very strong description of this most annoying and loathsome disease. ... well known publishers and others throughout the country ... that his peculiar manner of treatment is worthy of investigation by those ... The physician who is able to relieve suffering humanity of such painful ills, ... the thanks and patronage of the world at large.—Andrews ..., Cincinnati.

CONCLUSION.

... Childs' Catarrh Specific, for thoroughness, com... has no equal in the world ... throat and bronchial tubes, arranged ... inhalants and two fine inhalers ... can afford but temporary relief ... deeper and deeper. Be in earnest and ... paper you saw this in. Circulars ... by addressing (with return stamp),

☞ HELP!

FOR THE WEAK, NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED!

The afflicted can now be restored to perfect health and bodily energy, at home, without the use of medicine of any kind.

PULVERMACHER'S

ELECTRIC BELTS

AND BANDS,

For self-application to any part of the body, meet every requirement.

The most learned physicians and scientific men of Europe and this country indorse them.

These noted Curative appliances have now stood the test for upward of thirty years, and are protected by Letters-Patent in all the principal countries of the world. They were decreed the only Award of Merit for Electric Appliances at the great World's Exhibitions—Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere—and have been found the most valuable, safe, simple, and efficient known treatment for the cure of disease.

READER, ARE YOU AFFLICTED?

and wish to recover the same degree of health, strength, and energy as experienced in former years? Do any of the following symptoms or class of symptoms meet your diseased condition? Are you suffering from ill-health in any of its many and multifarious forms, consequent upon a lingering, nervous, chronic or functional disease? Do you feel nervous, debilitated, fretful, timid, and lack the power of will and action? Are you subject to loss of memory, have spells of fainting, fullness of blood in the head, feel listless, moping, unfit for business or pleasure, and subject to fits of melancholy? Are your kidneys, stomach, or blood, in a disordered condition? Do you suffer from rheumatism, neuralgia or aches and pains? Have you been indiscreet in early years and find yourself harassed with a multitude of gloomy symptoms? Are you timid, nervous, and forgetful, and your mind continually dwelling on the subject? Have you lost confidence in yourself and energy for business pursuits? Are you subject to any of the following symptoms: Restless nights, broken sleep, nightmare, dreams, palpitation of the heart, bashfulness, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, dizziness in the head, dimness of sight, pimples and blotches on the face and back, and other despondent symptoms? Thousands of young men, the middle aged, and even the old, suffer from nervous and physical debility. Thousands of females, too, are broken down in health and spirits from disorders peculiar to their sex, and who, from false modesty or neglect prolong their sufferings. Why, then, further neglect a subject so productive of health and happiness when there is at hand a means of restoration?

PULVERMACHER'S ELECTRIC BELTS AND BANDS

cure these various diseased conditions, after all other means fail, and we offer the most convincing testimony direct from the afflicted themselves, who have been restored to

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By its great and thorough blood-purifying properties, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt-rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine.

Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, White Swellings, Goitre or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.

In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. Sold by druggists.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Prop'r, World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets

SIZE OF PELLETS.

THE "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC.

No use of taking the large, repulsive, nauseous pills, composed of cheap, crude, and bulky ingredients. These Pellets are scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them. They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For Jaundice, Headache, Constipation, Impure Blood, Pain in the Shoulders, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations from the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious attacks, Pain in region of Kidneys, Internal Fever, Bloated feeling about Stomach, Rush of Blood to Head, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Purgative Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may be said that their action upon the animal economy is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative impress. Age does not impair the properties of these Pellets. They are sugar-coated and inclosed in glass bottles, their virtues being thereby preserved unimpaired for any length of time, in any climate, so that they are always fresh and reliable. This is not the case with pills put up in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes. For all diseases where a Laxative, Alterative, or Purgative, is indicated, these little Pellets will give the most perfect satisfaction. Sold by druggists.

HOW LITTLE WE KNOW.

How little we know of each other;
We pass through the journey of life,
With its struggles, its fears and temptations
Its heart breaking cares and its strife.
We can only see things on the surface
[illegible] glory in sin,
And an unruffled face is no index
To the tumult which rages within.

How little we know of each other:
The man who to-day passes by,
Blest with fortune and honor and titles,
And holding his proud head on high,
May carry a dead secret with him,
Which makes his bosom a hell,
And he, sooner or later, a felon,
May writhe in the prisoner's cell.

How little we know of each other:
The woman of fashion who sneers
At the poor girl, betrayed and abandoned,
And left to her sight and her tears,
May, ere the sun rises to-morrow,
Have the mask rudely torn from her face,
And sink from the height of her glory
To the dark shades of shame and disgrace.

How little we know of each other:
Of [illegible] little we know:
[illegible] under temptation,
[illegible] sorrow and woe.
Then let blessed charity rule us,
[illegible] envy and spite—
[illegible] the skeleton grim in our closet
[illegible] day be brought to the light.

ADDRESS OF REV. EMPEROR WILLIAMS.

[illegible] President, Bishops, and [illegible] You have already heard [illegible] addressed to your honor[illegible] from the General Conference [illegible] of the great Church which I [illegible] the honor to represent before [illegible]. That these words of [illegible] are sincere, I [illegible] assure you. All Christian [illegible] in sympathy in the [illegible]. Denomina[illegible] separate the true [illegible]. As I stand there[illegible] to bear [illegible] from Chris[illegible] you the greetings of a [illegible] ninety-four annual [illegible]. Of these one is in [illegible] one in [illegible] one in North India, one [illegible] in China. [illegible] Conferences, [illegible] South America and [illegible] countries. I [illegible] of eleven [illegible] and sixty-[illegible] of twelve [illegible] and thirty-[illegible] and of one [illegible] twenty-one [illegible] and eight [illegible] In bringing [illegible]

Our churches number sixteen thousand two hundred, and are valued at seventy millions two hundred and thirty-nine thousand four hundred and forty-one dollars. Our parsonages number five thousand three hundred and fifty-five, and are valued at nine millions one hundred and seventy-five thousand four hundred and eighty dollars. Our Sunday-school work receives careful and constant attention. Our schools number nineteen thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and have in them one million seven hundred and ten thousand six hundred and twenty scholars and officers. In these schools we seek to teach the great fundamental doctrines of the Bible, sin, salvation through Christ, heaven for all who accept Christ, and hell for all who refuse to accept Christ.

The benevolent operations of our church occupy a large place in the hearts and labors of our people. Chief among these is our Missionary Society, which aids poor congregations to support their pastors in all lands and among all peoples where our church has a foothold. This society, in this present year (1878), spends six hundred and seventy thousand nine hundred and seven dollars. Of this amount about one half is expended among our poor churches in the United States, especially in the Southern and Western States.

Next to the Missionary Society is our Church Extension Society, which aids in building churches wherever our people need aid. This society has in twelve years raised and expended one million one hundred and sixty-one thousand four hundred and nineteen dollars, and has helped two thousand one hundred and thirty-two different churches. To the poor people and preachers of my own race in the South, since the war, this society has been of very great assistance. Many thousands have been gathered into the church and given the gospel who otherwise must have been as sheep without shepherds.

We have also a Freedmen's Aid Society, which devotes its whole energy in establishing and sustaining schools for colored young men and women. This society has in ten years collected and spent in buying property and supporting teachers, six hundred and fifty-two thousand four hundred and forty-nine dollars.

These schools number twenty, located throughout the South, and have in them three thousand one hundred and seventy students, of whom three hundred and ninety-three are studying for the ministry. During 1877 this society spent seventy thousand four hundred and forty-two dollars and sixty-five cents.

We have also a Sunday-school, Union and Tract Society, which publish our Sunday-school literature and furnish a vast number of tracts for distribution each year. The publishing interests of our Church are centered in two publishing houses, in New York and Cincinnati. The capital of these two houses is over one and a half million dollars. The whole amount of sales for 1877 amounted to nearly a million and a half of dollars. The New York house alone published in 1877 forty-seven million six hundred and sixty-nine thousand eight hundred and ninety-two copies of weekly, semi-monthly and monthly periodical publications for adults and youth, and issued twenty-five new books. The Western house printed and sold in 1877, thirty-four million four hundred and eleven thousand nine hundred and seventy-four, weekly, semi-monthly, monthly and quarterly publications for adults and youth. It added twenty-four new volumes to its books.

We have printing presses in Mexico and China, in India, in Germany and other countries, all printing and circulating books and tracts in different languages in which the glorious doctrines of our common Methodism are taught. It may be of special interest to you to know just what our Church is doing among the people of our race. There are in the Methodist Episcopal Church over two hundred thousand colored people, and about one [illegible] colored ministers. We [illegible] thirteen annual conferences [illegible] mostly of colored ministers and members, and in nearly all [illegible] annual conferences there are [illegible] less colored people. We [illegible] the color line in our [illegible], so that all are re[illegible] cannot give [illegible]. We [illegible] away [illegible] of [illegible] we are doing away with it more rapidly than any other branch of Methodism, and with God's help, we intend to completely wipe out this sin from our Church, and to take a prominent part in wiping it out in our whole nation. In battling with this great sin of caste prejudice, we think it better to have all our people—Americans, Germans, Chinese and Africans—in the same church organization. You have thought differently, and so call yourselves the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America. But on this point we will not quarrel, but will stand side by side in this work for the Master, each rejoicing in the success of the other.

It may also interest you to know just what our Church is doing in the Southern States. We have in what was slave territory, twenty-four Annual Conferences, three hundred and eighty-nine thousand six hundred and fifty-nine members and probationers, two thousand one hundred and twenty-six travelling preachers, four thousand two hundred and two local preachers—total, 396,007. Four thousand three hundred and eighty-one Sunday Schools, two hundred and seventy-two thousand seven hundred and fifty-five officers and scholars, and eight million seven hundred and thirty-two thousand seven hundred and sixteen dollars' worth of churches and parsonages.

In point of doctrine and missionary spirit, the Methodist Church clings to old-fashioned Methodism. She rejoices in good old-fashioned revivals, and is determined that none of her children shall outdo her in good works for the blessed Master. The number of deaths each year among us indicate how truly it is appointed unto men once to die. In twenty-one years, eight hundred and sixty-one preachers, and two hundred and ninety-one thousand seven hundred and thirty-two members died. In 1877 there were three hundred and eighty-three deaths a week, or 55 daily. From all points of our communion comes the blessed word "our people die well."

And now, having said thus much of my own church, I wish to express my great joy at the prosperity which has attended yours. You are the youngest daughter in the family of Episcopal Methodism; but you were born a vigorous, strong child, and you bid fair to have a vigorous and rapid growth. You have your paper and book concern started, and have begun institutions of learning. These enterprises indicate your faith and determination. May the Lord bless you all in these matters. You have the true Methodist church polity. You have sound doctrines. You have a loyal membership, and you have the good wishes and prayers of the Methodist world. Go on, in the name of the Lord, and He will give you a great and glorious victory in winning souls. May He grant this to you, is my prayer. Amen.

BISHOP HOLSEY'S REPLY TO THE MESSENGER FROM THE M. E. CHURCH.

Mr. President, and brethren, and you sir, it certainly affords us great pleasure to receive you as a fraternal messenger from the great M. E. Church.

It is true that we have not so much education and wealth, but we are not one whit behind in love. Taking a retrospective glance at our former history in respect to Methodistic bodies in this country, we feel proud that we have succeeded so well. Take our history—we can assure you, from incipiency no prejudice found a place among the membership of our church.

The upheavings of society in this country made it a natural cause for the separation of the two races that constitute the Methodist church in the South. These causes, it is unnecessary for me to attend to; suffice it to say, that a new relation was brought about by a new ecclesiastic body, yet this new relation did not change our fomer love and respect that was entertained for the mother church. But the whole idea was for the purpose of evangelizing the world.

While there have been considerable difficulties between us and other colored Methodists in this country, yet there has never been but little between us and you, and indeed, in many instances there has been a very cordial and friendly feeling existing between us—instance our visit to Round Lake camp meeting. You there forgot to look in our faces to see whether we were white or colored.

Prejudice on account of color begins to dwindle into insignificance and the warmth of love seems to influence every heart. The weakening effects of embarrasment receded, and I felt myself a welcome guest among the people of God. When myself and my colleague Bishop arrived at Round Lake, I looked to him as my hero, and expected him to lead the way; but so great was the contrast between this and that country and our former relation, that we both failed to come up to my expectations.

I am very glad to know that your great wealth, and your great strength and talent have been so largely and so extensively consecrated to the education and christianization of the colored race, and in doing so much to lift the Negro from the state of degradation and superstition.

As the youngest daughter of the Methodist family, though not so large, yet we feel that we can, "under God," do something for the cause of Christ in spreading scripture holiness over these lands. With over one hudred thousand members, and about fifteen hundred preachers—travelling and lay—and a grand Sunday army with four bishops, the grace of God as a lover, and Christ our saviour the fulcrum, we will assist in this great work of evangelization.

We welcome you as Methodists, and meet you as if we had a personal and former acquaintance. You may be on one side of the waters and I on the other, yet when I learn that you are a Methodist, I at once know you.

Some have said that Methodism is christianity in earnest, and others have invented words to express its nature; but I believe true Methodism is the religion of the New Testament, as taught by Mr. Wesley. We are going to stand side by side to perpetuate the great work of Methodism in this and other countries. Our church retains no prejudice against any of the other Methodist bodies. There is one thing we like about your church, and that is, that every one stands with you, not on color or previous condition, but upon character alone.

In behalf of my church—and I speak for the whole connection—I bid you God speed, and pray that the blessings of heaven may rest upon you.

Power of the Bible over Heathens in Japan.

A well authenticated report comes to us from Japan, forcibly illustrating the marvelous power of the Holy Scriptures. It is summarized as follows: "Several copies of the Scriptures and some other Christian books were recently given by the American Board Mission to the Governor of a prison at Otsu, Japan, who passed them over to an educated prisoner in jail for manslaughter. Soon a fire broke out in the prison, but the entire body of prisoners, numbering nearly 100, instead of improving their opportunity to make their escape, assisted in putting out the flames, and remained to a man to be again imprisoned. Such a remarkable circumstance occasioned inquiry as to the cause, when it appeared that the scholar had been so impressed with the truth of Christianity that he had taught it to his fellow prisoners, and Christian principles, combined with his personal influence, had such power over them as to restrain them from fleeing when the doors of their prison were opened. The scholar was consequently pardoned, but he remained in Otsu to teach the prisoners. He has opened a Chinese school for young men, where Christianity is taught, and is now preparing to reprint a Chinese commentary on the gospel of John."

The Liberia Observer of Oct. 26 says: "The sum of $2,758 93 has been expended for repairs on the Monrovia Church, which are not yet finished. All of this sum except a few dollars are contributed in Monrovia. The church was reopened last Sunday. Brother Kellogg, on behalf of the Church, made an appeal for $500 and succeeded in obtaining $306.03, of which $122 was immediately paid in cash. The Sabbath-school gave $12 04; it had previously subscribed $120 towards the work. The spirit of the members of the Church and community cannot be too highly commended, considering the numerous calls which have been lately made upon them, and the dullness of the season. One member, a man of family in poor health, having no money, gave three weeks' services gratuitously." Rev. Messrs. Payne, Pitman and Flagler took part in the exercises of the day.

BY REV. J. MITCHELL.

MURDER NOT A POLITICAL QUESTION, BUT A MORAL QUESTION. MURDERERS MUST HANG.

It is some time since I troubled you with a letter. The Fall Conferences being now over, and your battery in working order, allow me to utter a word on the duty of the law.

Reliable information from your State brings fearful statements of murder for opinion's sake.

What is the pulpit of your State doing to arrest this fearful course of crime, that most assuredly will bring down the swift judgment of God on the State and nation?

What is our pulpit, the Methodist pulpit, doing? Are the men therein "dumb dogs who cannot bark," "slumbering watchmen" who care not for the coming sword of the Angel of Vengeance? David's comparatively slender crime of numbering Israel brought a plague that destroyed seventy thousand people. The crime of our Christian watchmen is much greater, and the presumption is that God will sweep the banks of the Mississippi with much greater destruction.

It was my intention last year to have written you on this subject, as I informed you at the time, and to follow up the article in the Atlanta Advocate, "Blood for Blood," of July 18th, aimed more directly at the Rifle and K. K. Clubs of South Carolina; but the plague fell so swiftly thereafter on your section of the country, that I could not find it in my heart to utter a word while it lasted. That first visitation of the storm of Divine displeasure has subsided, and time for reflection is given us—but what are the uses of this relief?—the renewal of the scenes of blood and crime.

It is time for our pulpit to do its duty in the defence of God's love, for all other pulpits in your section, for obvious reasons, are powerless. Who of the Protestant ministers of your State, or any other Southern State, outside our own church, have dared to defend the commandment "Thou shalt not kill?" And, by the way, how many of our own men have dared to take that as a text, and defend it against the enemies of God and man? And yet, because of the fearful contempt the people and their rulers pour on it, Divine displeasure burns in manifest judgments on the section where this crime is most wantonly committed.

When the sword falls, let not ministers think they can escape; if they have been indifferent to the claims of the law, they will suffer as unfaithful watchmen.

But you may say: "What shall ministers and Christian men do?" Why, stand by the law as your fortress and citadel. God's love is a tower of strength; behind it you are safe, for heaven is pledged to defend or avenge you. Do not take up arms. He who taketh the sword shall perish by the sword. "He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity; he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and faith of the saints." Rev. 13: 10. Let our colored men, especially, avoid all oath-bound secret societies of a political character. Let the faith and patience of the true Christian character shine out clearly in this dark hour. Fear not. God rules and will deliver.

But having said this to our suffering fellow citizens and brethren, allow me a word to your magistrates, local rulers and jurymen. Murderers must be tried, convicted and executed according to the law of the land, and that law is clear and well understood.

"THOU SHLT NOT KILL" is not a human law, but a divine law, rising above all human authority, and has been abundantly endorsed by the Christian notions. The Old and New Testaments are part and parcel of the common law of England, and by right of our inheritance they constitute part of the common law of the United States; nor do the civil or Napoleonic codes of the Louisiana purchase impair the power or effect of this obligation. That law made and provided in the case is as follows: "He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death. And if a man lie not in wait, but God delivereth him into his hand, then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

But if a man come presumptuously on his neighbor to slay him with guile, thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die. Exodus xxi, 12-14.

But if any man hate his neighbor, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him and smite him mortally that he die, and flee into one of these cities; then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die. Thine eye shalt not pity him, but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee. Dent., xix, 11-13.

Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the mouth of witnesses; but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die. Moreover ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is guilty of death, but he shall be surely put to death.

So ye shall not pollute the land wherein ye are, for blood it defileth the land and the land can not be cleansed of the blood that is therein, but by the blood of him that shed it. Defile not, therefore, the land which ye shall inhabit wherein I dwell; for I the Lord dwell among the children of Israel." Numbers xxxv, 30-34.

This is the moral quality and spirit of the statutory enactments of this Christian nation, as well as of our common law. This is the propulsive power of the American pulpit, when not apostate. The language of court and forum, press and pulpit, when God impelled, rings out the thunder echoes of Sinai: "Thou shalt not kill!" BLOOD FOR BLOOD! The sword of the avenger must fall on the murderer to purge the land from blood, and turn away the wrath of God from the nation, for this law he will maintain, though faithless magistrates and commonwealths may fall.

If a people who elect their own magistrates allow their officers to trifle with this law, he will take the elective officers away, and give stronger forms of government, which will honor the requirements of the Divine Ruler.

This thing of impaneling eleven or twelve hundred country juries, under solemn oath, in the ten or twelve Southern States, every six months, in which the pledge is made, according to the law stated above, to search out and bring to justice these enemies of God and man, the murderers of men; to be followed by willful ignorance and blindness, a contemptuous spurning of the divine authority, the overthrow of justice and sale of equity; this wholesale perjury in the most serious of all cases must come to an end, and the men who kill must hang, or God will give you a stronger form of government.

Trust in God.

Several German princes were once extolling the glory of their realms. One boasted of his excellent vine yards; another of his hunting grounds; another of his mines. At last, Aberland, Duke of Wurtemburg, took up the subject and said: "I own I am a poor prince, and can vie with none of these things; nevertheless, I, too, possess a noble jewel in my dominion; for, were I to be without attendants, either in the open country or the wild forests, I could ask the first of my subjects whom I met to stretch himself upon the ground, and confidently place myself upon his bosom, and fall asleep without the slightest apprehension of injury. Was not this a precious jewel for a prince? I, however, have something better, for I can rest my head and my heart in the lap of God's providence, and upon the bosom of Jesus Christ with a perfect assurance that nether man nor devil can touch me there.—Gotthold.

From the Minutes of the late session of our Foochow Conference we gather that there are 5 American preachers, and 39 native preachers in full connection. There are also 26 native local preachers or helpers. There are 8 appointments "to be supplied," a Mission press, a monthly gazette, a Biblical Institute, an American Church for the care and service of the foreigners. The work is divided into six districts, in each of which one American missionary has an appointment—one having an appointment in two districts. The six districts are each under the care of a native preacher as presiding elder.

The statistics of the Shanghai Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at their late annual meeting, show 4 American missionaries, 10 native preachers, and one colporteur. Their work is divided into six districts, in charge of three presiding elders. There are 10 Sunday-schools, 172 scholars, and 18 teachers. They sold 4,309 volumes, and donated 301 volumes and 1,200 sheet tracts.

Habit.

Habit is a cable; we weave a thread of it every day, and at last we cannot break it. The chains of habit are generally too small to be felt, until they are too strong to be broken. To one who murmured, because he rebuked him for a small matter, Plato replied, "Custom is no small matter. A custom or habit of life does frequently alter the natural inclination for good or for evil." After a series of years winding up a watch at a certain hour, it becomes so much of a routine as to be done in utter unconsciousness; meanwhile the mind and body are engaged in something different.

Burke relates that for a long time he had been under the necessity of frequenting a certain place every day; and that so far from finding pleasure in it, he was affected with a sort of uneasiness and disgust; and yet if by any means he passed by the usual time of going thither he felt remarkably uneasy and was not quiet until he was in his usual track.

Our destinies go with us out of our cradles.

'Tis education forms the common mind,
Just as the twig is bent the tree is inclined.
Children, like ozlers, take the hand,
As they first are fashioned always stand.

The statistical reports for the Protestant Episcopal Church, just compiled, show that there are 48 dioceses, 13 missionary districts, 63 bishops, 3,330 clergymen, 2,900 parishes, and 312,718 communicants. The last item shows a very large increase. During the year 66 clergymen died and 193 were ordained—93 as deacons and 100 as priests. The baptisms numbered 42,054 and the confirmations 25,190. The total of contributions was $5,788,266. In the Sunday-schools there were 265,555.

The Philadelphia North American warns the South that in 1861 the South appealed to the great body of the American people, and they came in companies, regiments, brigades, and divisions, and remained until their work was supposed to be done. They now find it was but partially accomplished, and, if they come again under this new appeal, they will come to stay and settle in the South in such numbers that they will be able to protect their rights of person, property, or opinion, from outrage for all future time.

An exchange says: "There is a steady decline of Presbyterianism in connection with the Southern Assembly. In 1876 there were ten churches reported with a membership of over 400: now there are only eight. There were then 18 churches with a membership numbering over 300; now there are 23. In 1876 there were 54 churches with a membership of 200 and upwards; now there are 51; 1,493 churches number less than 100, and 87 with from 2 to 10 members."

Rev. Dr. Thoburn writes from Calcutta under date of Nov 7: "We have blessings here in Calcutta. We have much trial to endure here, but God leads as on. I go to the country to-morrow to baptize five Hindus. Miss Layton is a very valuable addition to our work in Calcutta. Conference is a great trial to us here. I shall have to travel either 800 miles by sea or 2,000 miles by rail in order to get to Conference at Madras."

Be a working Christian, or you will be a worthless one. Christ's design and desire in saving you was to save others through you. Work not to get saved, but because you are saved. Your personal piety needs exercise and airing. Thank God that religion makes you useful. Golden opportunities are within your reach on every hand. —Marvin.

Rev. T. S. Johnson, M. D., writes from Shanjehanpore, India: "I recently baptized 86 orphan boys, 4 adults, and 3 of their children. I am worked so closely that I am beginning to feel weary and desirous of rest, but the work is so pressing that I cannot get away from it."

Smith & Forbes, boots and shoes, of Charlotte, N. C., and Boston, made an assignment. Nothing definite is known in regard to the condition of the firm, but it is reported the liabilities are from $125,000 to $140,000 and the assets nominally $10,000. Most of the indebtedness is to houses in Boston and vicinity.

A fire on Main street, below Fourth, Cincinnati, destroyed P. Wilson & Sons' extensive carriage trimming and saddlery establishment; also the works and unoccupied building adjoining. Loss on the former, $140,000, amount entirely covered by insurance. On latter, estimated loss forty thousand dollars. Wayne & Sons, stock cutlery, next above, badly damaged by water. Thermometer at zero. There was great difficulty in handling the hose.

The hostile Cheyenne Indians imprisoned at Fort Robinson, Nebraska, on being informed that they would be taken back to their agency in the Indian territory, became sullen and determined to die before consenting. A strong guard was placed over the prison. At night, on the 9th, they jumped from the windows, and with revolvers concealed since their capture, fired on the guard, wounding four, two fatally, and made for the prairie. The main guard rushed out, and shot and killed over forty. One hundred and sixty cavalrymen started in pursuit.

Conference Statistics.

Rev. T. E. Madden, the statistical secretary for Louisiana Conference for last year, makes some good suggestions in the matter of correct statistics. He says: "It is very desirable to have correct statistics of the Louisiana Conference at its coming session. In looking over the journals of the sessions of '77 and '78, I find some very serious errors that must not occur again. One or two of them are of my own making; but some of them are so very far from being correct that I am ashamed of having them appear as they do. The statistical tables of an Annual Conference are very hard to compile exactly. One reason why we have not had correct statistics in the past is the fact that we do not attach enough importance to them. We are apt to say, 'It is near enough, I guess that will do.' And this is a mistake, in consequence of which, mischievous discrepancies are found to exist. Let us make up our minds to have correct statistics for 1879. The statistics are compiled to give us important information we can obtain nowhere else. Let us be sure we are right in every particular. Our statistics embrace about thirty-five different questions, among the rest that of

MEMBERSHIP.

Let us see to it that we report our members correctly. It will not do to guess at this. The past year has made sad changes in our numbers, undoubtedly. Yellow fever has taken a large number of them. Now, the only way to have a correct report, is to take the record and correct it. If there are any you are in doubt about, make a list, and ask your congregations publicly if any present can give you any information in regard to them. Straighten up your record on the membership question. If you have names on the record that ought not to be there, cross them out. Do not guess so many, and put it down. Have it all in black and white, then we will have a basis on which to secure correct statistics in the future. If we report too many, we injure the brother who succeeds us, if he cannot find them all. If we have had heavy losses by removals and deaths, find out how many of each, and then you will be able to account for all committed to your care.

These remarks apply to our Sabbath schools as well as membership. It looks very strange to report the same number of teachers and scholars each year. Go over the roll and see that your report is a copy of it. Look up every one who ought to be on that roll, and find out what has become of those missing. You may have an increase by a little faithfulness here. Then comes the question of PROPERTY.

I have found it exceedingly difficult to settle this property question. Every year there are changes in the Districts and Charges, and unless we are very careful to obtain correct information, we drop out a church or parsonage, and of course, our statistics are incorrect. Let us report the number and value of our churches and parsonages correctly, and then we can readily see where the increase is, for we do not believe in a decrease here. Then comes

BENEVOLENT COLLECTIONS.

The taking of these statistics was a decided improvement over the previous year. But I think we can improve still more. Let us see that we write plainly, so that it can be easily read. We owe this to our secretary as well as to ourselves. We ought to have all the reports from the charges in at the close of the second day's session. After they are in the hands of your secretary, they must then be copied twice. While the rest of the Conference are enjoying themselves, your secretary must be hard at work on his report."

Grant and the Corkenians.

Ex-President Grant having made a tour of Ireland has gone to London to await the steamer Richmond to take him to India. His reception was enthusiastic in all Ireland except at Cork, where the Council refused a public reception, and where some of the Council denounced Grant as an enemy of Irishmen and their religion. This attack on Grant has awakened quite a feeling in this country, and on all sides are heard denunciations of the Corkonians for dragging in questions of religious belief where it had no place. Grant [illegible], and in his Des Moines [illegible] in a few words showed [illegible] that he understood that [illegible] great contests [illegible] on [illegible] between [illegible] and Catholic [illegible] that the American nation was [illegible] the hands of rulers true [illegible] or opinions which ask her to abrogate her own right to control and maintain her national independence. Protestantism in no way asks her to make this surrender, while Catholicism boldly proclaims that when the Church and State conflict the Church must rule.

The exact words in Grant's speech, which aroused the ire of the Cork Catholics, are as follows:

"Let us labor to add all needful guarantees for the more perfect security of free thought, free speech, and free press, pure morals, unfettered religious sentiments, and of equal rights and privileges to all men irrespective of nationality, color or religion. Encourage free schools, and resolve that not one dollar of money appropriated for their support, no matter how raised, shall be appropriated to the support of any sectarian school. Resolve that neither the State nor nation, or both combined, shall support institutions of learning other than those sufficient to afford every child growing up in the land the opportunity of a good common school education, unmixed with sectarian, pagan or atheistic tenets. Leave the matter of religion to the family altar, the church, and the private school supported entirely by private contributions. Keep the church and State forever separate."

Governor Nicholls' Message.

The message submitted at the opening of the present session of the Legislature of Louisiana, by Governor Nicholls, contained the first public expression of his opinion, after investigation of the lawlessness prior to and during the last election. The Governor devotes a considerable portion of his message to a presentation of, and apology for the disgraceful record. He regrets the acts of violence committed, "practically beyond the reach of the constituted authorities," by "men who substitute their own ideas of justice and methods of remedy for the machinery provided for the enforcement of right and the punishment of wrong."

Speaking of the origin of the Tensas troubles he says the visit of twenty to twenty-five armed men to the house of Fairfax (Republican candidate for Congress) was utterly wrong—"in my opinion, utterly without justification;" and, also, "I do believe it was to influence his course and the local campaign in the parish." The Governor endeavors to demonstrate the folly of this act, by asserting the "completely defenceless position" of the whites who were in a minority of one to ten in relation to the blacks of that parish. But he makes clear that the whites of Tensas had a better perception of their resources, for "assistance was immediately called from neighboring parishes, and when it came it found the people of Tensas, white and black, almost solidly arrayed against each other." Again we quote:

"An armed body of white men, acting under a warrant for the arrest of Fairfax, who, it was supposed, had passed into Concordia, entered that parish for the purpose of the execution of the warrant, and whilst there some eight or nine colored men were killed."

The operations of lynch law in Ouachita and St. Charles receive passing notice, while the greater disturbances of Natchitoches and Caddo are apparently deemed unworthy of any mention whatever. The Governor's testimony against men of his own party is severe; but he has failed on this occasion to utter the reproof which seems to be required of him.

His declaration that these outbreaks under "lynch law" occasionally happen as in other States of the Union is subject to qualifications. The visiting of an opposing candidate for Congress by twenty to twenty-five men, with rifles, to influence a local canvass, is a custom which does not prevail North of Mason and Dixon's line, and this method of persuasion is entirely too frequent to be denominated an occasional one. A remarkable fatality about these disturbances, where assistance is immediately called from adjoining parishes, is that they occur on or before the eve of an election, and invariably in Republican strongholds. This has strangely escaped the attention of the Governor, for the notable peculiarity of the Tensas troubles is that the blacks and whites were as ten to one, and the control of the parish was the key to the election of the Congressman for the Fifth District. Therefore, the local canvass opened by a call of twenty to twenty-five armed men upon the Republican candidate, the summons of immediate assistance from adjoining parishes and the State of Mississippi to influence his course. Results—Dispersion of all opposition to the Democratic candidates; and their induction into office as a part of the machinery of the State government, which Governor Nicholls is powerless to use in attaining the ends of justice!

This outlines that local self-government which reigns. It fails to pay the interest on the State debt, or find a bank or association of capitalists willing to rescue the State from financial disaster. It fails to collect the State taxes from thousands of property holders, or legislate for the improvement of the commonwealth. The Governor's message is a confession of this. The failure of two Legislatures, and the constitutional amendments, suggests to him entire constitutional revision as the only remaining measure of relief." The local self-government of the bulldozers does not operate like a charm in the direction of reform. They remit the unfinished work to a constitutional convention—or carry the watch to the blacksmith for repairs.

It is but just to the Governor to say that he lives in hopes of a better condition of things, with other good citizens of the State, and there is a frankness about many of his statements which bears witness to his sincerity.

Polygamy Doomed.

At last Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the law prohibiting plurality of wives is constitutional. The plea set up by the Mormons against the law was that as the right to have many wives was a matter of religious belief with them, that, therefore the constitution of the United States protect them in their practice. But the Chief Justice, speaking for the entire court, declared that this law is not in conflict with the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom, and showed that the right of Congress to legislate for the protection of public morals and for the protection of the fundamental principles of society, can not be abridged by the Mormon claim of religious belief, any more than it could by the claim of certain other religious beliefs, that human sacrifices are necessary, or that widows must be burned with the bodies of their dead husbands. There was some light difference of opinion as to the admissibility of the testimony of one of the witnesses, given on the former trial in Utah, but the two or three justices who doubted its admissibility concurred with their associates on all other points of the case, and there is absolutely nothing left in the whole matter for further judicial determination or controversy.

The next thing in order is for Congress to expell that member from Utah who has more than one wife, and then let the law be enforced in Utah by the United States Government without fear or favor, until this curse of polygamy is wiped out. This is the decision as given in a special to the Inter-Ocean:

No. 180. George Reynolds, plaintiff in error vs. United States, in error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah. This was a case brought up by appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah to test the constitutionality of the acts of Congress prohibiting polygamy. Reynolds, the plaintiff in error, was tried in the Third Judicial Court of Utah for bigamy, and found guilty, and the Supreme Court of the Territory, upon appeal, affirmed judgment. The case comes here upon a writ of error, plaintiff pleading the unconstitutionality of the law prohibiting bigamous marriages, the justification of religious belief, and various unimportant legal technicalities. This court in a long and carefully prepared opinion, delivered by the Chief Justice, holds that polygamy is not under the protection of the clause of the Federal Constitution which prohibits interference with religious belief; that the plea of religious convictions is not a valid defense; that Congress did not step outside the limits of its constitutional powers in passing the law for the suppression of polygamy in Utah, and that the judgment of the Superior Court of that Territory must be affirmed. Justice Field dissented as far as related to the admissibility of certain evidence introduced in the lower court, but, upon the main question, the constitutionality of Congress prohibiting polygamous marriages, there was perfect unanimity.

French Republicans.

Republicanism has had a great victory in France. An election has just been held. Of forty-seven Conservatives whose times had expired only thirteen were re-elected, whils all retiring Republican Senators were returned. The general result shows fifteen Conservatives and sixty-four Republicans elected. The Senate will have a Republican majority of about fifty-seven.

The success of the French Republic is one of the greatest events of the day. The growth of popular government is having its effects in many ways. Protestantism is coming to the front, as is seen by the fact that a daily protestant newspaper is about to be started in Paris, $40,000 having already been subscribed. The protestant churches are preparing for a more aggressive evangelism. It is even proposed to erect a monument to Coligny, one of the chief victims of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, when Protestants were slaughtered by order of the government, and whose slaughter was especially commended by the Pope. Thus step by step does popular government by the people, come to the front, assuring the nations of the world, and as a result freedom of religious thought and action increases.

The Dallas, Texas, Commercial, mentions that a number of its State exchanges agree that no man should be allowed to vote, who does not present his poll-tax receipt. But why not require a clear receipt for all taxes? If there is any virtue in restricting suffrage to those who actually support the government, let the restriction have a broad foundation.

Sunday-School and Tract Anniversaries.

The Anniversaries of the Sunday-school Union, Tract Society of the M. E. Church, and the Eleventh Sunday-school Congress, will be held in Buffalo, N. Y., from Saturday to Tuesday, Jan. 18-21, 1879. The following themes will be discussed in the Congress: The Pulpit and our Children; The Home and our Children; Our Children and the Work of the Holy Spirit; How to reach the Neglected American Masses with the Gospel; The distinctive Doctrines and Usages of Methodism; How to Train our Children and Youth to an intelligent and catholic loyalty to the doctrines and Usages of the M. E. Church; Our Tract literature—its value and development; The Pastor and the Sunday-school; The Assembly—a new departure; The Supplemental Lesson. During the Congress a specimen Sunday-school session will be conducted — Dr. Vincent as superintendent.

The following brethren are expected to assist in the Anniversaries and Congress: Rev. W. W. Case, of Akron, Ohio; Rev. T. L. Flood, of Meadville, Pa.; Rev. J. M. Freeman, of New York; Lewis Miller, Esq., of Akron, Ohio; Rev. J. H. Vincent, of New York.

OUR Southern Methodism.

TENNESSEE.

Rev. James Pickett, Lebanon: "We have kept enough of the army together to keep the church out of debt this winter. Union Hill is doing as well as our country churches generally do. Father Seay stands here to do battle for the Master. He is a man of strong courage, and vigorous in body for a man of his age—86 years, over fifty of them spent in the ministry. Our Sabbath-school is in a very prosperous condition. We had a Christmas tree bearing many kinds of fruit."

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. Isaac Mosely: "We have had a hard time on the Crawford circuit last year, but we dedicated a new house of worship. The Church Extension Society gave us fifty dollars, and we thank God our house and land is paid for. Last year we gained 22 members, and baptized 42 children."

TEXAS.

Rev. J. W. Robinson, Calvert: "I arrived at my appointment Dec. 29, and found the church in high spirits, watching for their new conference appointee. The inclemency of the weather has prevented the people from turning out as they otherwise would have done, so I have not been able to create much of a SOUTHWESTERN spirit, though I have managed to secure 18 subscribers for this place, and 2 from Ellis county—20 in all. We are doing all we can to push the canvass. We are preparing to build a parsonage. The lumber is on the ground, and the carpenters at work. The next object in view is to place a good fence around our church. On the night of January 2nd I solemnized in matrimony, Miss Sallie Tucker and Mr. Henry Reeves, the former an efficient member of our church."

Rev. W. S. Molloy, Houston. "I will have the minutes out in a few days after I receive them from the secretary. I commence my first round at Houston, next Saturday Jan 11. I preached at Second Church last Sunday. I gave them a talk for the SOUTHWESTERN. I promise to do better this year.

LOUISIANA.

B. J. Donnell, Monroe: "At the fourth quarterly conference held here on the 10th inst., the following resolution was offered by me, and adopted unanimously by the conference:

'Resolved, That this Quarterly Conference of Monroe, having been the happy recipient of the official visitations of our much esteemed Presiding Elder, Rev. J. Gould, since he has been on this work, hereby pledge our obedience and compliance with his fatherly advice, and we hail with gratitude his official ability and Christian purity, and we pray that he may live long to preside over us and this district.'

Our love for, and confidence in Elder Gould urges us to ask you to publish this."

FOR THE SOUTHWESTERN.

Only One.

Corinne, a mulatto woman of sixty, was my servant. When she came to me, a stranger, I asked her for her references. She answered, somewhat coldly, "I have none. I lived with Mrs. S—— fifteen years. She is dead." This was sufficient. Something in the unusually characteristic face and dignified bearing of the woman attracted me, despite her reticence of manner. I engaged her. Punctually, perfectly, every duty was performed, but in silence. To any questions I asked, her replies were respectful, but brief. She had been legally married at the house of her former employer, and lived in rooms, two squares away, which were furnished comfortably.

Have you any children, I asked one day. Her sad face flushed and darkened, her eyes looked far away, as she answered slowly, "I do not know." Half an hour afterward she came into my room, and looking down into my face said brokenly: "Thirty years ago I was a slave. Two little children, one three and one five, called me mammy. I was taken from them, brought to New Orleans and sold. I have never heard from my babies since. I hope they are dead; yes, I hope and pray that they are dead. You do not know what I know. If they are alive and on the old place, they have never been taught right from wrong. They must be very ignorant and low. I cannot think of them as my sense tells me they must be." "I loved my children," she repeated, "but I hope they are dead."

"Mrs. S—— was very good to me. It is the only place I have ever worked since I was free. She was a Christian woman. She was very patient with me, talked to me, taught me, and told me how to be respectable. At first I wanted all my wages; she taught me it was right to save my money, and told me how to use it. After I was married, I bought everything in our little rooms myself, and I mean to be respectable as long as I live.

"When I fretted for my children, she comforted me and told me God was good and I must be patient, (but the tears stood in her eyes when she looked at her own) very patient, and do my best. Her sympathy comforted and strengthened me. I have tried hard, very hard to be good. I have Indian blood in my veins, and sometimes there comes a feeling of hate that makes me afraid of myself; a hate of my father (the low, impassioned voice grew hard now). My father was a gentleman. I have the dispositions of three races."

She paused suddenly and left me.

Three races: the negro hair beneath her snowy kerchief was sprinkled with gray. The high cheek bones, straight features, the thin compressed lips, her light color, and stately manner; were these her inheritance? Was it all true?

Months passed in the usual routine of daily life. Corinne was herself, silent and faithful, trying to old be patient; when her husband came one day with the news that her children were in the city, looking for her. She brought them to me, with an anguish in her eyes I had learned to understand.

"These are my children."

Her worst forebodings had been fully realized. Christian teaching, the influence of the home, she had tried so hard to keep respectable, had little effect on natures for twenty-five years hardened by brutalizing influences. Corinne bravely met her duty by being faithful even to these. But her trials were almost over. Death comes to weary hearts, a merciful release. Her last words, feebly uttered, were: "I can understand now—God is very good."

Dallas Correspondence.

Such a day for Dallas! Snowed up, and frozen up, too. Everything on runners; improvised sleighs thick as mosquitoes in summer time. Such laughable "turn-outs!" Bed quilts of brilliant green and yellow for buffalo robes, dry goods boxes on little sleds, buggies on runners, heavy wagon-beds gliding along on the same support; everything pressed into service, anything for a sleigh-ride, seems to be the motto of the hour. But, notwithstanding all the cold, and the inconvenience occasioned to people unaccustomed to such extremes, church matters are in a prosperous condition. Our first quarterly meeting of this year was a grand time in Zion. Our church building the N. M. E. Church, is the best and most comfortably arranged church in the city, and with that peculiar quality in her aggressive movements which always results in a return of vigor to the object advancing. In the spirit of our Divine Leader, we move steadily onward, with that sure growth that bespeaks, to all thinking minds, a long future of substantial life. Our general prayer meeting last Wednesday night, was a season of rejoicing to all present. The room was well filled, and many testified to the presence of the Holy Spirit, while tears of rejoicing filled eyes whose sorrowful shadows told but too plainly of the griefs and disappointments of this life. Our Christmas entertainment for the little folks was a success indeed. The large audience-room was richly decorated with evergreens; a snow house stood just behind the altar, natural as life, with its panoply of icicles gleaming in the brilliant light of the chandeliers, like the veritable frozen daggers of the Ice King himself. Within this miniature building were stored the gifts from friend to friend, and Santa Claus, in his most regal costume, kept watch and guard till the evening's entertainment of songs and speeches was over, when, with a few witty and appropriate remarks, he distributed the presents, while the Sunday-school teachers supplied the children with candies, oranges, etc., etc. Many were the recipients of most elegant presents. Two of our finest bibles, from the Book Concern, three beautiful castors, a very fine, large chromo, were among the number we were fortunate enough to see unwrapped. The crowded house was vacated slowly, amidst lively conversation and warmest wishes for a joyful dawning of the morrow. Three incidents of the evening fastened upon our minds with that lingering hold, which will make them a part of memory's treasures forever. The pastor's opening prayer, full of gratitude, love and thankfulness, the salutatory, by Emma Tabor, and closing address, by Nellie Knowles. The latter articles were written by Prof. Breese for the occasion, and are articles of great merit, rich thought, tender feeling, glad welcoming, loving farewell, and were all stamped with indelible impression upon our memory. Our pastor holds the reins with a firm hand, and an eye single to the advancement of "Emanuel's Band." Onward is plainly stamped on his every movement. I know of no church so united in her determination to go forward in the path the Master has marked out for her.

Sitting here in the quiet of this the first night of our week of prayer, confined to my room by illness, my thoughts revert to the planting of the church in this place, and as I look about, I am constrained to say, "Surely, the seed has fallen on goodly ground!" If we stride on thus in the coming years, where may we not stand? Brethren, pray for our advancement in the Lord. The fields about us are rich with the promise of a magnificent harvest. God grant us the spiritual power to garner in souls now out, sinking beneath the burning sun of sin in all its meridian of heat. Longingly our eyes look upon them, hungrily our hearts seek after them. Daily our lips beseech God's infinite mercy to save them from eternal woe. Oh, may a kind heaven speed the day when Christmas times shall know no other sounds of rejoicing but those arising from hearts overflowing with thankfulness for the boon of a world saved by the Blood of the Atonement!

ARLINGTON.

Dallas, Texas, Jany. 8th, 1879.

Holly Springs.

We have just experienced the most protracted period of severe cold weather that has been known here for many years; sufficient it is believed to destroy the last germ of yellow fever. Notwithstanding this, however, our city authorities and citizens generally are using every possible means to have every house and every particle of furniture that has been in contact with the fever thoroughly cleansed and purified by paint, whitewash, carbolic soap, exposure to the weather, etc. With these precautions we do not think it possible for the fever to break out in our midst again, unless again imported. The latter, however, will be most scrupulously guarded against in the future.

Business has revived, every vacancy made by the fearful scourge has been filled, and were it not for new faces and the absence of familiar ones, one would not think it possible that the terms "blighted" and "desolate" could ever have been appropriately applied to our fair and busy little city.

The schools have all opened except one branch of our public schools, the teachers of which have not yet returned from the North. Shaw University began its second term on the 2nd of January, with its usual opening number, and many new names are daily being added to the roll.

A new desire for education seems awakening in the minds of many hitherto indifferent, and a large majority of those in attendance have their minds fixed upon completing one of the regular college courses. The teachers are competent and thorough, the students earnest and resolute in their studies, quiet and orderly in their manners and have reason to be proud of the advancement they are making.

There is still room for others in the college classes, and it is hoped that scores of young men and women will continue to avail themselves of the golden opportunities now afforded them for fitting themselves for usefulness, happiness and success in life. Catalogues will be sent to any who desire them and all desired information relative to the school will be promptly given to any who will address the President,

A Benevolent Society.

The Ladies Benevolent Society No. 1, of Murfreesboro, and No. 56 of the General order of the State, was incorporated December 22th, 1877, with the following officers: Mrs. Tamor Daniel, President; Mrs. Violet Garrett, Vice President; Mrs. Fannie Jordan, Secretary, Mrs. Addie Simmons, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Callie Stamps, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Rachel Waller, Treasurer; Mrs. Lucy Blackwell, Assistant Treasurer.—Mr. Adam Young, of Nashville, officiated on the occasion. This Society is under the leadership of one that never fails, and whatever her hands find to do she does it with all her might. Sister Daniel is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and a subscriber of the SOUTHWESTERN. She is one of the influential ladies of Murfreesboro. I predict a long and useful life for the Society under her guidance, and the lady officers she has around her.

A Good Idea.

N——, Ind.

DEAR BROTHER: I have just given church letters to Mary K—— and Mamie K——, who have removed to your city. They are very worthy people. Please call on them. Mr. K—— is in the sewing machine business and not a member of our church, a good citizen, and attended our church here.

S— N—,
Pastor M. E. Church, N—, Ind.

The above is taken from a postal card received by one of our pastors in Tennessee. He called on the parties named. Result—found the family and the family of a married son, which gave our church two members, and three attendants at our Sunday-school. If all our pastors, North and South, would adopt the same plan, how many members would be saved to our Methodism? At the same time it would be of great benefit to the parties in forming, at once, pleasant associations and giving them an introduction into proper society. Doctor, give us an editorial on this subject, start this work.

ment up to death were pronounced upon any one who should disregard his authority.

About fifteen hundred men came up to Jerusalem with him. He had not been there long before he was told of the transgressions of the people, and the offenders were to be found even among the priests and Levites. The ninth chapter of Ezra tells how he was shocked, made confession and interceded for them. His own realization of the enormity of their trespass touched the conscience of the people so that a great congregation of men, women, and children soon assembled, and "the people wept very sore." Proclamation was made throughout Judah and Jerusalem for another assembling. That took place in the midst of a driving rain, and they pledged themselves to put away their strange wives, and to become once more a peculiar people whose God is the Lord.

With the list of those who had transgressed, the Book of Ezra ends. Thirteen years later, Ezra appears as the associate of Nehemiah in his work of reform.

The Connection.—Whatever may have been accomplished for the people by Ezra in spiritual matters, temporally they were bad off. The commissions of Zerubbabel and Ezra had included nothing but the restoration and care of the temple. The ancient and imposing walls of Jerusalem were still represented by great piles of rubbish, and its gates by heaps of ashes. The feeble remnant of the once great nation was in deep affliction, and among its neighbors was the subject of derision and reproach. From questioning a company that had come up from Jerusalem, the chief spokesman of whom was his own brother, Nehemiah, the king's cupbearer, learned of these distressing facts. His own high position in the Persian court had not destroyed his patriotism. He most keenly felt the desolation and the distress of his countrymen.

He sat down and wept, mourned, fasted and prayed nearly four months. He had two great facts to contemplate—the sinfulness of men and the great mercy of God. The first is of such magnitude that it often hides the other from view. Nehemiah instantly perceived that the condition of his countrymen was owing to an unfortunate state of heart.

Sorrow (1-3.)—After four months of seclusion, Nehemiah again appeared before the king. It was the time, just before dinner, when it was customary for the king to eat dried fruits and drink wine. In his high office as cupbearer, Nehemiah "took up the wine, and gave it to the king." Like Daniel, hitherto Nehemiah had carried into the presence of the king the cheerful serenity that came from a communion with God. But the effects of four months of sorrow can not immediately be effaced from the countenance. And when the king noticed the dejected countenance of his favorite servant, with kindly compassion he asked, "Why is thy countenance sad seeing thou art not sick?"

Nehemiah was "very sore afraid!" His answer to the king an unexpectedly pathetic one. "Why should not my countenance be sad when the city, the house of the graves of my fathers lieth desolate, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire." The words were few, but they most vividly set forth the condition of Jerusalem, together with his reason for feeling sorrowful over it.

Supplication (4-6).—There is sly, good-humored shrewdness in the [illegible] which the king next asks his cupbearer. Literally it should be, "On what account this, that thou art asking?" Artaxerxes had taken it for granted that all this was preliminary to a request for something, and, indeed, was a part of it. He intimates that he understands that Nehemiah has planned all this to get something out of him. [illegible] for help to him [illegible] are the hearts even [illegible] in the least prevent [illegible] all the per[illegible] of which he him[illegible] He plumpy asks, [illegible] wouldest send me unto [illegible] the city of my fathers' [illegible] may build it." [illegible] make [illegible] suspicion [illegible] the city [illegible] himself [illegible] of his ancestors. [illegible] confi[illegible] the king and his [illegible] not have [illegible] petition, [illegible] not have dared [illegible] showed a true [illegible] the name of the re[illegible] was a [illegible] up against this place. There could be no peace and no security for the Jews until once more an impregnable wall surrounded their city. Then again confidence would revive and a new energy would animate the discouraged Israelites. They would cease to be held in derision, and their names would cease to be a reproach.

Asks Nehemiah how long his journey is to be, and when he shall return. "So it pleased the king to send me, and I set him a time."

Why the king should unhesitatingly have granted this request, which involved so much, has been matter for curious inquiry. But two things, it seems to us, should be born in remembrance. And they are: 1. That this was not the first time that Artaxerxes had shown kindness to Israel. He had permitted Ezra to gather all the volunteers that he could to re-inforce those who already had returned to their native land, and, besides, had given to him generous gifts for the sanctuary, explaining his acts by saying: "For why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons?" 2. That Nehemiah had prayed over this matter that mercy might be granted him in the sight of this man. However one may seek to account for the king's motives, all must concede that his act was a direct answer to prayer.

Success (7, 8).—Passports were accordingly granted him through the Syrian countries "beyond the river," and a letter to Asaph, the keeper of the king's private park near Jerusalem, for the timber that was necessary in the work of building. Those things which he set out to restore were: 1. "The gates of the palace which appertained to the house." 2. The wall of the city; 3. "The house that I shall enter into." That meant the temple. From chap. 5: 14 we see that not only was he given his coveted permission to build, but also was made governor over Judah. Thus he says. "The king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me." He had no doubt that all of his success came as an answer to prayer. God had honored his faith.

Lost Friends.

NOTE.—We receive many letters asking for information about lost friends. All such letters will be published in this column. We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notices. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jany. 4th, 1879.

ED. SOUTHWESTERN.—I wish to inquire through your journal for my people, Anderson, Mary, Peter, Zudie, Green and Lavie Harden. Mary Harden's husband was named Jordan. Monroe and Lavie are Anderson Hardin's sons. Lavie died on Island 32, belonging to Henry H. Colans. She married a man by the name of Owen Richson. Anderson Harden died May 18th, 1873, aged 37 years. Charles Flncher, Anderson Harden's stepson sold my father to Gabriel Miles.

LUCY HARDEN.

DIED.—December 24th, 1878, Benjamin Hawkins, born in Tennessee in 1809; was sold and brought to Louisiana in 1812, with his father and mother, who both died on the Hermitage Plantation, in St. Charles parish. He remained on the plantation until 1867, when he removed to Carrollton. He has been a faithful man, and one of the first to help build the Clinton Street Church. He leaves many friends and a large family to mourn his loss. He passed from labor to rest, and sleeps in Jesus whom he loved.

New Publications

The February number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine is remarkable for the abundance and the varied character of its attractive features. It is impossible to convey, in an ordinary notice, any idea of the richness of its contents, literary and artistic; we heartily commend it to those of our readers who desire to obtain a highly entertaining, instructive and edifying publication. The aim of the editor (Rev. Dr. Deems) is to inculcate morals and religion—not by dry, hard homilies, but by every style of literature which can make the truth attractive and pleasing. Each number contains serial and short stories, essays, biographical sketches, poems, music, anecdotes, a sermon, and a comprehensive miscellany abounding with valuable information and entertainment. The present number opens with a profusely illustrated description of a visit to that singular community, the Lebanon Shakers; it is very graphic and exceedingly interesting. "Hints for a Sunday-School" is well worthy of the consideration of all denominations of Christians. A number of characteristic anecdotes of the late Bishop Early of Virginia will command especial attention. The admirable serial "David Fleming's Forgiveness" is continued, and the juvenile story "In Mischief Again" concluded. There are several excellent short stories, sketches, essays, etc.; poems by celebrated writers, sermon by the editor on the topic, "The Kingdom of God," etc., etc., filling 128 quarto pages, the illustrations numbering nearly 100. The price is only 25 cents a number; the annual subscription $3 postpaid. This is the time to subscribe, either for the year, or for six months, $1. Address, Frank Leslie, 53, 55 & 57 Park Place, New York.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC. We ask a careful reading and a thoughtful consideration of what follows. It is now over twelve years since a new cure for chronic diseases was discovered, known as "Compound Oxygen." The results which have followed its use up to this time have been so remarkable that it is beginning to attract the widest attention. Many intelligent physicians in various parts of the country have, after a careful investigation of its scientific and pathological claims, used it in cases where all other known remedies had failed, and with a success alike suprising to themselves and their patients. In Consumption, Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, Headache, Dyspepsia, and the wide range of Neuralgic disorders from which so many suffer life-long tortures, it has rarely failed to give relief, and in many cases to make permanent cures. It is not a drug, but a new combination of the two elements which make up our common air, giving oxygen in excess. It is taken by inhalation, and cures by natural and orderly processes—first, by eliminating the excess of carbon which has accumulated in the system; and secondly, by a revitalization of all the great nervous centres. In order to give the public an opportunity to learn all about this treatment, we have prepared a carefully written Treatise, in which is presented a history of the discovery of "Compound Oxygen," a statement of its Scientific Basis and Mode of Action, and large details of the results which have followed its administration. This is sent free by mail to any one who desire to receive it. Address DRS STARKEY & PALEN, 1112 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

DOCTORS GAVE HIM UP.—"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?"

"I assure you, it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters, and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!"

"Well-a-day! If that is so, I will go this minute and get some for my poor George. I know hops are good."

The Quickest Time East.

The Great Jackson Route is now making the quickest time to New York ever known, leaving New Orleans daily at 5:45 p. m., and arriving at New York at 6:35 a. m. Allowing for the difference in time between the two cities, the run is made in the unprecedented time of fifty-nine and three-quarter hours. This quick time is made only by the Great Jackson Route, and is the result of its enterprise in rebuilding its track with steel rails and new ties, at heavy expense, and the thorough system of ballasting that has been undertaken. This fast train will be of great advantage to the people of this city, which it is hoped they will show their appreciation of by their patronage. Only one change of cars, which is made at Columbus, O., where breakfast is taken in the splendid dining hall at that place at 8 a. m.

This route also makes the quickest time to Boston, arriving at 2:40 p. m. Actual running time, sixty-seven and one-half hours. This the most desirable route for all New England points. The time to all intermediate points is correspondingly less, thus making this the quickest and best route to all the Northern and Eastern cities.

Excursion tickets to Waukesha, Oconomowoc and all the Northwestern summer resorts, to Niagra Falls, Put-in-Bay, etc., are on sale at the lowest rates with the quickest time made by any line, and only one change of cars.

"What are you going to do about it!"

Because the penalties of physiological laws are not executed speedily, some fancy they are void. But when the system breaks down, and almost hopeless complications arise, which the family physicida, by reason of his limited experience, fails to relieve, the pertinency of the above inquiry is apparent. Many remedies have been specially prepared for these cases, and many physicians are bidding for their patronage. As before making a purchase of land, a "search" is required, and the title carefully examined, so invalids should carefully investigate the claims of any physicians offering to treat chronic diseases. Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines are well known, and have effected many cures where eminent physicians have failed, yet to accommodate surgical and complicated cases, and those desirous of being restored speedily, Dr. Pierce has erected an elegant sanitarium, at a cost of nearly half a million dollars. No institution in the world offers advantages superior to those found in this establishment. Half a score of physicians are in attendance, several of whom have been prominently connected with leading American and European Hospitals. Every improved facility for hastening a cure that a liberal expenditure of money could secure can here be found. Before fully deciding where to go, address Invalid's and Tourists' Hotel for circular.

COURSE OF STUDY FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 89, § 5 of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

I. Let candidates for license to preach be examined in the common branches of an English education, and on their general acquaintance with the Bible and the doctrines and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

II. FIRST YEAR. The Bible—History. Binney's Theological Compend. Steele's Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

TO BE READ. Scripture History—Old Testament. Smith's. Watson's Life of Wesley. A Hundred Years of Methodism.—Simpson.

III. SECOND YEAR.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Merrill.

TO BE READ.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the United States.—Ridpath. Ruter's Church History—1 vol., 8 vo.

IV. THIRD YEAR.—The Bible—Sacraments. Wakefield's Theology—Last Four Books. Christian Perfection—Wesley's Plain Account.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons.—Vol. I. Introduction to the Gospel Records.—Nast. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation—in one vol., 8 vo.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

The Methodist Hymnal,

AND

Hymnal with Tunes.

We are now prepared to fill orders for the following editions of the "METHODIST HYMNAL:"

Pearl, Plain	$0 40
Pearl, Red Edge	0 50
24mo, Plain	0 50
24mo, Red Edge	0 65
24mo, Roan, Embossed	0 75
24mo, Roan, Gilt Edge	1 00
16mo, Plain	0 75
16mo, Red Edge	1 00
16mo, Roan, Embossed	1 20
16mo, Roan Gilt Edge	1 40
*Hymnal with Tunes, 12mo	1 00
Hymnal with Tunes, 8vo	1 75

Since the manuscript of the Hymnal was delivered by the Committee, October 26th, last, time has been required to prepare and perfect the indexes, to complete the arrangements of the Hymns and Tunes, and to adjust all to a system of uniform numbering. Time has also been consumed in the transmission of proofs to and from the members of the Committee, but there has been no unnecessary delay. In view of these facts, and the amount of work involved in issuing so many editions in good style, we think that it has been completed at the earliest moment practicable.

The new book contains a great variety of the best spiritual songs, adapting it both to public and social worship. It should be used in social meetings and Sunday-schools, and thus be the means of familiarizing our children with the living hymns of the church. The cheaper editions will cost little more than the ordinary Sunday-school song books that last but a season. The Hymnal with Tunes is a rich and varied treasury of sacred music, and the 12mo edition is the cheapest complete Hymn and Tune Book in the land.

We ask all pastors to aid in the general and immediate introduction of the Hymnal, and Hymnal with Tunes. Let it be the occasion of an effort to intensify the true spirit of worship where it flourishes, and to revive it where it languishes, that the Methodist Episcopal Church may soon become, as eforetime, mighty in song.

New Church Record.

We can now sell the "Record" at a price much less than we have ever been able to do. It is a large quarto, containg about 180 pages, divided into seven sections, namely:

Record of Pastors.
Record of Classes.
Record of Official Members.
Alphabetical Record of Full Members.
Record of Probationers.
Record of Baptisms.
Record of Marriages.

We are confidant that this record will meet the demand long felt, namely, a cheap book suitable for a majority of our churches. Price, $2.50.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.

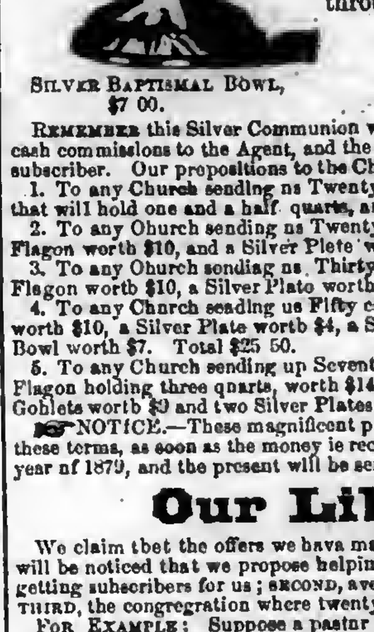
2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

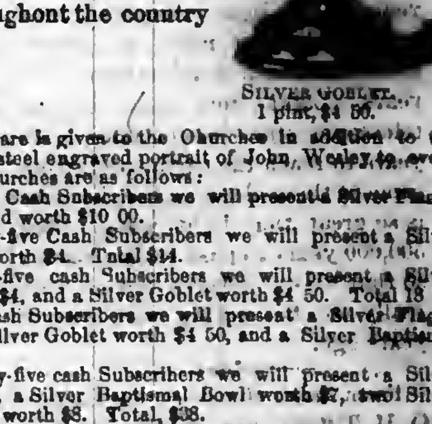
We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

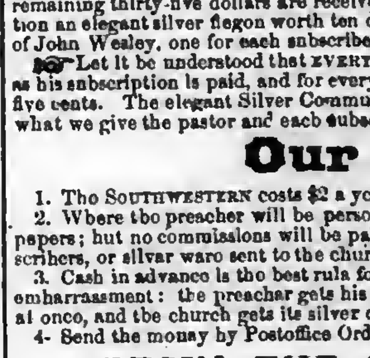
All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:



SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 14 00

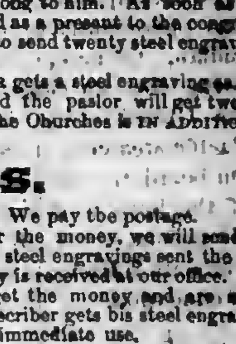


SILVER PLATE, 10 inches wide, $4 00



SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL, $7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country



SILVER GOBLET, 1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.

2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.

3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total $18 50.

4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.

5. To any Church sending us Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us. This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceeding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregation where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.
2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.
3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission: the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.
4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

The Class-Leader,

His Work, and How to Do It.
With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.
BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M.,

12mo..... $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as, by its illustrations and suggestions, will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

Cheap Organs.

We will sell a $200 Estey Organ for $100. cash, and a $275 Beatty organ for $90. cash. These organs are entirely new and will be sent, directly from the factories. This is a rare chance for a church or Sunday-school to get a first-class instrument very cheap.

Rules for Spoiling a Child.

1. Begin young by giving him whatever he cries for.

2. Talk freely before the child about his smartness as incomparable.

3. Tell him he is too much for you; that you can do nothing with him.

4. Have divided counsels as between father and mother.

5. Let him learn to regard his father as a creature of unlimited power, capricious and tyrannical; or as a mere whipping machine.

6. Let him learn from his father's example to despise his mother.

7. Do not know or care who his companions may be.

8. Let him read whatever he likes.

9. Let the child, whether boy or girl, rove the streets in the evenings—a good school for both sexes.

10. Devote yourself to making money, remembering always that wealth is a better legacy for your child than principles in the heart and habits in the life; and let him have plenty of money to spend.

11. Be not with him in hours of recreation.

12. Strain at a gnat and swallow a camel; chastise severely for a foible, and laugh at a vice.

13. Let him run about from church to church. Electicism in religion is the order of the day.

14. Whatever burdens of virtuous requirement you lay on his shoulders, touch not one with your fingers.

King Corn.

The corn crop of the United States contitutes a wide basis of prosperity. The amount of corn exported in the season of 1868 '69 was 7,017,000 bushels, and the following year but 1,392,000 bushels. The export for 1877 '78 will probably rise above 86,461,000 bushels. In that time the total of wheat and corn exported has swollen from 88,749,000 to 177,595,000 bushels. The acreage of this year in corn reaches 50,369,000, and the yield probably not less than 1,500,000,000 bushels.

It is reported that the revision of the New Testament is almost completed, and will probably be presented to convocation in England next year. Already it is nearly all printed, the two universities having given £20,000 for the privilege of printing it, of which they pay £2,000 yearly. The revision of the Old Testament will require about three years longer.

The Indianapolis Sun says: When a bank fails in China they cut off the heads of the bankers and throw them in a corner with the remainder of the assets. As a consequence, there has been no bank failure in that country for five hundred years. There is no telling how much would be saved to poor depositors, widows and orphans, in this country, if a similar plan should be adopted.

In its secret history of the Louisville Library lottery the Louisville Commercial shows that the gross sum received for tickets for the five drawings was $6,250,000. The total awarded for prizes was $3,142,500, and the library was given $424,396 32. The remainder, $2,683,103 68, seems to have clung to the hands of the conductors of the lottery.

A Georgia colored minister preached this doctrine to his people: "Bnt taint no use ter trabbel along dat narrer path 'less yer carry, tolded up in yer creed, a good rec'mendation from yer creditors. Celebrated American
WORM SPECIFIC OR VERMIFUGE.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eye-lid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,
DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE
will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY

—AND—
COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.
Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n379 tf.

ANTI-FAT

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week.
In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen:—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN'S drug-store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from 190 pounds to 192 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, SMITH, DOOLITTLE & SMITH, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks, and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N. Y., write: "TO THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen,—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp.
BOTANIC MEDICINE CO., PROP'RS, Buffalo, N.Y.

WOMAN
By an immense practice at the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, having treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman, I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and positive remedy for these diseases.
To designate this natural specific, I have named it
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon personal observation. I have, while witnessing its positive results in the special diseases incident to the organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. On its merits, as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. (For conditions, see pamphlet wrapping bottle.)
The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhœa, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing-down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, and Female Weakness. I do not extol this medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.
Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, a book of over 900 pages, sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.
Favorite Prescription sold by Druggists.

We say, if white brethren cannot afford to mix with colored brethren in an annual conference, the M. E. Church, South, would like to have them; and if colored brethren could not stand by their brethren of a paler shade, the A. M. E. Church is in the land. We will have to mix in heaven. Better get acquainted here. Jesus came to mix with us. Came all the way from glory. He has no respect for persons; we are to be like Him. Should we fail, we might miss the crown. A man's religion that changes to suit a prejudiced public sentiment is not of Christ or the Bible. Heathens are more consistent.

Now, as we have a geographical line between our conferences, and have work among both colors in the bounds of each conference, we shall not reject a man at the door of the Little Rock Conference, [illegible] have no doubt but that the Arkansas Conference shall need more colored preachers next year than they now have.

We do not want color line men. We want no opposition to our effort to build up our conference on what we understand to be the principles of the Gospel and the sounder doctrines of the church.

Now I say let the brethren examine themselves and see whether they be in the faith or not, and so let them come. You need not write. Get recommendations and come to Little Rock by the 28th inst.

J. G. POLLARD.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 1879.

President Hayes on Better Times.

President Hayes, in a speech delivered at Cumberland, Md., spoke some encouraging words in regard to the commercial prospects of the country, as follows:

"Five years ago there was a financial panic, followed by depression in business; and that, too, is passing away. The lesson it taught us is not without benefit to the country. Although the times are temporarily bad, they are not without compensating blessings to the American people. Great changes have occurred during these five years of financial depression. The agricultural interests always suffer less by such depressions, for in good and flush times the farmer is usually the last to run into debt and go beyond his means. He certainly is caught with less debt than the manufacturer or commercial man. When prosperity comes back the farmer leads off with good crops, and this makes business for the railroads, steamboats and canals. It quickens and increases the products of the factory and shop. But coal is at the bottom of all industries. On the sea it moves our ships, and on the land it supplies the manufacturer with power. In every field of labor we begin to see that they are all caught by the favorable tide setting in; but if the farmers are becoming better off, and Gov. Carroll assures us they are, prosperity will extend to the manufacturers and merchants. If agriculture is prosperous, every other interest and industry will be prosperous also.

The last five or six years have made many changes. As a compensation for our losses, the hard times have brought to us the knowledge of exports, or what we send abroad, to be paid back to the people in some way. If these exceed the imports, we receive the difference in cash. What have we sent abroad? Take the article of corn. Six years ago we exported [illegible],000,000 bushels; now, 85,000,000; [illegible] [illegible],000,000 bushels; now, [illegible],000 bushels; flour, 2,500,000 [illegible]; now, 4,000,000; cotton, 933,[illegible] pounds; now, 1,607,000,000 [illegible] bacon, 246,000,000 pounds; [illegible],000 pounds; fresh beef, [illegible] pounds; now, 92,000,000 [illegible]; pork, 57,000,000 pounds; [illegible],000 pounds. The total [illegible] in six years is about one [illegible] and forty millions of dol- [illegible]

[illegible] of labor has not been [illegible] in order that [illegible] that re- [illegible] have been lar- [illegible] by machinery, and [illegible] now able to un- [illegible] in many [illegible] furnish- [illegible] of which the jackets of locomotives are made was formerly procured from Russia. Now we are sending such iron to Russia instead of importing it from that country; and this fact shows that we not only have a home market, but are supplying foreign countries with that article. Mr. Blodgett's list of Philadelphia industries shows that the manufacturers export three fourths of their steel forks, hoes and rakes to England and Central Europe, and Sheffield they are re-exported with English wares. Also, edge and other tools are sent thither; shovels, spades and coalhods to South America and Australia; table-cutlery, saws, files and levels, nails and spikes to South America and the West Indies; bolts, nuts and rivets to the countries of Europe, including England and also South America; wire to South America and Australia; car-wheels to England and other countries; locomotives, one hundred in a year, to Russia, Brazil, etc. Besides these are exported iron bridges, sheet roofing and architectural iron, cables, chains, and gas and water pipe.

The increase of our exports over the imports enables us to get back our bonds so as to pay interest on them at home instead of abroad. I do not mean United States bonds alone, but your Maryland and other State bonds.

The conclusion from all this is, the nation is becoming better off than it was. Unless something should be done to check this coming prosperity, our country will march on to good times again. It would be of advantage to follow in the path marked out by the framers of the constitution, and not undertake new ways of paying old debts, thus checking the return of general prosperity."

American Bible Society.

A meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, New York, Thursday, January 2nd, Frederick S. Winston, Vice President in the chair. Rev. Alexander McLean, D. D., read the 103d Psalm and offered prayer.

A translation of the Acts in the Creek language was presented, accepted by the Board, and ordered to be printed.

Appropriations were made of $436 for Bible-work in Madura, Western Mexico and Italy, and grants of books were made for home and foreign distribution and colportage work, amounting to about 20,000 volumes, including nine volumes in raised letters for the blind.

Communications from foreign lands were presented, including letters from Dr. Gore, Dr. Isaac G. Bliss, Mr. Andrew M. Milne, with interesting reports of colportage work in Uruguay and Argentine Republic; Dr. Kulick was at Peking, Nov. 6th, expecting to be at Shanghai, Nov. 23rd. Mr. Prince, of St. Petersburg reports the rapid sale of Reval-Esthonian Bibles, and the desirableness of preparing a new edition of 20,000 copies. A letter from Rev. D. C. Greene, of Japan, reports the success of the publication of the gospel of Matthew in kana, and gives an account of his editorial work in 1878. Dr. Trumbull of Valparaiso, calls renewed attention to the needs of the western coast of South America. Letters were also presented from Dr. Chester of Dindigul, Rev. A. P. Kelso of Lodiana, Rev. J. W. Butler of Mexico, Rev. M. Phillips of Merida; and from the British and Foreign Bible Society in respect to a revision of Almeida's Portuguese Bible.

The receipts for December were $43,347 98; copies of Scripture issued, 98,341.

The Washington correspondents have already begun to photograph distinguished statesmen. "Blaine," says one of them, "looks older. His hair, profuse in quantity and as white as snow, quite softens the hard lines in his handsome face He is tall and portly, and his dark eyes flash the fire of ambition kindled in his heart. He dresses well, but does not by any means affect the style so characteristic of Senator Burnside. Missionary Contributions of the Church South in Texas.

From the Texas Christian Advocate, we gather some interesting information of the missionary contributions of the M. E. Church South in that State. It says: In publishing the account of the proceedings of the West Texas Conference it is stated that our contributions for foreign missions furnished a forcible text for Bishop Keener's Missionary Address. This somewhat disparaging remark has been copied, so far as we have seen, by the whole family of Advocates. The reports from all the Texas Conferences have come to hand. The following table shows the aggregate number of members in the conferences named, and the amount per member contributed to the general mission cause, including the collections for foreign and domestic missions, on the several charges, adding the anniversary collections, which at our conference at San Marcos, amounted to $250:

Conferences.	No. of Members.	Miss'ry Cont.	Am't per Member.
West Texas	6,357	$1,397	21 cents
Northwest Texas	23,267	3,425	14 cents
North Texas	21,067	1,800	8 cents
Texas	7,261	2,044	28 cents
East Texas	11,939	1,500	12 cents

The contributions of our people to the great world's conversions are inexcusable meagre, and should be doubled and quadrupled during the coming year.

The total number reported this year is 69,974, an increase of 2462 over last year, though from an error in the published minutes of the North Texas Conference last year there appeared to be a decrease. The only conference in which there is an actual decrease is the Texas Conference, in which there is a decrease of 250. The largest increase is in the Northwest Texas Conference—1461; in the West Texas the increase is 680; North Texas, 124; and in the East Texas the increase is 541. Comparatively, and consider the immense immigration to our State, our aggregate increase in the year just closed is very small, and should lead us to earnest searchings of heart, and a determined effort to do better the coming year.

What Christian Missions Have Done in the East.

(From an address by Rev. W. F. Stevenson, of Dublin.)

It was when I saw the well manned and well attended theological colleges that have sprung up not only in China but in the very priestly heart of Japan, in a city where ten years ago foreigners could only be smuggled in by stealth; when I listened to sermons preached by native ministers to large native congregations, and found them so scriptural, thoughtful and eloquent, as to place them on a level with our best sermons at home; and then, in India, we passed through Travancore and Tinnevelly and found Christian congregations and houses of worship dotted so thickly over the extreme south of that country that one was often not more than a few miles from the other; Sunday school children marching in procession from various points to some central service; native Christians giving a tenth, and more than a tenth, of their earnings to Christian work; young men giving up every week one and sometimes two days of their working time, that they might go and preach Christ in the districts around; and villages, where three and four, and even seven hundred of the families are Christian; when I preached in a stately church on a week evening to a congregation of perhaps 1,400 or 1,500, and learned that the foundations of this building had been laid by a man of faith 40 years ago, when there were only 7 converts; when having spoken at midnight to some Christians at Cape Cormorin, the waves at our feet breaking on one of the most sacred temple sites in India, I found myself afterward addressing a native congregation just at the foot of the Himalayas, that flung their shadows on the village street, it was then that I began to realize the work that the Mission has accomplished already, and the vast possibilities that lie before it in the immediate future; the possibilities of faith, which are not to be reckoned as the dreams of an enthusiast, but as the actual and divinely promised inheritance of a believing Church.

The sweetest life is to be ever making sacrifices for Christ; the hardest life a man can lead on earth, most full of misery, is to be always doing his own will and seeking to please himself.—Edward Bickersteth.

Indians and Chinese.

Rev. J. P. Newman, D.D., said in a recent New York sermon:

The third branch of the human race is to-day praying, "Give us a chance." This branch is in two sections: The Indians and Chinese. The former are not dying out. They demand of us justice and the privilege to prove they are capable of self-government. Of the 266,000 Indians in the United States, 150,000 wear the dress of white men. In 1868 they had 7,500 houses; now they have 56,000 houses in which they dwell. Then they had 111 schools, now they have 344. Twelve thousand of their children attend school, and 40,000 Indians can read, and these not of the five civilized tribes. We are bound by every principle of humanity and of justice to keep our treaties with the Indians; to punish the whites who encroach upon them, and to relieve them from the plundering thieves in the form of agents, many of whom are plunderers in the guise of religion. The other branch is the Chinese. Their exodus necessarily causes the patriot alarm, because they come with notions inconsistent with free institutions. But our great duty is to render them capable of self-government. Of the 150,000 Chinese on the Pacific slope, 60,000 are in California, and they add to the annual revenue of that State $15,000,000 in custom duties, rents, taxes, etc.

By their labors in constructing public works they have increased the value of the property of the State $290,000,000, and have thus provided for the employment of 500,000 white men. It is not true that they are a nation of criminals and paupers, for the statistics show that out of 1,400 prisoners in the San Quentin prison only 199 were Chinese, while 160 were born in Ireland, and over 600 were native Americans. And out of 800 paupers in the almshouse, while 197 were from Ireland, there were none from China. New York has the honor that yesterday Wong An Yee was naturalized in the Court of Common Pleas, and he is now an American citizen.

A Philosopher.

That boy was a true philosopher who, when he lost his kite, thought he would cry about it, but immediately alter concluded not to, and went home whistling. When asked if he wasn't sorry to lose his treasure, he replied: "Yes, but I can't fool away much time in being sorry; I am just going to make another one, and I guess a better one." A great many full-grown men have not learned that lesson yet. When they have spilt their milk on the ground they sit down close to the wet spot and dilute the lost lacteal fluid with their briny tears. If, instead of this repining, they would only skurry around they would soon find another and a bigger cow waiting to be milked. Don't sulk, because it won't pay.

Rich Toward God.

He that has no love of God, no larger spiritual affections, no share in the unsearchable riches of Christ, no sympathies with his brethren, is, in fact, "wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked," and shall one day find out that he is so, however now he may say, "I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing." He only is truly rich, who is rich toward God—who is rich in God—who has made the Eternal, and the unchangeable, the object of his desires and efforts. He in God possesses all things, though in this world be were a beggar; and for him to die will not be to quit, but to go to his riches.—Trench.

Senator Bruce is described as a well appearing man; his complexion is coffee-colored; his hair is carefully brushed; it is not straight, but has the curl characteristic of his race. He dresses remarkably well, not foppishly. He is an unusually intelligent-looking man for his race, is modest and unassuming, and never participates in the debates unless they in some way affect the interest of his State. His wife is a slender, shapely woman. Her complexion is thoroughly Andalusian. She has delicate, high-bred features, singularly full of repose, and a manner and bearing eminently refined; her eyes are large, and have the tender expression so specially the peculiarity of the Moorish women. She is highly educated, and has many intellectual resources. It is rumored that Mrs. Hayes will invite Mrs. Bruce to receive with her on New Year's Day.

Resisting the Tempter.

BY JOHN B. GOUGH.

With drink, on some temperaments, one glass will mount to the brain instantly, weakening the power of will, affecting the self-control, and the man is not the same. The appetite being then roused takes hold of him and drags him down in its fearful embrace. The only safety for such a man is total abstinence; and to a man who has been a victim, bound by the cords of this fierce desire, it will be a life struggle, when at times the old appetite comes over him like a wave. Let him do any thing but drink, let him even run—it is not cowardly to run.

I knew a man who was strongly tempted, and escaped. He was a printer, and working near a window opposite which was the "Shades," he saw persons coming out wiping their lips, haven taken their "eleven o'clock." He began to want it, and grew nervous; the desire increased; every fiber of his system seemed to cry out for it, when he dropped his form of type; and, in his vexation at the accident, took off his apron, put on his coat, with the intention of getting drunk; when, as he said, he thought of wife and children, of former ruin and disgrace, and present prosperity and reputation, and rushed out, and ran hatless through the streets till he reached home.

"Wife, shut me up! for mercy's sake, shut me up, and don't let me out. Ask no questions, but shut me up!"

She was a wise wife, and locked him him in a room, and there he remained for thirty hours before he dare venture out to his work again.

A lawyer who had been intemperate told me, "I have been obliged to forego all light literature. I can hardly read a newspaper."

"Why?" I replied.

"I have not tasted drink for two years, but if I only read of drinking I wanted it. I have paced my office with hands clenched, and the sweat standing in beads on my forehead, as I battled the horrible desire to get drink when I have read of a man drinking a glass of wine."

Another gentleman told me that he had not drank for twenty-eight years; but, said he, "I have some fifty men working for me, and when I take the breath of a man who has been drinking, I want it—yes, sometimes want it so that I have ridden ten miles on horseback to rid myself of the desire that seemed to cry through my whole system, Give! give! when I have taken the breath of a man who have been drinking."—New York Advocate.

The Leaven in the Meal.

The meal is in the human spiritual nature. The leaven is the principles of the kingdom of God. Without the human spiritual nature those principles remain mere abstractions. Without those principles the soul remains unchanged, unfit for spiritual use. They must come together. What then ensued? The leaver attacks the meal: there is the aggressiveness of the principles of the kingdom of God. The leaven charges all the meal into leaven: there is the transforming energy of the principles of the kingdom of God "Till the whole was leavened." Meal cannot change yeast into meal, but yeast can change meal into yeast. There is nothing in human intellect or spiritual energy to overcome the principles of the kingdom of God; therein is the royalty of that rule exhibited. But that kingdom can so change and transform the whole spiritual nature of man that you cannot find a single inch of unconquered territory; not an intellection, not an emotion, not a volition that rises in rebellion against the rule of right. Let the standard of Jesus be allowed to be planted in any part of any man's nature, and our great King will take the whole, so incessantly vigorous and active, like leaven, is the kingdom of God.—Rev. Dr. Deems, in Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine.

Prince Bismarck, in addition to his other peculiarities, is quite superstitious. He will not sit down at dinner in a party of thirteen; he will not allow his hair to be cut when the moon is on the wane; he will not negotiate on the anniversary of such disasters as the battle of Jena; he will conclude no treaty on a Friday; and his whole life is solemnized by the fact that he knows the year of his own death.

Amen.

1. Its origin—Amen is a Hebrew word of Hebrew origin. Prior to the time of Christ, it was found in no other language but the Hebrew. Pagans did not make use of it in their idol worship. But with the introduction of Christianity, it has found its way into the languages of all nations who have received the Christian as their religion. In the Greek, Latin, German and English tongues, it is the same in orthography, signification, and with very slight deviations, also in pronunciation. It has been left untranslated and has been transferred from the Hebrew just as it is found there, because there cannot be found in any language any one word that expresses its precise and complete meaning.

2. Its sense.—Luther, in his smaller catechism, defines it thus, "Amen, amen, that is, yea it shall be so." Cruden says of it: "Amen in Hebrew signifies true, faithful, certain." It is used in the end of every prayer in testimony of an earnest wish, desire or assurance to be heard; amen be it so! So shall it be." Webster says: "Amen, as a noun, signifies truth, firmness, trust, confidence; as a verb, to conform, establish, verify; as an adjective, firm, stable. In English, after the Oriental manner, it is used at the beginning, but more generally at the end of declarations and prayers in the sense of "be it firm, be it established." All of these definitions agree in making amen to mean: "Verily, true, certain, be it so, shall it be." Some ancient forms of ritual have rendered it into English, namely, "So mote it be."

It is used in address by man to his Maker, and by Him to us, and accordingly, as used by either, differs somewhat in application, as must be evident. For man asks favors, and bestows them; God makes promises, and man pleads them. When man says amen, he claims the divine assurance; when God says amen, He confirms it.—Lutheran.

Be Unselfish.

To aim at pleasure, to single out our own good to the exclusion of others, to seek the gratification of our desires and appetites, is to lead an ignoble life. You were not made for yourself; you are a part of God's greater universe, and find your true place of honor in the service of the whole. The perfect man was the one who pleased not himself, and whoever would imitate him must deny self and rise above the temptation to live simply for his own satisfaction. To desire your own pleasure has in it nothing elevating, refining, or ennobling. It brings you to the level of selfish men and brutes; it bears down rather than raises up the soul. By it you are taken out of your place in the vineyard of the Lord. To follow your own pleasure is to give precedence to the lower faculties, to elevate to the place of honor the inferior part of your nature, and to hide from view that which is most noble and god-like.—Zion's Herald.

Recipe to be Miserable.

The best recipe we know, if you want to be miserable, is to think about yourself, how much you have lost, how much you have not made, and the poor prospect for the future. A brave man with a soul in him gets out of such pitiful ruts and laughs at discouragements, rolls up his sleeves, whistles and sings, and makes the best of life. This earth was never intended for a paradise, and a man who rises above his discouragements and keeps his manhood will only be the stronger and better for his adversities. Many a noble ship has been saved by throwing overboard its most valuable cargo, and many a man is better and more humane after he has lost his gold.

It is feared that the health of the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon is permanently broken. The severe labor which he has imposed upon himself for many years begins to tell upon his constitution, and frequent intervals of rest are necessary. During a recent severe illness his pulpit was filled by his son, the Rev. C. Spurgeon, who has been preaching with great success in Australia.

A little Cincinnati girl, when asked what God had made her for, replied: "To wear a red fedder in my hat." If we are to judge by appearances, there are many besides this little girl who have the same idea of the Lord's designs.

Nothing is more calculated to quiet the mind in trouble than viewing all things as in the hands of God; and that God as my friend.

The Certainty of Divine Punishment.

Punishment is none the less certain, because in given cases it may seem to be delayed. Ezekiel, the prophet, tells us "The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, 'Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have; the days are long, and every vision faileth? Tell them that I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it. Say to them the days are at hand, and the effect of every vision. I am the Lord, and the word that I speak shall come to pass, and be no more prolonged; for in your days, Oh, rebellious house, will I say the word and will perform it, saith the Lord God."

If modern scoffers keep repeating the old tale, and ask, "Where is the promise of His coming?" the apostle Peter bids us remember "that with the Lord, a thousand years are as one day, and one day as a thousand years." God warned the nations of the flood a century beforehand, yet when it came, it abated nothing of its terribleness. The iniquity of the Amorites was four hundred years in filling their cup, yet not a drop was lost. After the crucifixion of our Lord, Jerusalem for years sat in pride on her hills, defiant of the Nazarene. Its rulers had challenged her blood on themselves and their children; but there was no voice, or thunder, or earthquake. But heaven had not forgotten it. Titus may have been long gathering his army, but that was to make the more sure of a force which should scatter its inhabitants to the winds. God is slow to anger; but when he strikes, he strikes effectually.

The fulfillment of the threat may be a very gradual process, and conducted all through by the use of what are called natural means, yet the judgment is none the less directly a Divine judgment, because not connected with a miracle. God is quite as much in that which is common, as in that which is uncommon; quite as much in the slow growth of an oak tree, as in the sprouting and withering of the gourd, which puzzled Jonah's faith. It is a very false reading of facts which pronounces only such events punitive which strike our minds as exceptional. In the case of Imperial Rome, the historian of its decline and fall carefully marks its piecemeal decay, from stage to stage, through entire centuries. All the dreadful ministers of vengeance have attacked her in succession, and often, more than one at a time, while she still called herself eternal. Yet surely God's hand was [illegible] slow crumbling quite as distinctly as in the sudden burning of the cities of the plain. National decay is as much subject to general laws as national growth, as [illegible] the scooping out of a river channel, or the piling up of a sand bank. If a nation will sin like Israel, like Israel, then must suffer. If she blusters like Babylon, like Babylon she must perish. If she swells and struts herself like the cities of ancient Greece, like them she is doomed to be split up into contemptible fragments. If she tyrannizes over her dependencies, they will one day rise up against her, and bid her defiance. If she neglects, or oppresses, or attempts to crush her poor, she is sure to be crushed by them in her turn. If the poor grow drunken, idle and refractory, prosperity cannot fail to pass to rival nations, and commercial stagnation involves all classes in common ruin. They are elements everywhere and ever at work, to avenge if they cannot correct.

Sometimes, on the contrary, the execution of the sentence is sudden, [illegible] and apparently final. Such was the case in the Noachian deluge, and the burning of Sodom and Gomorrah. It was the case also with [illegible], with Babylon, and largely with Jerusalem, and if we refer to [illegible] history, with Nineveh, Pompeii, [illegible], and many others. [illegible], revelations, earthquakes, volcanoes, floods, whirlwinds, the sword, wild beasts, famine and pestilence, have alike borne testimony to the truth that it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

sults, as all human codes will have, but it was infinitely superior to preceding constitutions of Louisiana. It was the first to acknowledge and define the citizen rights of the negro, to provide for a free school system embracing all children of the commonwealth, free speech, and a free press. For that reason it is dear to thousands, and objectionable to other thousands. The majority which adopted the instrument never failed to submit a reformatory amendment to the popular vote, or to declare its decision. The officials of the minority have witheld the declaration of the result of two elections on amendments, and now propose its total repeal.

It is almost incredible to believe that citizens having a fair knowledge of political leaders and their impulses, can expect a reform in the economies of the State by the holding of a convention in this critical period of the State's finances. A study of these would commend a short session of the Legislature, and the passage of bills for the better collection of revenues, and general administration of the laws. With the cry that "The Child is Born!" the Bourbon organ announces that the "days of the bayonet edict of 1868 are numbered." The bayonets of 1868 were used against the Knights of the White Camelia, or Ku Klux Klan; never against the planting, commercial, or liberty-loving people of Louisiana.

The struggle has been long, desperate and bloody. The country is familiar with the record, and the constant agitation which has prevailed here owing to the refusal of the ex-confederates of Louisiana to abide in peace under any defeat of their hopes or ambitions. The chief weapons of the opposition have been rifles, riots and frauds. The triumph is near, they believe.

Representatives Demas and Murrell, Senators Landry, Cage and Harper spoke firmly in behalf of their race, guided by that intuition which has been a great bulwark of its safety in other trying ordeals. The declaration of Representative Hawkins, of Madison, a native Independent, elected over both party candidates, is striking: "I oppose this bill because there are hundreds and thousands of our voters who were not permitted to vote, and who will not now be permitted. The vote for delegates will not be impartial, and there is not a member on this floor but knows that I speak the truth."

It will be marvellous, indeed, if the new general election forced upon the State does not result in a more disgraceful record than the last, the wrongs of which have never been righted; because of the confessed powerlessness of Gov. Nicholls to enforce a single item of the solemn pledges made by his administration on its induction into office. There is not even a shadow of protection remaining to citizens of Louisiana in the exercise of political rights against the ruling minority, save the assertion of inherent manhood, and the guidance of Providence.

Useless.

Although the January interest on the State debt is unpaid, and the teachers of the public schools are almost penniless as holders of overdue warrants, some patriotic citizen of Louisiana will ask the Legislature to appropriate $6000 for militia purposes. If there was any possibility of using militia for the enforcement of law and order, the appropriation would be reasonably asked and properly granted; but as Gov. Nicholls, the commander-in-chief, admits the civil authorities to be powerless in this direction, there is no excuse for the existence of the militia, or the granting of an appropriation.

The Apoligists.

The associated press agent noted that a meeting of Northern men, assembled at the Opera House, Charlotte, N. C., and passed a resolution expressing satisfaction with their social treatment, and declaring that in no section do all classes enjoy greater liberty. This was no doubt a political dodge to break the force of Blaine's indictment. In days of slavery Northern men could be found to testify to the blessings of that institution, but sensible men of all parties now admit the worthlessness of those declarations.

The encyclical letter of the Pope appeals to the Governments to restore to the Church the degree of liberty which would enable her to employ his influence efficaciously in favor of society. The Rome Italie says the encyclical letter is the opening of a crusade against modern institution.

Central Tennessee Conference.

A letter from Rev. B. F. Tillar, pastor of St. John's Church, Memphis, tells of a steady growth in congregations at Sabbath-school. A good beginning has been made. Bro. Tillar has also charge of Sixth Street Church in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. Sblmmin, who is visiting friends in England.

Rev. J. W. Reggister, P. E., of Memphis District, has selected Clarksburg, Carroll county, as his home. That prince of laymen, Dr. McCall, is holding out extra inducements to Bro. Reggister. The doctor believes in taking care of his preachers. A few years ago he gave the church a parsonage located at Clarksburg.

Rev. S. Davis, of Martin's Mills Circuit, gives a most encouraging report. Open doors are found on all sides. They will be entered. Bro. Davis is a whole-souled itinerant, with headquarters in the saddle. He will move things. A good preacher, earnest worker, and strong in the faith.

Bro. Sampson, of Rover Circuit, is much encouraged, and has made a good impression.

Rev. J. M. Carter is engaged in a protracted effort. The week of prayer was observed by sinners flocking to the mourners' bench. The meetings were deeply spiritual; a good impression is being made, and a glorious outpouring is expected. The meetings are announced to be continued through this week. The new Hymnal has been introduced. Bro. Carter expects to remove the indebtedness from his church this year.

Bro. McNeil, of the Mc Minnville District, is pushing his work, notwithstanding the cold weather, snow and rain. The outlook within the Conference bounds is hopeful. Watch meetings were held at several places; special revival efforts are being made, and a general enthusiasm prevails. This is going to be a year of earnest, successful labor for God and our Methodism.

January 17th.

The Minister's Quid.

One of our Methodist Episcopal ministers, who indulged very much in the use of tobacco, entered the Central Tennessee college to see the president. He neglected taking out his quid before entering, and having no place to spurt his juice, was of course compelled to eat and swallow the whole quid. This lesson has caused him to abstain entirely from the use of tobacco. I think it would be a benefit to some more of our ministers if Dr. Braden could destroy all the quids in this way, as you know he did not feel very well after his tobacco diet.

TEXAS.

Rev. Conrad Haney, Sherman: "Our meetings open encouragingly."

Rev. Frank Vance, Houston: "Bro. Cushman arrived here yesterday with his family, and all were glad to receive him."

Rev. J. W. Robinson, Calvert: "On the night of January 9th, Bro. Riley Williams, one of the members of the M. E. Church at Calvert, passed from labor to reward, after an illness of two weeks with typhoid pneumonia. He died perfectly happy. I am happy to acknowledge the receipt of the portrait of the Rev. John Wesley. The people all seem to admire it. I think when the weather clears off, that I will be able to send up quite a shower of subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN."

Rev. D. Gregory, Austin: "Mrs. L. Madison, a devoted Christian teacher, departed this life Jany. 14, 1879. We feel she has gone to the Saints' Rest. Aged 24. We held the first quarterly meeting on the second Sunday in January. The elder was at his post, and we had a good time. I am received kindly at my old field of labor. The brethren did their duty, estimating the elder's salary at $25 a visit; the preachers' at $600 per year."

Rev. S. E. H. Morant, Shreveport: "The weather has been such as to prevent the church meetings for three weeks or more. In fact, we have been unable to have any service since the Bishop and you left for Marshall. It has been raining, freezing, sleeting, snowing, thawing, etc."

LOUISIANA.

Rev. James Hayward, Jr., Franklin: "In the last issue of the SOUTHWESTERN was the lecture of Bishop Simpson on the "Personal Habits of Ministers," which I took to the church and had read. It did great good. The cause of Christ is much injured in this part of the country, by too much drinking."

Rev. James Hayward, Baton Rouge; "Sister Ophelia Le Blanc, a faithful young member of the church, and of the missionary society, died Dec. 31st, and calmly slept in the arms of Jesus."

Rev. Stephen Priestley, Carrollton: "A sister in trouble was asked why she left class B, to sit in class C. She replied, 'Because I am slack, and my leader is slack, and he never sees whether I live right or wrong. Class B was behind in every point, and I was afraid we would all fall together, and I changed class because my leader was not changed.'"

TENNESSEE.

Rev. McLemore, Spring Hill: "Two sisters, Martha Sharber and Nancy Jenkins, died a few days ago. Both were much loved by relatives and friends."

Rev. P. Gregg: "Mrs. Martha Sharber, wife of Bro. Peter Sharber, professed hope in Christ in 1849. She was afflicted 29 years."

Rev. W. S. Butler: "Bro Merrimon Morrison, a member of the Fayette circuit, West Tennessee district, died on the 6th."

Jan 26, 1879.—THE BUILDERS INTERRUPTED.

SCRIPTURE.—Neh. 4: 7-18

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Nevertheless, we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them."—9.

TOPIC.—"Be strong and of a good courage."

(Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.)

Intermediate Events.—It was quite an event in Jerusalem when one day there arrived an officer high in rank from the Persian court, attended by a splendidly mounted guard and a retinue of slaves. Speculation within and jealously without were set at work surmising the object of his mission. But Nehemiah was not one to speak before the ripe moment had arrived. After he had been in the city three days, in the night he arose and made a careful survey of the ruined walls. In this way he fully possessed himself of the character and extent of the work to be done. Then assembled the priests, nobles, rulers, and other inhabitants of the city, and, pointed out to them the reason why they were held in reproach. He proposed they should rebuild the walls, told them the secret of his coming, and how God had prospered him in his petition with the king. His communication fired the hearts of his auditors so that there was but one response, "Let us arise, and build." Nehemiah proportioned out the work so that every man, every guild of men, and every town had their share. High priest and priests alike wrought upon the wall. Goldsmiths, apothecaries, merchants, even the weaker sex caught the enthusiasm, and the daughters of the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem labored upon the walls side by side with their father. Only one class shirked their duty. The residents of Tekoa built their share of the wall, "but their nobles put not their necks to the work of the Lord." Those who lived near the wall worked every man opposite his own house. The priests of the city, after they had built their portion of the wall, sanctified it without waiting for the rest to complete their part of the work.

The Connection.—From the first Nehemiah met with opposition. Sanbalat, the Horonite, Tobiah, "the slave," and Geshem, the Arabian, the first named being the leader, set themselves to work to defeat the enterprise. When they heard of the intention to rebuild they laughed the project to scorn, and, unaware, probably, of the firman which Nehemiah possessed, charged the Jews with a purpose to rebel against the king. Nehimiah's answer to this was, that the God of heaven would prosper them, and that they had no portion, nor right, nor memorial in Jerusalem.

In spite of the alarm caused by the address of Sanballat before the army of Samaria, the work went on. Before the enemies of Israel were ready to take any active steps in opposition, the circumference of the wall was complete up to half of its intended height.

The Plot Devised (7, 8).—Laughter and mockery had proved to be an ineffective method of bombarding the rising walls. Sanballat perceived that something more effective had to be tried. He and Tobiah summoned their allies, the Arabians settled by Sargon in Samaria, and the traditional enemies of the Jews, the Ammonites and the Philistine Ashdodites—all of which probably composed "the army of Samaria" before alluded to, and which were a sort of body guard of Sanballat's. They met, and conspired to come and fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder it. As they were Persian subjects of the Empire, it may be that by banding together in this way that they hoped to be able to explain to the king that it was fidelity to his interests that led them to undertake the expedition. They meant to surprise and disperse the builders, and demolish their work.

The Plot Detected (9-12).—In Nehemiah they had a vigilant man to deal with. No movement of his enemies escaped him. He worked unremittingly, and yet watched his foes. Immediately he was surprised of their intention. He made use of two methods in foiling them. He prayed, and then did what he could to bring about the answer to his own prayer. Hence he prayed first, and set his watch afterwards.

There were three hindrances to the work of building. 1. Its magnitude. 2. The threat of surprise. 3. The recall of laborers from abroad by their fellow townsmen. Those who lived near the Samaritans dreaded the result of having it known that some of their own people were helping in building the wall of Jerusalem, and so called to them to return home. They did this, not once, nor twice, but over and over again—persistently.

The Plot Defeated (13-18).—Behind the low places in the wall, which the enemy easily could scale, and on the higher or exposed parts of the wall he placed the people, "by families," knowing that those who were thus intimate would have more reliance one upon the other, if it should come to a conflict, than they would upon strangers. After he had inspected the defenses thus arranged, Nehemiah exhorted the nobles, the rulers, and the rest of the people not to be afraid, but to remember "the Lord which is great and terrible, and fight for your brothren, your sons and your daughters, your wives, and your houses." So the enemy seemed to consider it; for observing the entire readiness of the Jews to fight as well as to work, Sanballat retired from before Jerusalem. The armed and determined attitude of the inhabitants revealed to him that his scheme had been found out, and "God had brought their counsel to nought."

After the retirement of the enemy, the work upon the walls was resumed. The builders of the wall, and the burden bearers, while carrying with one hand wrought in the work, and with the other held a weapon, a javelin. In addition the builders had by their side a sword. By the side of Nehemiah was the trumpeter, at the sound of whose instrument all the people were to gather round their leader. Those who lived outside the city, instead of returning home at night were directed to remain with their servants inside the walls. No precautions were omitted to prevent surprise. They labored from the grey of morning until the stars appeared. None of them during the building of the wall put off their clothing. They were never off duty. He is the best leader who sets his subordinates the example. In all this, Nehemiah showed himself to be a man of eminent piety, executive ability, tact, vigilance, courage, perseverance, and utterly unsparing of his own comfort.

The rebuilding of the wall in the manner described, was a remarkable fulfillment of prophecy. For Daniel had said: "The street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times." Dan. 9: 25.

Lost Friends.

NOTE.—We receive many letters asking for information about lost friends. All such letters will be published in this column. We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notices. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.

Grand Excursion to Europe in the Summer of 1879.

Last summer, some three hundred Americans, both ladies and gentlemen, were enabled to make an extended tour of Europe, economically, yet always traveling "first-class," and stopping at first-class hotels, under the guidance of Dr. Tourjee, of Boston. The very great success of that excursion—and nothing of the kind seems ever to have passed off more satisfactorily to the participants—has led to many urgent requests for its repetition. Without having the slightest intent that way until urged to such a course, Dr. Tourjee has planned another grand excursion to the Old World for the summer of 1879. His programme seems far more desirable than that of last summer. A longer time is to be spent abroad, the route is greatly extended and varied, and innumerable advantages are offered which were not included in the first trip. The party will leave New York by one of the largest and finest steamers of the Anchor Line, June 28, and return on or about September 15. Those who prefer a shorter tour can return a fortnight earlier. The foreign tour will include England, Scotland, Ireland, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, and France. Most of the great art centers of Europe will be visited, and the trip will also include the Scottish Lakes and Highlands, Kenworth Castle, Stratford-on-Avon, the quaint sections of Holland, the Rhine, Stuttgart, Ulm, Munich, and other interesting places in Wurtemberg and Bavaria, the romantic Austrian Tyrol, all the great cities of Italy, the tour extending as far south as Naples, Mount Vesuvius, and Pompeii,) the beautiful Lake Maggiore, the High Alps, the Vale of Chamouni with Mont Blanc, the Swiss Lakes and most romantic resorts, the Righi, etc. About a week each will be passed in London, Rome, and Paris, with free carriage drives in each place, and all fees paid everywhere. Notwithstanding the many increased advantages, the excursion tickets will be at the same price as before.

Our American Magazines.

The marvelous beauty of the illustrated magazines of this country is attracting attention throughout the world. The edition of Scribner in England has doubled within a few months. The London correspondent of the New York Times says: "The whole lot of magazine annuals (English) put together, are not equal in pictorial art to a single number of Scribner's Monthly." But the price at which our magazines are sold is even a greater marvel. For example, a single number of Scribner, "The Midwinter Number," just issued, has a full-page frontispiece Portrait of Emerson, of rare excellence, and contains one hundred and sixty pages of letter-press, with more than seventy illustrations; many of which are works of art such as before the advent of Scribner appeared only in gift-works and purely art magazines, and yet it is sold for thirty-five cents. It would be difficult to find an illustrated book to match it at $5. The subscribers for the current year, get, in Scribner, not only four of these full-paged portraits of American Poets, and nearly two thousand pages of text (equal to 5000 book pages) of the choicest current literature, with more than 1000 illustrations, including a complete novel, "Haworth's," by Mrs. Burnett, but shorter stories, poems, reviews, descriptions of travel, biographical sketches, etc., and also the splendid series of papers and pictures of exploration in the great South American empire of Brazil, delivered free of postage, and all for four dollars.

In Children's Periodicals, too, America leads the world with St. Nicholas. Prof. Proctor, the astronomer, writes from London: "What a wonderful magazine it is for young folks! Our children are quite as much delighted with it as American children can be. I will not say they are more delighted, as that may not be possible." St. Nicholas is sold for twenty-five cents a number, and fourteen numbers (November, 1878, to 1880) are given for $3.

At first glance one would say, literature, art, and cheapness can no further go—but in this country intelligence is so widespread, and artistic culture is so extended, that there is scarcely any end to the demand for such magazines as Scribner's for grown-ups and St. Nicholas for children, and, as the sale of these publications increases their conductors will continue to add new features of excellence and attraction.

EVANGELICAL RATIONALISM. By Loren Knox, D. D. Cincinnati: Hitchcock & Walden.

This book of 250 pages, 12mo, is devoted to a consideration of the truths practically related to man's probation, collated in eleven chapters. The preparation of a work of this nature is a difficult task, but if we may judge, the author has given an excellent summary of many of the topics which the title chosen suggests.

JAEL'S DAUGHTERS; AND OTHER STORIES. By Mrs. F. H. Burnett. Philadelphia: T. B. Peterson & Brothers. New Orleans: J. C. Eyrich, 130 Canal street. Price 25 cents.

It is a reprint of three stories from Peterson's Magazine, written by one who is not altogether new to novel readers, or unappreciated.

On and after January 1st, 1879, the publishers or any book-seller or news dealer will supply the numbers of St. Nicholas for Nov. and Dec. 1878, free (i. e., fourteen numbers for the subscription price, $3.00) to any new subscriber for 1879. The November number, the first of the volume, contains the opening chapters of a Serial for Boys—"A Jolly Fellowship," by Frank R. Stockton, to run through the year; and a Serial for Girls, by Susan Coolidge, begins in February, while the entire volume will be crowded with good things by the best writers and artists. The Christmas Holiday Number contains contributions from John G. Whittier, Charles Dudley Warner, Mary Mapes Dodge, Susan Coolidge, Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter, Mrs. Burnett (author of "That Lass o' Lowrie's"), and many others. This number is included in a subscription for 1879, or will be sent singly, post-paid, for 25 cents. Price, $3.00 a Year. SCRIBNER & CO., 743 Broadway, N. Y.

The Living Age, for the week ending Jan. 18th, contains an installment of George MacDonald's "Sir Gibbie," and of Sarah Tytler's "The Bride's Pass"; an article by Prof. Goldwin Smith, on "The Greatness of England"; the conclusion of "Holidays in Eastern France"; "The Phoenicians in Greece," by A. H. Sayce, from the Contemporary Review; "A Worldlet within the World," Spectator; "Poor Creatures," Saturday Review; "The Death of the Princess Alice," Spectator, and the usual choice poetry, etc The publishers still present to new subscribers for 1879, six numbers of 1878, containing the first parts of MacDonald's "Sir Gibbie."

For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four pages each (or more than 3,000 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send to any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston, publishers.

Sunday Afternoon for January has the opening chapter of a new serial by the author of Tom's Heathen, entitled Colvin the Sinner. Rebecca Harding Davis has a short story, and there are two others, One of the Converts, and Mrs. Wilkin's Duty. E. E. Hale's serial, and Fishers of Men are concluded. Prof. George P. Fisher of New Haven, in an article on Witchcraft, tells us that disbelief in it was considered by religious people two hundred years ago a great sin. Rose Terry Cooke gives advice to young ladies as to literature as a profession. George M. Towle gives an account of Socialism, more particularly in Germany and Russia. Rev. Dr. E. A. Washburn of New York, translates an account of the evidence in the Egyptian antiquities of the early Jewish history. Mrs. Helen Campbell writes of one of Jerry McAuley's "Experience Meetings." J. B. T. Marsh, David Ker and Charles Cavorno have contributions, and there are poems by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Ray Palmer and Lucy Larcom. In the Editor's Table are, How Our Neighbors Live, Sects and Schisms, and Ghouls and a Lecturer, the "lecturer" being Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Specimen copy 15 cents. Address Springfield, Mass.

"You see, grandma," said a hotbed specimen of juvenile precocity, "that when I suck this egg, or more properly speaking, when I extract the nutritive matter by a sudden and peculiar action of the muscles of the throat, I first make an incision in the apex, and then a corresponding aperture in the base." "Mercy on me! Oh how things do change!" exclaimed the old lady, in such surprise that her old spectacles dropped off at the flashing of her almost sightless eyes; "when I was a gal, all we did was to make a hole in each end and down it went. My stars! this 'ere child hain't got long to live, I know."

The Quickest Time East.

The Great Jackson Route is now making the quickest time to New York ever known, leaving New Orleans daily at 5:45 p. m., and arriving at New York at 6:35 a. m. Allowing for the difference in time between the two cities, the run is made in the unprecedented time of fifty-nine and three-quarter hours. This quick time is made only by the Great Jackson Route, and is the result of its enterprise in rebuilding its track with steel rails and new ties, at heavy expense, and the thorough system of ballasting that has been undertaken. This fast train will be of great advantage to the people of this city, which it is hoped they will show their appreciation of by their patronage. Only one change of cars, which is made at [illegible] where breakfast [illegible] at 8 a. m.

This route also makes the quickest time to Boston, arriving at 2:40 p. m. Actual running time, sixty-seven and one-half hours. This the most desirable route for all New England points. The time to all intermediate points in correspondingly less, thus making this the quickest and best route to all the Northern and Eastern cities.

Excursion tickets to Waukesha, Oconomowoc and all the Northwestern summer resorts, to Niagra Falls, Put-in-Bay, etc., are on sale at the lowest rates with the quickest time made by any line, and only one change of cars.

COURSE OF STUDY FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 89, §5 of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

I. Let candidates for license to preach be examined in the common branches of an English education, and on their general acquaintance with the Bible and the doctrines and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

II. FIRST YEAR. The Bible—History. Binney's Theological Compend. Steele's Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

TO BE READ. Scripture History—Old Testament. Smith's. Watson's Life of Wesley. A Hundred Years of Methodism.—Simpson.

III. SECOND YEAR.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Merrill.

TO BE READ.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the United States.—Ridpath. Ruter's Church History—1 vol., 8 vo.

IV. THIRD YEAR.—The Bible—Sacraments. Wakefield's Theology—Last Four Books. Christian Perfection—Wesley's Plain Account.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons.—Vol. I. Introduction to the Gospel Records.—Nast. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation—In one vol., 8 vo.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

The Methodist Hymnal,

AND

Hymnal with Tunes.

We are now prepared to fill orders for the following editions of the "METHODIST HYMNAL:"

Pearl, Plain	$0 40
Pearl, Red Edge	0 50
24mo, Plain	0 50
24mo, Red Edge	0 65
24mo, Roan, Embossed	0 75
24mo, Roan, Gilt Edge	1 00
16mo, Plain	0 75
16mo, Red Edge	1 00
16mo, Roan, Embossed	1 20
16mo, Roan Gilt Edge	1 40
*Hymnal with Tunes, 12mo	1 00
Hymnal with Tunes, 8vo	1 75

Since the manuscript of the Hymnal was delivered by the Committee, October 26th, last, time has been required to prepare and perfect the indexes, to complete the arrangements of the Hymns and Tunes, and to adjust all to a system of uniform numbering. Time has also been consumed in the transmission of proofs to and from the members of the Committee, but there has been no unnecessary delay. In view of these facts, and the amount of work involved in issuing so many editions in good style, we think that it has been completed at the earliest moment practicable.

The new book contains a great variety of the best spiritual songs, adapting it both to public and social worship. It should be used in social meetings and Sunday-schools, and thus be the means of familiarizing our children with the living hymns of the church. The cheaper editions will cost little more than the ordinary Sunday-school song books that last but a season. The Hymnal with Tunes is a rich and varied treasury of sacred music, and the 12mo edition is the cheapest complete Hymn and Tune Book in the land.

We ask all pastors to aid in the general and immediate introduction of the Hymnal, and Hymnal with Tunes. Let it be the occasion of an effort to intensify the true spirit of worship where it flourishes, and to revive it where it languishes, that the Methodist Episcopal Church may soon become, as aforetime, mighty in song.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.
2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

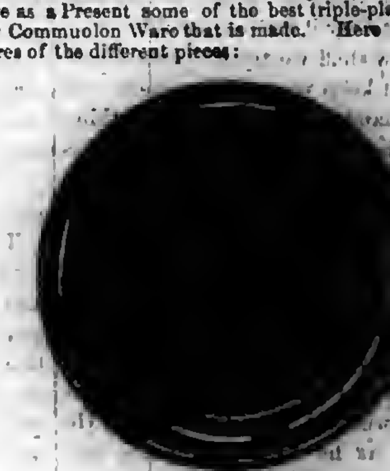
III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

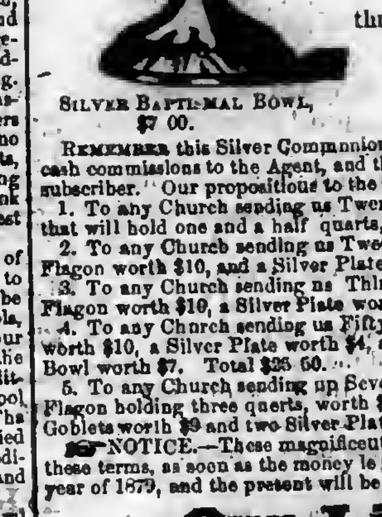
IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:

SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 14 00

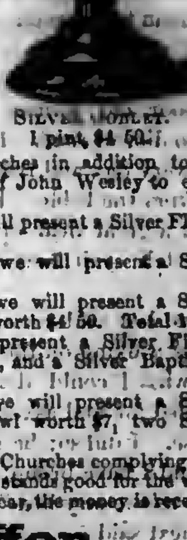


SILVER PLATE. 10 inches wide, $4.00



SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL, $7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country



SILVER GOBLET. 1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.
2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.
3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total $18 50.
4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.
5. To any Church sending us Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us. This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregation where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.
2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.
3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission; the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.
4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping [illegible] or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

The Class-Leader,

His Work, and How to Do It, With Illustrations of Principles, Needs, Methods, and Results.

BY REV. JOHN ATKINSON, A. M., Author of "Garden of Sorrows."

12mo ... $1.50

It is a sociable, practical, pertinent book. It calls upon Class-Leaders to tell their experience. It draws out suggestions and stirring thoughts from practical hands. The Leadership is called into council. And Mr. Atkinson, as leader of the leaders expounds the subject in such a way as to make far the best book written on the subject. He speaks out in meeting as one who means business. He is hortatory, critical and suggestive, all in a free, flowing style that carries the reader upon its rapid current to his journey's end quite as quick as he wishes to stop. Few will begin it without finishing it, and many will find a re-reading at once pleasant.

Here is a book that we would be glad to have go into the hands of every class-leader in the church, because it is just such a book as by its illustrations and suggestions will help them very greatly.

We have read it with great interest, and are delighted with it. It is a very suggestive volume.

MAGAZINES —AND— Weeklies.

For the convenience of subscribers, who may wish to take leading Magazines and Weeklies, arrangements have been made with the publishers, so that they can be offered on the following favorable terms with the SOUTHWESTERN. The first column of figures gives the price of the publication per year, and the second the price of the two, including the SOUTHWESTERN.

FLOWER OF GRASS.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

The gracefulness that homeley life takes on
When love is at its root, you saw in her;
No colors, but soft tints in lovely blur—
A charm which if so much as named was gone,
Like light out of a passing cloud. Yet when
The fairer faces bloomed on you alone,
Without the softening of her presence, then
Into their look had something garish grown.
Some tenderness had faded from the air,
A loss so subtle and so undefined
The thought was blamed that hinted loss was there.
The nature of such souls is to be blind
To self, and to self-seeking; let them blend
Their life in harmony and atmosphere
With other lives; let them but have a friend
Whose needs they may set off, or endear,
And they are gladder than in any guess
Or dreams of their own separate happiness.
Earth were not sweet without such souls as hers;
Even of the rose and lily might we tire;
She was the flower of grass, that only stirs
To soothe the air, and nothing doth require
But to forget itself in doing good;
One of God's lowly, saintly multitude.
—Sunday Afternoon for January.

Hearts and Hands.

One day a teacher said to his class: "Boys you can all be useful if you will. If you cannot do good by great deeds, you can by little ones."

The boys said nothing, but the teacher saw by their looks that they [illegible]. They did not believe that they were of any use. So he said—

"You think it is not so, but suppose you try it for one week."

"How shall we try it?" asked one, "[illegible] eyes opened and [illegible] to do anything [illegible] in your way all this [illegible] next Sabbath it [illegible] to be useful [illegible] or other," said the [illegible]

Two Scenes.

"Here!" said a father, in a tone of authority and with a degree of harshness to his son. The lad was at play with his companions. He looked towards his father, but did not leave his playmates.

"Did you hear me?" said the father still more sternly.

With an unhappy face and a reluctant step, the boy left his playmates and approached his parent. "Why do you creep along so slowly, like a snail," said the father in an angry tone. "Come quickly, I want you. When I speak I like to be obeyed instantly. Here, take this note to Mr. Smith, and see that you do not go to sleep on the way. Now run as fast as you can go."

The boy took the note. There was a cloud on his brow. He moved onward at a slow pace.

"Is that doing as I ordered you? Is that going quickly?" called the father, when he saw his son creeping along. "If you are not back in half an hour, you may expect I will punish you?"

But the words had little effect. The boy's feelings were hurt by the unkindness of the parent. He experienced a sense of injustice, a consciousness that wrong had been done to him. By nature he was like his father, proud and stubborn, and these qualities of his mind were aroused, and he indulged them regardless of consequences.

"I never saw such a boy;" said his father, speaking to a friend who had observed the occurrence; "my words scarcely made an impression on him."

"Kind words are often the most powerful," said the friend.

The father looked surprised.

"Kind words are like gentle rain and the refreshing dew; but harsh words bend and break like the angry tempest. They first strengthen and develop good affections, while the others sweep over the heart in devastation, marring and deforming all they touch."

"Try your son with kind words; they will prove a hundred-fold more powerful."

The father at first seemed hurt by the reproof, but it left him thoughtful. An hour passed away before the boy returned. At times during his boy's absence, he was angry at the delay. But the words of remonstrance were so impressive that he resolved to heed. At last the lad came slowly in with a cloudy countenance, and reported the result of the errand. He looked for punishment, and was prepared to receive it with angry defiance. To his surprise, after he delivered the message, instead of seeing his father angry, heard him say kindly, "very well, my son, you may now go out to play." The boy went out, but was not happy. He had disobeyed and disobliged his father, and the thought of this troubled him. Harsh words had not clouded his mind nor aroused a spirit of reckless anger. Instead of going to his companions, he went and sat down by himself, mourning over his act of disobedience. While thus he sat he heard his name called: "Thomas, my son," said his father kindly.

The boy sprang to his feet, and was soon beside his parent. "Did you call me, father?"

"I did, my son. Will you take this package to Mr. Long for me?"

There was no hesitation in the boy's manner. He looked pleased at doing his father's service and reached out his hand for the package. On receiving it, he bounded away with a light step.

"There is power in kindness," said the father as he sat musing after the lad's departure. And even while he sat musing over the incident, the boy came back with a cheerful, happy look, and said: "Can I do anything else for you, father?"

"Yes, yes," said the father to himself, "there is power in kindness, and I now see that while the tempest of passion and harshness may constrain [illegible] it is the spirit of kindness which gives an influence over mind [illegible] like the summer rain, the dew and the sunshine on the fields [illegible]

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By its great and thorough blood-purifying properties, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt-rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine.

Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, White Swellings, Goitre or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flashes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.

In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. Sold by druggists.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets

SIZE OF PELLETS.

THE "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC.

No use of taking the large, repulsive, nauseous pills, composed of cheap, crude, and bulky ingredients. These Pellets are scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them. They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For Jaundice, Headache, Constipation, Impure Blood, Pain in the Shoulders, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations from the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious attacks, Pain in region of Kidneys, Internal Fever, Bloated feeling about Stomach, Rush of Blood to Head, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Purgative Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may be said that their action upon the animal economy is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative impress. Age does not impair the properties of these Pellets. They are sugar-coated and inclosed in glass bottles, their virtues being thereby preserved unimpaired for any length of time, in any climate, so that they are always fresh and reliable. This is not the case with pills put up in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes. For all diseases where a Laxative, Alterative, or Purgative, is indicated, these little Pellets will give the most perfect satisfaction. Sold by druggists.

CATARRH

SYMPTOMS.—Frequent headache, discharge falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, thick, mucous, purulent, offensive, etc. In others, a dryness, dry, watery, weak, or inflamed eyes, stopping up, or obstruction, of the nasal passages, ringing in ears, deafness, hawking and coughing to clear the throat, ulcerations, scabs from ulcers, voice altered, nasal twang, offensive breath, impaired or total deprivation of sense of smell and taste, dizziness, mental depression, loss of appetite, indigestion, enlarged tonsils, tickling cough, etc. Only a few of these symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY

produces radical cures of the worst cases of Catarrh, no matter of how long standing. The liquid remedy may be snuffed, or better applied by the use of Dr. Pierce's Douche. This is the only form of instrument yet invented with which fluid medicine can be carried high up and PERFECTLY APPLIED to all parts of the affected nasal passages, and the chambers or cavities communicating therewith, in which sores and ulcers frequently exist, and from which the catarrhal discharge generally proceeds. Its use is pleasant and easily understood, from directions accompanying each instrument. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures recent attacks of "Cold in the Head" by a few applications. It is mild and pleasant to use, containing no strong or caustic drugs or poisons. Catarrh Remedy and Douche sold by druggists.

THE GENUINE

DR. C. McLANE'S

CELEBRATED

LIVER PILLS,

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

Dr. J. M. Howe's Inhaling Tube!

—AND—

COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaid, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remdy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Seburman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 tf.

Female Complaints,
Nervousness,
Urinary Diseases,
General Ill-Health,
Wasting Decay,
Spermatorrhœa,
Epilepsy,
Paralysis,
Sexual Exhaustion,
Spinal Diseases,
Indigestion,

And other chronic ailments.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONY.

[Extract from the Baltimore "American," December 21, 1878.]

"The Pulvermacher Electric Belt is recommended to general use for the following reasons: First, for its wonderful properties for the cure of diseases of the kidneys, stomach, liver and blood; secondly, for its extreme simplicity, and the fact of its being applied outside, precludes all possibility of any injury being done to the patient, as an external remedy is universally acknowledged to be safe. Another advantage is the facility with which the progress of the disease and cure can be watched, and if the Belt be not quite in the right place, it can be very easily readjusted so as to cover the parts affected. The Pulvermacher Electric Belt, and its perfection, has been hailed with delight, not only by the sufferers who have regained health, enjoyment, and a new lease of life through its beneficent qualities, but by the medical profession, who very frequently prescribe its use to their patients."

PULVERMACHER'S

are indorsed and approved by the most eminent medical and scientific authorities in the world, by the Faculties of France, England, Austria, Prussia, Belgium, and America, and by well-known writers, who refer to the extraordinary cures effected by Pulvermacher's Electric Belts and Bands, in upwards of one hundred medical and philosophical works.

but a salutary medicine. "Experience," said Franklin, "is a dear school, but fools will learn in no other." Men have always been fools and have needed to take a term or two in these reformatory institutions. For years our people were living beyond their means; while earning ten dollars they got in the way of spending fifteen. That order is being reversed; earning fifteen they are learning to live on ten. It is a hard lesson to learn, especially for old and long indulged children; but we are making reasonable proficiency in it.

The religious interest in our churches is fair, but by no means what we could desire. We think it in advance of some former years. Our dependence is largely on home talent, and in the use of this we are enjoying some precious revivals of religion. There is nothing we so much need through our whole land as a mighty outpouring of the spirit to check the tide of infidelity and to subdue the worldly spirit so prevalent among the whole American people. But I must stop with signing my name. NAMREHS.

Church Extension---A Fair Thing.

At the November meeting of the General Committee of Church Extension the following was adopted:

Resolved, 1. That the Board be authorized to make appropriations within each conference, in proportion to the response of the conference, by its collection to the call made upon it.

2. That the amount authorized to conferences are to be furnished, as far as practicable, by a pro rata division of collections. The Board may supplement, as far as practicable, the balance of the appropriations authorized by loans from the Loan Funds.

For years past these rules have been applied to conferences which have been asked to put into the treasury more than they could take out; but the weaker conferences were to get a definite sum, with such amount added as their own collections should aggregate. For instance, the Kentucky Conference was last year asked for $1,000 and authorized to receive 2,000. Under the rules then in force, if the collections there should amount to but $500 they would lose only so much as they should fail to raise, and would be entitled to receive $1,500 —a pro rata of the aggregate collections by donation, and the remainder by loan. Hereafter if their collections shall amount to but $500 they will be entitled to receive only $1,000. Five hundred dollars of the amount are supposed to come from their own collections. The question remains, Where shall the other $500 come from? Hitherto it has been, Where shall the other $1,000 come fro ? The question is made easier for the Board in meeting the authorized demands for aid, but not nullified by failure of the conferences to raise the amount asked, it had grown to be a question involving an aggregate of $50,000. How did this come about?

For illustration of the answer take a conference where the figures last given are reversed. The Iowa Conference was asked to put into our Church Extension treasury $3,000, and Churches within its bounds might receive $1,600. Now if both the conferences named should raise the full amount asked and receive the full amount authorized, the case would stand thus:

	Asked.	Authorized.
Kentucky	$1,000	$2,000
Iowa	2,000	1,000
Total	$3,000	$3,000

It will be seen that the two sides balance, and the Board would come out even. But suppose each raises only half the amount asked, and demands the amount that the rule heretofore in force would place to their credit. The case would then stand thus:

	Collected.	Authorized.
Kentucky	$500	$1,000
Iowa	1,000	500
Total	$1,500	$1,500

Iowa would must then get $500 from elsewhere else, to bring the two [illegible] Where shall it get [illegible] fund has enabled the [illegible] supplement by loans, to a [illegible] but still, at the No- [illegible] meeting, it was found that [illegible] all the conferences together, [illegible] amounts authorized [illegible] was within of amounts [illegible] about $50,000. [illegible] of serious impor- [illegible] had to be done [illegible] the weaker [illegible] category [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] in the [illegible] column of amounts authorized a little, and yet will not be likely to bring the two together. Taking the two already named to illustrate: If the collections should be the same the case would stand thus:

	Collected.	Authorized.
Kentucky	$500	$1,000
Iowa	1,000	500
Total	$1,500	$1,500

But suppose that the Kentucky Conference should raise three-fourths of the amount asked and the Iowa Conference but one-fourth? Then the case would stand thus:

	Collected.	Authorized.
Kentucky	$750	$1,500
Iowa	500	250
Total	$1,250	$1,750

The old difficulty would return in full force, and we would be compelled to find $500 somewhere else. The Board must still claim the right given under the second resolution and "supplement, as far as practicable the balance authorized by loans from the Loan Fund."

It is, as many have urged, very important that as far as possible a definite amount should be authorized for donations within each conference. This can only be done when the conferences can be relied upon for definite sums by collections. Water must flow into the cistern before it can be pumped out, and no matter how thirsty the people may be, they cannot pump more out than has flowed in. The real and practicable solution of the whole question is for every preacher—presiding elder and pastor—to faithfully apply the Disciplinary plan for the collections, until by every charge doing its part, every conference, weak and strong, shall raise the full amount asked for Church Extension. When any conference shall have done this, and not until then, it may fairly demand the full amount authorized. If, on the basis of the amounts asked and authorized by the General Committee, the Board deals as generously by the conference as the conference deals by the Board, there should be no complaint. It is a fair thing.

"A Solid South" and Southern Methodism.

BY REV. A. C. GEORGE, D. D.

It seems, from a recent editorial in the Christian Advocate, (Nashville), the metropolitan journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that the two things mentioned in our caption sustain very close relations to each other. The title of the article is "Our Duty to the Negro," and its first words refer to the result and significance of the late elections. The political aspects of the question, the editor does not propose to discuss; but "a solid South," in his judgment, brings a grand opportunity to Southern Christianity, especially to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The meaning, he argues of a "solid South" to "our churches," is "that now we can do something for the Negro." Indeed! Why now? The Southern churches, we are informed, "have done for the Negro religiously pretty much all that ever has been done." Well, on whom did the responsibility for the religious culture of the Negroes rest, if not on the men who owned them, and the churches which recognized the necessity, if not the justness and propriety of their enslaved condition? The Nashville Advocate says:

'During twice seven years we have been, more or less, cut off from doing for the religious culture of the colored people in our midst what they needed, and what we wished to do, but had no opportunity.'

We cannot understand what has been the cause of this afflicting deprivation, provided it was "the religious culture of the colored people" which was desired. If instruction in the things of God and in the way of salvation was, in the judgment of Southern Methodism, what the Negroes "needed," and the work which these philanthropic men "wished to do," wherein has been the lack of "opportunity?" There have been no hindrances, in the last fourteen years, so far as we have ever learned, in the way of the religious instruction of colored men in the South, by Southern white men. Christian men and women from the North have been opposed, ridiculed, proscribed, ostracised, hated and martyred, because they entered that truly missionary field, to teach those who had been slaves and were still ignorant and superstitious, the knowledge of God's word and the freedom of redeemed souls. It is a new idea that Southern Methodists have been excluded from this benevolent work. Our contemporary shows what has been the real trouble, by the character of the difficulties suggested. In respect to the Negroes and the Negro churches, it is affirmed:

'Their churches were frequently turned into political machines. Their preachers and pulpits were engaged in doing service for "loyalty." The white men who figured among them as leaders were mainly adventurers and carpet-baggers. The carpet-bagger lingered in the Negro school and pulpit after other places had been blessed with his departure. Political songs and harangues were heard in their places of worship, and campaign documents were distributed in the congregations.'

This certainly sheds a little light on the subject. It shows where the creaking is in the Southern ecclesiastical machinery. We agree with the Advocate that "a political platform is a poor substitute for the Gospel of Jesus Christ;" and yet, in the quoted words of the N. Y. Times, "Republicanism is the religion of the Negro," is, as is asserted, "to a large degree" "true," what a terrible indictment does it furnish against Southern Christianity! Had, then, these poor Africo-Americans received from Southern churches so little light and comfort in their bondage, that Republican doctrines—the doctrines of equality of manhood irrespective of color or condition, of common civil and political rights—seemed to them as an evangel of heaven, or a new dispensation of the Kingdom of God? Could any severer thing be said of the bitterest abolitionist of the kind of Gospel formerly dispensed to the colored people of the South?

Another class of teachers and preachers came in, and, according to the Nashville organ, they wrought an immense amount of mischief. "It was a part of their policy," we are assured, "to breed distrust and dislike among the Negroes toward Southern white people. Nor was this the worst, as the following statement witnesses:

'They aimed at "social equality" in all their educational schemes. They were continually pushing their favorite social idea. To get a Negro seated on a public platform along with white men, or paraded in public halls and private parlors, was an object of their desire greater than to get a great black sinner converted, or a dark mind enlightened. An envious hatred of the "Southern whites"—a purpose to humble their pride, as they called it—was the inspiration of their philanthropy.'

Here are some pretty serious charges. These teachers, it is alleged, had less desire to get a black sinner converted or a dark mind enlightened, than they had to get a Negro seated on a public platform or paraded in public halls and private parlors, along with white men! The inspiration of their philanthropy, it is affirmed, was an envious hatred of Southern whites, and a determination to humble their pride! We should say that these allegations are false, uncharitable, malignant and wicked, judged by any other standard than that of a Southern, slave-holding, Negro hating Christianity.

In fact, the animus of the whole bitter accusation is in the sentence —"They were continually pushing their favorite social idea." The italicised word is that of the Advocate, and reveals the sore place.

In other words, these "carpet-baggers" preached a Gospel of humanity and treated Negroes as if they were men. They would have been a disgrace to Christian civilization if they had done less; but "all this," says the Advocate, "was a baneful hindrance to that religious culture and education which the Negro most needed, and which, if left to himself, he really preferred." That may be so; but a religious culture and education which is hindered by a fear of social equality is not Christian, is not fit to be imparted, and is scarcely above the level of the meanest paganism.

We ask our readers to consider the import of the following sentences, taken here and there, from the article under review:

'The Southern States have come out of the canvass all on one side.'

'What is the meaning of this to our Churches? That now we can do something for the Negro.'

'This is changed now, and the elections declare it.'

'The Fall elections indicate a clearing out of this element, and a fairer field.'

'Once more Southern Christians have access to the Negro. Confidence and good relations are being restored.'

'A Solid South is the alarming result as seen by some, the wished-for result as seen by others.'

Two or three things may be noted.

1. "A Solid South" means a solid North. The President has given to the South the most generous treatment, but the warmed viper shows its fangs. It is his nature. If any man supposes that the people of the North will desert the freedman, or will demand less than an honest observance of the amendments to the federal constitution, he is greatly mistaken.

2. Nobody, North or South, demands "social equality" for any class or condition as such; that is, irrespective of character and intelligence. What we do demand is, that no person or class shall be deprived of "social equality" because of color, or previous condition of servitude. God is no respecter of persons, and the church that insists on such distinctions is anti Christ. A man is entitled to consideration according to his mental and moral worth.

3. A solid Democratic South is hailed as an opportunity by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. There is, then, but one position which the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States can safely hold on the great issues which divide the nation. If Republican success be necessary to the peaceful prosecution of our church work anywhere from the Lakes to the Gulf, then we shall conquer, if need be, our Democratic prejudices, in the interest of a loyal Methodism. However strong our partisan feelings, we shall never abandon our church.

4. If Cape May fraternily "hath this extent no more"—if it means that we are to withdraw from the South, and especially that we are to surrender the colored people into the hands of men who hate social equality, even when there be common acceptance in God's kingdom, and unquestioned mental and moral worth on the part of the proscribed class, then, the action of the Central New York Conference on the deliverance of the joint commission is fully justified by events.

There is but one way for us as a church. We must carry our banner forward. We must sustain our Southern conferences. We must take care of our Freedmen's schools. We ought to increase, ten-fold, our collections for the Freedmen's Aid Society. We ought to pour the money without stint into our missionary treasury. Our church work in the South is a work of patriotism, a beneficent work, a genuine Christian work. A grand opportunity is before us. Let us be faithful to our trust—to the nation, to the poor and to Christ, and the result will be great, wide-spread, far-reaching and glorious.—Northern Christian Advocate.

Florida Conference.

The Florida Conference met at Monticello, January 8, Bishop Peck presiding and S. B. Darnell secretary. Samuel D. Paine was transferred to the Rock River Conference. None were admitted on trial and Jeffry Grant and George A. Roberts were admitted into full connection. Statistics show an increase of 143 members and 38 probationers. Several ministers of other churches visited the Conference and were introduced.

Bishop Peck and Dr. Ford preached for the Southern Methodists on Sabbath.

Beauties of Liberia.

The following letter has been received by Messrs. Walker and Trenholm, of this city, from Rufus Clark, one of the colored emigrants who left in the bark Azor last Spring for Mourovia. The letter, in his own peculiar style, will speak more eloquently to the colored people of the realities of the colored Utopia than finished language could do:

MONROVIA, REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA, November 10, 1878.

Messrs. Walker & Trenholm:

DEAR SIRS—I write to you to say that I am in Liberia and I want to get back to America, and I have not the means to get there. I cannot make a living here, for there is nothing going on for a living in this country but lying and cheating and stealing, and there is no law to protect you in this country. I was expecting to go back by the Azor; but we don't know whether she will come back or not. I write this to ask you, please to send me money to get back to Charleston, or make some arrangements with some captain who runs from America to Liberia. I would rather you would make some arrangements with a captain to pay him when you receive me at Charleston. If you will aid and assist me to get away from this country I will be willing to bind myself and family to work for you on your place, or any way you want me until you are satisfied of your money.

I have five grown children and three little ones in my family, and I say to you I am a regular farmer, and we will all work for you if you will only put me in a place where I can make corn and cotton and rice. I thought that I could live in this country, but I find that no man can live in this country. Please make arrangements with Captain Holmes, of the bark Azor, if he has not left Charleston for Monrovia before you receive my letter, to bring me back home again. If you will favor me I will see that you will be satisfied of your money. I could tell you a great deal about this country, but I won't say any more about it until I reach you. I take you to be my favorite friends, and that makes me write to you so particularly. My brothers have written the that I have written to you to some of their friends. Please let me hear from you in sixty days' time, and direct your letter to Monrovia, Republic of Liberia. Respectfully, RUFUS CLARK.

The Great Contrast.

The Southern papers were never tired of pointing to the Mollie Magnire murders in Pennsylvania as an offset for the hundred times as many Ku-Klux murders in five or six Southern States. Will they now be equally ready to require as faithful an administration of the law against murder in those States as has been seen in Pennsylvania, where twenty-two of the secret members of an organized league of assassins have been executed for murders committed from two to sixteen years ago? When will Mississippi, or Louisiana, or Tennessee, or South Carolina wake up to the demand of law and order to hang twenty-two of the perpetrators of wholesale massacres or individual assassinations? Shall we hear it now as loudly proclaimed that Southern fidelity to law and justice matches that of the North, as we heard that Northern assassinations matched those of the South?

Here is just the point that the great contrast comes in: The utter failure of the South to administer her own laws. The Governor of Mississippi, as an excuse for not even bringing the infamous Kemper County murderers of the Chisholm family to trial, said no official of the county or State would take any step against them and he was powerless. And this is the state of affairs, we believe, generally in the South wherever negroes or their friends are wronged or murdered for an alleged political or race cause.

Yet the great Christian power of the pulpit of the South holds its peace at this general iniquity and injustice, and the Southern congregations of professing Christians will have it so! Who would emigrate to a country where injustice is the rule in all such cases so long as the boundless West is before him? The South must utterly change its policy in this matter, and the pulpit must lead the way if that region is to take its place among civilized countries.—N. Y. Witness.

Frederick Douglass responds with a good deal of justifiable feeling to a charge that he said of the Southern negro that he must "suffer and wait, and suffer," but that nothing can be done for him. "I have said," he writes to the Elmira Advertiser, "that something can be done; we can expose fraud; we can denounce violence; we can kindle the moral indignation of the country against meanness and crime; we can bring out the facts by investigation; we can exhaust all legal means for the protection of Republican voters of the South—and if these shall fail we can adopt such other remedies as the wisdom of our wisest men will suggest and approve. In all this, time is an important element." That is an admiral summary of the aims of the Republican party in its present controversy with the Solid South. The "moral indignation of the country" is the most effective weapon with which to fight bulldozing and tissue-ballots. —N. Y. Tribune.

Of all intoxicating liquors beer is the most animalizing. It dulls the intellectual and moral, and feeds the sensual and beastly nature. Beyond all other drinks it qualifies for deliberate and unprovoked crime. In this respect it is much worse than distilled liquors. A whisky-drinker will commit murder only under the direct excitement of liquor—a beer-drinker is capable of doing it in cold blood. The Pacific Medical and Surgical Journal says: "Long observation has assured us that a large proportion of murders deliberately planned and executed witout passion or malice, with no other motive than the acquisition of money or property, often of trifling value, are perpetrated by beer-drinkers."

Many years ago, in Clinton county, N. Y., a French Roman Catholic priest from Canada instigated a mob and burned a quantity of Bibles and Testaments in the French language, which had been sent into that county to supply the destitute among this class of our foreign population. At the anniversary of the Clinton County Bible Society, held in Plattsburg, on September 24th, the agent of that Society reported that he had recently visited the place where the Bibles had been burned, and found on either side of the Catholic Church French families, who requested to rank them as Protestants, as they no longer had anything to do with the Catholic Church. The church itself has no longer a priest, nor even occasional services.—Am. Bible Society Record.

Since 1804, the new translations of the Bible have been made in 217 languages. The labor involved in these translations is herculean, frequently requiring, as a first step, the formation of a written language. It is no wonder, in view of these difficulties, that revision is frequently required. This work is carried on in many lands, and in Madagascar a band of revisers has sat for over ten years, indicating the great care with which the work is being executed.

In Breathitt county, Ky., whose recents riots attracted so much attention, there were murdered during the war, 19; since the war, 26; total killed during and since the war, 35; wounded since the war, 30. Notwithstanding all this crime and bloodshed, not one has been hung or sent to the penitentiary for any of these crimes. But three persons have been sent to the penitentiary since the war—one for arson and two for grand larceny.

A Memphis paper says: "A stranger dropping into Memphis to-day can see no evidence of the fearful scourge that, for three months, has been destroying our people. The streets are thronged, as of yore, with bright-eyed business men, intent on the main chance, and also with more than the usual number of idlers, with nothing to do but to hold to the lamp-posts."

The Rev. Jack Walkingstick, the Rev. Poor Wolf, and the Rev. Whirlwind are members of the Cherokee Indian Baptist Association. Some 800 persons attended the meeting of the Association, representing eleven churches, and heard the above gentleman and others make addresses.

Sixteen prominent business men of Bay City, Michigan, have published a card announcing their intention to observe Sunday as a day of rest and cessation of their secular labors. The occasion for this singular action was an increasing and open defiance in that town of all customs, sacred and worldly, as regards the Sabbath day.

An intoxicated man by the name of Michael Rossiter, threw a lighted lamp at his wife, a few days ago because she would not give him money to buy whisky with. Her clothes were set on fire, resulting in her death. But the rum-shops are still in full blast.—Chicago Washingtonian

Mississippi Conference.

The Mississippi Conference met at Yazoo City January 15th, and adjourned the 20th. Bishop Andrews presided, and L. Bradford, J. Campbell. J. M. Shumpert, B. F. Penny and E. Locke were the secretaries.

This is the first time Bishop Andrews has met this conference, and his coming was looked forward to with considerable interest. He captured the conference by his kindly, yet prompt and firm manner of conducting business, by his instructive and inspiring pulpit ministrations, and by his gentlemanly personal intercourse with the brethren.

The Conference was well entertained. Presiding Elder Dunn, pastor Brooks, and the people of the church, did themselves credit in providing good homes for all. Besides, the citizens of the place took a special interest in the conference, and by attendance and kind acts and words indicated their good will.

Yazoo City is twenty-five miles from Vaughan Station, on the Chicago, St. Louis & New Orleans Railroad, and as by the continued rains the roads were almost impassable, this part of the trip for nearly fifty of the ministers was one which they will scarcely ever forget, or desire again to take. A large number came by steamboat up the river from Vicksburg. But this trip across the country—which required twelve hours—was not altogether bad. Mr. Norman Burmingham, the proprietor of the hotel and stage line at Vaughan, was master of the situation, and, with great tact and good humor started off load after load, until all were gone, and then, on the return of the company on Tuesday night, gave a grand free supper to all. Such generous treatment brought the company together in an impromptu meeting after supper. Rev. J. G. Johnson was called to the chair, and the following action unanimously taken:

"WHEREAS, Mr. Norman Burmingham, proprietor of the stage line from Vaughan to Yazoo City, did convey members of the Mississippi Annual Conference from Vaughan to Yazoo City and return, for a very small consideration, at great expense and trouble to himself and gave them a good supper on their return; be it Resolved, by the members thus accommodated, that we return our sincere thanks to Mr. Burmingham for his many kindnesses and supper in particular.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Yazoo City Herald for publication."

The editors of the Yazoo City Herald, and Rev. Dr. R. Abbey and Rev. Mr. Barnard of the M. E. Church, South, were especially kind in personal attentions. Dr. Abbey is well known throughout Methodism, has been a prolific maker of books, some of which have attained a wide sale, and socially is a most entertaining companion. Rev. Mr. Barnard is pastor of the M. E. Church, South, in Yazoo, and besides extending the use of his pulpit for the entire Sabbath, visited the conference and took a deep interest in our work. Messrs. Walpole and McDonald, editors of the Herald, gave full notices of the conference and took pains to indicate their appreciation of the work of our church in Mississippi.

We were glad to notice in the conference what we felt were powerful indications of improvement in many things. There is increased [illegible] each year in the reception of [illegible] in the manner of examining the classes of undergraduates, and an improvement in the tone and spirit of the conference. The Presiding Elders for 1879 are H. R. Revels, who also is the President of the Alcorn University, where he is doing invaluable work for the [illegible] and church in educating young men; L. Bradford, J. Campbell, J. G. Johnson, J. W. Dunn and D. McLachlin. We are sure that the coming year will show a great advance in the work under the lead of these men.

The following were continued on trial: A. Davis, D. Moore, H. York, W. B. Kendrick, M. H. Foster, Jas. Drayden, R. McKelpin, L. J. Terrill, W. Maddox.

The following were admitted into full connection: H. May, A. W. Wright, A. R. Sanders, L. Clayton, C. Stewart, J. H. Cook and F. Goldon.

There are thirteen deacons in the first class, and ten in the second class. James J. Shumpert, A. Peebles and R. Roundtree were ordained elders. The following were placed on the superannuated list: Isaac Merriweather, Nelson Yates and John J. Shumpert. The last brother has for several years been a faithful and successful pastor, but disease has fastened itself upon him, and for the present, at least, he must retire. He has the prayers and sympathies of the entire Conference. J. P. Lewis and H. C. Lewis were granted a location. In the matter of ministerial support, there was a falling off, which is not strange when we consider the epidemic and the failure of crops in many portions of this State.

A Rally of the Teacher's Friends.

The mass meeting held at St. Patrick's Hall, Tuesday night reflected honor upon the participants, and the cause of the teachers which it represented. It was a mass meeting, says the Democrat "the like of which never before assembled in New Orleans." Every seat in the spacious hall was filled—embracing white and colored citizens, men, women and children.

Prof. J. Seaman called it to order, B. T. Walsh was elected chairman, Walter V. Crouch, secretary, and a long list of vice-presidents was read.

Hon. John McEnery, Prof. Seaman, E. M. Hudson, Esq., T. J. Semmes, and Gen. Leonard Sewell clearly depicted the danger of the total destruction of the public school system, if immediate remedial legislation was not obtained.

Judge W. T. Houston, the chairman of the committee on resolutions, read the following, which were adopted:

WHEREAS, we recognize the fact that a good system of public education is the very foundation of a great and prosperous republic:

And whereas, we observe with the deepest sorrow and concern that the public schools in New Orleans are in so critical a condition, financially, as to be in serious danger of becoming but a sad wreck of their former grandeur and excellence; and that our teachers who have labored so zealously, ably, and conscientiously to preserve the efficiency of these, the noblest institutions in the land, are most inadequately and irregularly paid for their invaluable services; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the friends and patrons of public education in New Orleans, in assembly here to-night, appreciating the facts aforesaid, and feeling unwilling to further bear the weight of the evils oppressing our educational interests, do solemnly pledge ourselves to give our warmest support, moral and political, to our well-beloved public schools, to the end that they may be all that they have been in the past—the promoters of intelligence, the preservers of peace and good order, and the true expression of the highest instincts and purposes of the community.

Resolved, That, as an earnest of our sincerity in the cause of popular education, we bind ourselves to make the interest of the public schools a prominent feature in the election of candidates to the constitutional convention, and to endeavor to secure the wisest legislation on on the subject, believing, with the patriot, that the training of the children of each commonwealth for intelligent suffrage, is the only safeguard for the perpetuity of a republican form of government.

And be it still further resolved, That in order to more effectually accomplish our purpose we unite our efforts to enlist all good citizens in the just cause which has convened us here this night.

The committee was composed of Judge Wm. T. Houston, Hon. Louis Bush and Edwin T. Kursheedt, Esq.

The chair announced Hon. John McEnery, Dr. J. S. Copes, W. B. Crouch, Esq., Hon. Louis Bush, E. M. Hudson, Esq., and Anthony Vizard, Esq., as the committee to present the resolutions to the Legislature, and the meeting adjourned.

Southern Claims.

The House of Representatives rejected on the 10th inst, by a vote of 127 to 87, the claim for pay to rebuild the William and Mary College which was destroyed by fire during the war. The pay asked was $65,000. This claim was one the freest from objections, and was favored by some strong men from all sections.

The college was in Virginia, and had graduated many who came to be leading men in the nation.

The failure of this effort shows a well settled policy to hold in abeyance, for the present at least, the whole question of Southern claims for war damages.

Washington Gossip over Pinchback and Bruce.

The following bits of Washington gossip we republish, because of its local and general interest, from the Philadelphia Record. Says its Washington correspondent, under date of January 6:

It is an open secret here that Pinchback, the audacious and smart contestant from Louisiana would never have been obliged to cool his heels in the Senate ante-chambers for weary months and years, and finally miss the Senatorial toga altogether, if my ladies of good society—the Becky Sharps of the Cabinet and the Mrs. Senator Veneering—could have settled the question of what to do with Mrs. Pinchback, who was known to be prettier, cleverer and more ambitious than themselves. They could not settle the question, and so poor Pinchback had to go, although their respective lords and lieges begged hard for the extra vote which the party needed in the Senate. But Bruce had no such gauntlet to run. He was in the Senate, and as he cared more for ease than for fame, and had not made himself "obstreperous," he was first tolerated and finally really liked by many of his colleagues. So when he chose to take to himself a better half, it could not be helped, and she came here, and on New Year's day she "received" and has been called upon by the sensible wives of divers Senators and Judges of the Supreme Court, and so she has been "recognized," and so she will not have to suffer the terrible ban of social ostracism. After all, it was merely the natural result of natural laws. If Bruce had been "obstreperous," as Pinchback was, he might have missed the Senate. If Mrs. Bruce was ignorant or coarse, she would certainly be snubbed. But Bruce has achieved fame by attending strictly to his own business, and Mrs. Bruce will get along, because she is educated, sensible and pretty. So far as looks go, she need not fear to stand beside any public lady here. She is a brunette, of course, but so light a one that her race never would be suspected from her skin. She is tall, graceful, and has a most intelligent face, fine eyes, a small, pretty mouth and delicate ears. She dresses very handsomely, and at the theatre, where she and the Senator are often seen, creates quite an impression as she comes smiling down the main aisles to the best seats in the orchestra chairs, where they always sit. She is a Philadelphian by birth, but has spent most of her life in Cleveland, where the Senator found her teaching in the Normal School for a livelihood. Her father has been a practicing dentist in Cleveland for twenty years. Her only brother is a practicing lawyer in the same city; two sisters are teaching in Indianapolis and a third is a musician of local repute. Quite as good a pedigree as most of her sister Senators can boast.

If Pinchback was "obstreperous" under the denial of his Senatorial rights, because of his "pretty, clever and ambitious wife," it is no more than would be expected of the most chivalrous gentleman on the face of the earth. It is something of a virtue in civilized communities to defend the wife. The same society that was horrified over the presence of Mrs. Pinchback admits the wives of men who would never have been Senators had their election depended on obedience to the laws of their country. And it is of such material that ostracism springs from, and the loudest protests against "social equality."

Mrs. President Hayes has acted nobly in the case of Mrs. Senator Bruce, and was among the first to accord her the treatment due a lady, and the wife of a Senator. The world moves, as the incident shows, and the domain of prejudice is daily growing narrower.

Bishop Andrews.

Bishop Andrews spent the Sabbath preceeding the Mississippi Conference in Vicksburg, and preached for the Southern Methodist Church in the morning, for our people in the afternoon, and for the African M. E. Church friends at night. He arrived in New Orleans last Thursday morning and gave the time studying our work and its demands in this city and State, preparatory to the opening of the Louisiana Conference on Wednesday. On Sunday he preached in the morning at Ames Church on, "Have faith in God." He spoke of the natures and difficulties of faith. The sermon was clear, instructive and spiritual and was greatly enjoyed by the hearers. At night the Bishop spoke to an immense audience in Wesley Chapel. He stated he had never stood before so many colored people before at one time. His sermon will long be remembered for the good it did.

Emigration as an Offset to Lawlessness.

From the Observer, we learn that on the night of Thursday the 23rd inst., an important and highly interesting meeting was held at the residence of ex-State Senator Burch, on Canal street; which was attended by nearly one hundred representative colored men from all sections of the State, members of the Legislature and others, for the consideration of Senator Windom's resolution to inquire into the expediency of partial immigration from lawless districts to remove sectionalism from politics. There was no division of sentiment as to the necessity or wisdom of Mr. Windom in his resolution of inquiry and purpose. On the contrary there was an emphatic and hearty endorsement. After full and free discussion it was determined to send Senator Windom a letter signed by all present, and to hold a mass meeting of citizens to be called at an early day in this city, to give a more general expression on the subject.

It is believed the withdrawal of the laboring classes from disorderly communities will quickly touch the pockets of those "good citizens" who refuse to rebuke bulldozers, and arouse them to a spirit of moderation. It is by many thought wiser to adopt this method for the defense of the black man's rights than to retaliate against lawless acts in kind.

Justice Eluded.

The news from Florida last week was such an exception to the general rule that it was received with surprise. The conviction of two judges of election by a jury, in a United States court, for altering returns, seemed to indicate that partisanship had been overmatched by allegiance to the laws. But it was too good an impression to last. On the Saturday following their temporary confinement in the Jacksonville jail these judges made their escape. So the matter stands: Albany penitentiary is defrauded of two persons designed to be useful inmates. The Governor's commissions to the Congressmen and county officials are held by the candidates of a minority, whose titles are based upon the altered returns sent in by these escaped judges. It is hard to avoid the conviction that the jail doors hung as loose on their hinges as Florida ideas of justice in general.

Rev. J. H. McCarty, D D.

Rev. Dr. McCarty has been transferred from Ames Church in this city to a prominent church in Syracuse, New York. He left last Saturday evening, intending to spend the Sunday in Mobile. A goodbye social was held at the residence of General Bassey last Wednesday evening. The doctor has nearly given three years of labor in this city, and has made many friends, who will wish him great success in his new and important field.

Church Sites---Large Lots Wanted.

At a recent meeting of our Board of Church Extension the following, presented by Rev. Dr. Rittenhouse, was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, This Board is constantly receiving applications for aid from Churches that have failed to secure sufficient ground to provide for a parsonage building, or even for the future enlargement of the church building; and whereas, such applications come to us in many instances from localities where ground is yet cheap, and the additional space could have been secured at a very trifling cost; and whereas, we believe it to be the duty of the Churches in securing ground to look not merely to the necessities of the present, but also to the demands of the remote future, when additional ground, if needed, can only be secured, if at all, at great sacrifice; therefore,

Resolved, That this Board earnestly directs the attention of Conference Boards, and urgently requests that in all cases the most diligent efforts be made to secure sufficent ground to provide for the future enlargement of the church building, and also for a parsonage.

Resolved, That the Board deems it highly inexpedient to grant aid to new enterprises where the ground secured is badly located or insufficient in extent to provide for the future growth of the congregation and Sabbath-school.

Central Tennessee Conference.

The revival at Reid Chapel, Shelbyville, continues to grow in interest. God is graciously saving souls and reviving the church. Thursday night 18 at altar, and 6 professions; Friday night 14 at altar, and 10 professions. The morning meetings are well attended. The pastor, Rev. J. M. Carter, assisted by Rev. L. A. Rudisill, is pushing the work. The meeting, to-day, enters upon its third week, with much promise. All the clergymen in the city have been invited to assist in the meeting, but so far, have not attended a single service.

Rev. W. B. Rippetoe, P. E., of Nashville District, writes; "We must have more men, right away, from somewhere. The condition of this part of the district is distressing." Fifteen good pastors could be assigned work. Oh, for men!

TEXAS.

Rev. J. W. Robinson, Calvert: "The parsonage is completed, and well fitted up. The subscription list for Calvert stands 24. Look out! communion set."

Rev. W. H. Davis, Marshall: "Building proceeds slowly; weather has been so very cold and bad. We are ready to go on at once as soon as the weather will permit. We will likely get at work next week."

Rev. Dr. Morris, Clarksville: "I have a large field of labor. The people here from 20 years old and upward have had but little schooling. Our hopes are in our children. Some good schools have been opened, and they will soon ask for papers, Bibles and Testaments. Pray for me."

Rev. John Prince, Spring Hill: "I am trying to repair and build up my church. A supper was given at the church and we collected $13.15, sufficient to cover the expense of its needed repairs. Although few of my members can read, I will send in as many names as possible."

Rev. A. R. Norris, San Antonio: "I have made 47 visits, and prayed with 38 families, preached 10 sermons—once to Sabbath-school, and lectured 33 times to the school. Miss Matilda Vaughan and Mattie Vandrose and Mrs Susan Wells, managers, are going to give a supper for the benefit of the church."

Rev. Jesse Schacklefurd, Huntsville. "On the first round I had a prosperous time at Willis circuit: at Huntsville on the 19th a good audience assembled, and there was one accession to the church and several on the anxious seat. I beg the prayers of all of the brethren that I may be successful upon my new work.

Rev. L. H. Carhart, Presiding Elder Sherman District Austin Conference, writing from Sherman, says: "I have been sick two weeks but am better and up again. Rev. M. L. Haney and wife are expected here to-morrow from Illinois to assist their son, Rev. Conrad Haney, our pastor at this point. Brother Haney, who comes from Illinois, is an evangelist of great power, and succeeds almost everywhere he goes in leading many to Christ. A good protracted meeting has already begun at Sherman and several have been converted and the church greatly blest. Rev. C. H. Folord and wife, recently from Drew Theological Seminary have arrived and gone to open the work at Henrietta. All men on my district are at their posts and at work. The SOUTHWESTERN is everywhere received with favor."

Rev. M. Henson, Victoria: "Sister Vianna Jones, a faithful member of our church for years, met with a sad accident on the 20th. While at work burning corn stalks in a field some distance from the house, when no one was near, her garments took fire. In trying to extinguish the flames the grass caught fire and shrouded her in its flames. Every particle of clothing was burned from her, leaving her bare. In this situation her son-in-law, Ed. Hill found her with folded arms standing erect. Her daughter Lizzie, afterward asked her how she felt, and she replied, "I am in a great deal of misery, but it's all right between me and the Lord." She survived only six hours. She leaves a husband, three grown children, and one little boy of eight or nine years to mourn her loss. I start for Austin Feb. 3."

Rev. J. R Carnes, Lockhart: "Please send me fifteen specimen copies of the SOUTWESTERN. The people say they would like to have that communion set, and I believe we will get some part of it, if we do not get all. We are struggling for the prize. I came to my work here on the 9th, and found no regulation among the people in regard to meeting, but now we have glorious times. The brethren say I must send for Elder Carper again. We are preparing to build a parsonage on our church lot. I think it will be finished shortly. We have no Sunday-school as yet but are going to organize one as soon as possible. Our quarterly conference was held on the 8th by Presiding Elder L. Carper. He gave us a good exhortation on punctuality of duty. No estimating committee was appointed, the Elder said he would just take the people for it. We called a collection, and ten dollars was the result. Forty-nine partook of the sacrament.

Clapp's Chapel, Knox circuit, Houston Conference, was burned a few days ago. It cost $600, and its destruction was the work of an incendiary.

Rev. L. A. Rudisill: "Meeting at Shelbyville, Tenn., still going on. So far 60 conversions and 46 additions to the church. No signs of meeting closing. House filled with people."

Rev. G. W. Heniger, Taylorville, has just closed a meeting during which there were 43 conversions and the church much revived. He was ably assisted by Rev. Wm. Thomas of the M. E. Church, South.

GEORGIA

The Methodist Advocate of the 22, says: Marietta-street Methodist Episcopal Church, Atlanta, was dedicated on Sunday last, Bishop Peck preaching the sermon, which was of great excellence, and Bishop Haven reading the prayer of consecration. A subscription was taken up, which, with what is being raised by the pastor, will amount to four hundred dollars, and relieve the Church from all indebtedness. Much credit is due to Bishop Haven for this result. The house was filled with an intelligent and genteel audience, and the occasion was one of very great interest to this society.

Drs. Rust and Ford and Rev. J. A. Thurman were also present, and with the pastor, Rev. S. A. Winsor, took part in the sevices.

Our Sunday Schools.

Brother:—If any of your Sunday-schools have gone into winter quarters please order them out. If the old Church is too uncomfortable and it is impossible to "chunk and daub" it or make comfortable in some other way, then meet in a private house and keep up the organization every Sabbath in the year. We can't afford to loose a single Sabbath in the study of God's Word. Satan never suspends opperations; his schools (O how numerous and attractive they are) are always in full blast. Can we afford to suspend for a single Sabbath any department of church work, especially the study of God's Word? God forbid! Gather the entire Church old and young in, and when you can, attend as pastor, and do all you can to make the school interesting and attractive.

In every school organize a lecture class for adults, and place the best and most intelligent man in it as teacher. Such a class will bring many in the school who could not be induced to enter one of the regular classes where questions were asked upon the lesson, but will enter and become regular attendants in a class where the lesson is explained and lectured upon by a competent teacher and no questions are asked.

Try it brother and see how it will work. If possible secure a good circulating library for your schools, by this means you will place in the hands of young people reading matter that will, to a very large extent, naturalize the charm, love for, and effects of the light trashy, pernicious literature, so freely circulating in all sections of our country, the effects of which is evil, and only evil. Purchase one of our Centennial Libraries of 100 vols., for $25. They are beautiful and very choice; or a $15 library 100 vols., equally good, but not as handsomely gotten up. No publishing house in America furnishes books of equal binding cheaper than we do, if as cheap. Patronize your own publishing house, you can do better there than anywhere else, and get a literature much better for Methodist Sunday-schools than you can at any other establishment. In all of our Sunday-schools use the catechism.

Independent Orded of Good Templars.

To the ministers and members of the M. E. Church, and all promoters of temperance.—

Having been appointed District Deputy Right Worthy Grand Templar, for the State of Louisiana, under the R. W. G. Lodge of the World, I adopt this method to request your co operation in an effort to establish Good Templars' Lodges throughout this State. The cardinal principles of the creed are: the promotion of temperance, and the inculcation of morality among its members; therefore it should receive the active sympathy, and unqualified support of all who properly appreciate the importance of those virtues. The Order of Good Templars is no cheap, catchpenny affair; but it is the grandest organisation of its kind in the world.

A petition for the establishment of a Lodge must be signed by ten or more responsible persons, which, together with the charter fee, ($8) must be forwarded to me, when the charter, etc., will be furnished.

For further information address Rev. A. E. P. ALBERT, District Deputy R. W. G. Templar, for Louisiana.

Letter from Hempstead.

DR. HARTZELL—Dear Brother: Last Saturday and Sunday I held the first quarterly meeting on the Navasota district, for the year 1879. This is a late beginning. One month has passed since conference, but the weather has been so bad that it was impossible to hold meetings in our open churches. My first Sunday on the district was spent in Brenham. I was warmly welcomed by both preacher and people; they said, "we are glad you have come, and your being white makes us love you no less. These people are [illegible] the color line [illegible] I have gone; they are the most loyal to the church of any people I have met with. I [illegible] of them, "how will you like a white [illegible] after having a colored one?" The answer in every case was, "we do not care what your color is, if you are a good man and help us and our children into heaven." I certainly have a higher opinion of our work and our people since my visit to Brenham. What I have said of the people may be said of the Presiding Elder who preceded me, and the pastor. They have taught the people in the right way. God bless them. Bro. Gillum, of the circuit, was at his post; he is the right man in the right place. We had three converts and three or four united with the church. The people at Hempstead met me with the same welcome that they did at Brenham. Bro. Lee, the new pastor, is here and doing all he [illegible] Saturday and Sunday [illegible] we go to Courtney. [illegible] spend the first Sunday in February there. Feb. 2, 1879.—THE READING OF THE LAW

SCRIPTURE.—Neh. 8: 1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple.—Ps. 119: 130.

TOPIC.—Search the Scriptures.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.

Intermediate Events.—Nehemiah writes his own autobiography. It is not often that all that is worth recording in the annals of a nation are really the acts of one man. And yet such was the fact in this case. We shall see how absolutely this was true with reference to Nehemiah.

1. The abolition of Usury.—The rich had taken advantage of the cramped condition in which the poor always find themselves in such circumstances, and contrary to Mosaic law (Ex. 22: 25; Lev. 25: 36), had speculated out of the poverty of their brethren by exacting usury from them. This, in time, became so insupportable, that "there was a great cry of the people, and of their wives, against their brethren the Jews."

There were three classes of complaints. 1. Those who had no property, and who could not find the means to obtain corn for themselves and their children. 2. Those who had had estates, but had mortgaged them away in order to procure the necessaries of life for those dependent upon them. 3. Those who had mortgaged their fields to procure the money with which to pay the king's tribute, and who now found that their sons and daughters were required in bondage by their inexorable creditors, who were precluded from redeeming them because their lands and their vineyards were in the possession of others. And this distress, they pathetically pointed out, had been inflicted upon them by those who were of their own flesh.

Nehemiah called the nobles and the rulers together, and rebuked them for their iniquity. He contrasted their method of dealing with their [illegible] with that of himself and his companions in [illegible] for when they had heard of [illegible] sold to a heathen, after their ability they had redeemed him, but here the nobles and rulers themselves were making merchandise of their brethren. Nehemiah prevailed upon them to restore the lands they had taken away, and to remit the interest which they had exacted, and which amounted to one per [illegible] per month. He caused the [illegible] to administer an oath to the creditors that they would carry out their pledge, and, gathering up his garment as if he were carrying [illegible] out the [illegible] scattering its contents, saying, at the same time, "So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labor, that performeth not this promise; even thus he shall be shaken out, and emptied."

2. Nehemiah's Generosity.—His palace was an open house, in which he had constantly entertained an hundred and fifty of the Jews and the rulers, besides those who came to Jerusalem on a visit from out of the heathen nations round about. The bill of fare which his generosity [illegible] one ox and six choice sheep, besides [illegible] Unlike the majority of rulers, his object was to do all the good to the people that he could—not to get all the good out of them for himself that was possible.

3. The Plots against Nehemiah.—[illegible] and his associates the [illegible] unscrupulous enemies [illegible] their machinations [illegible] the walls were complete [illegible] the gates were set up [illegible] him out to meet [illegible] plain of Ono. [illegible] was building the wall in order to rebel, and that he had appointed prophets to proclaim himself as king. Sanballat threatened to communicate this to the king, and, asked him to meet with them that they might "take counsel together." Nehemiah boldly denounced them as feigned out of the heart of his accuser. Lastly, Tobiah and Sanballat hired a false prophet to frighten Nehemiah with hints of assassination to induce him to ignobly take refuge in the temple. "Should such a man as I flee? And who is there that, being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in."

The Connection.—The walls were finished in fifty-two days. The enemies of Jerusalem were much cast down. But his vigilance did not relax He gave to his brother Hanani, and to Hananiah, the ruler of the palace, the charge over the city, and instructed them not to permit the gates of the city to be opened before the sun was risen, when the guard would be on duty, and to shut and lock them in the evening while the guard were still at their post. During the night the inhabitants of Jerusalem were divided into watches, and besides every one was to keep watch over his own house. He set to work to reckon the people by their genealogies, in order that he might have a basis for drawing people from the country into Jerusalem with the intent that the city might be more fully protected. That purpose was afterward carried out, every one in ten being called upon to go up to Jerusalem to dwell there.

The Law Brought.—It was thirteen years since Ezra came into Judah at the head of about 3,000 Jews, with a commission as judge, and desire "to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." He had taught the Jews one lesson—that of obeying the law of the Lord which forbade intermarriages among the heathen. Nehemiah acts in such a way as to show either that the two are working in unison, or that he is inspired by his aged friend, since from this time he is as jealous for God's law as Ezra himself.

"And all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water-gate." The unanimity manifest in coming together denotes that an unusual influence had been at work. It was in their statutes that the laws should be read every seventh year "in the solemnity of the year of the release, in the feast of tabernacles," but during the captivity this wise commandment had been neglected. Now the custom was resumed from the eagerness of the people without waiting the word. Their request to have the law brought represents their gratitude for what God had just done for them in the completion of the wall, and their wish to know the law in order that they might obey its precepts.

The Law Read (3–5).—Ezra commenced at early dawn, and read in the Bible until midday. "The ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law." They had been so long without the word that they were famished for it. Ezra was assisted by thirteen Levites.

Ezra stood upon a platform—miscalled a pulpit—and when he opened the book in the sight of all, the people stood up, thus signifying their reverence for the sacred volume. They stood all through the reading.

The Lord Worshipped (6–8). "Ezra blessed the Lord," for a restored temple and for a city which once more was protected by a wall such as their enemies could not hope to overthrow. And to this prayer of thanksgiving all the people, with uplifted hands, responded "Amen! amen!"

"The Levites caused the people to understand the law."

The effect upon the people was such as to make them weep. But Nehemiah and the Levites stilled the people, saying that the day was holy unto the Lord, and commanded them to go their way, to eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions to those for whom nothing was prepared. They so did, and went their way to make great mirth,—"because they had understood the words that were declared unto them."

They came together the next day for another installment of it. This time we know just how far they read; for they came to that place in Leviticus where it tells about the feast of tabernacles. Lev. 23: 33-44. The fifteenth day of the seventh month was the time designated for its observation. Immediately, therefore, they prepared to keep that feast. And they kept it in a way in which it had not been [illegible] the days of Joshua—went out and gathered [illegible] as directed in the Scriptures.

—[illegible] College, Dublin, conferred the degree of LL.D., on Lord Dufferin.

DIED.—At Austin, Texas, Jan. 12, 1879, Mrs. Louisa Madison, wife of Young Madison. Sister Louisa was one of the very good members of the M. E. Church at that charge, and was a faithful Christian from the days of her girlhood until the night of her death. She was sick about eighteen months. I went to see her often while I was pastor of the Church, and always found her full of faith and waiting the will of the Master. She seemed to be concious of her death and would be moved to the home of her father and mother, that she might see them in their new home before she died. Her request was granted and she died in two days after she got there. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. Gregory, and attended by many friends from the city. Her remains were buried in the family graveyard, eight miles from town; but her happy soul has gone to rest.

Sister thou was mild and lovely,
Gentle as the morning breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening,
When it floats among the trees.

MARRIED.—At Austin, January 15th, 1879, Mr. J. E. Williams to Miss Francis Green. I had the pleasure of uniting the happy couple in holy wedlock, and enjoyed the rich feast that was given by the bride's mother, for her many friends. C. L. MADISON.

New Publications.

We have received the annual report of the President of Boston University.

The Sabbath-school Quarterly, David C. Cook, publisher, Chicago, has been received.

The February number of the American Missionary has many items of interest. Price 50 cents per year.

The Blackboard, a weekly periodical designed to instruct in Sabbath-schools by illustration, is published at 214–220 Woodland avenus, Cleveland, Ohio. We have received a copy. Price $3 per year, or $1 a quarter.

The Christian Woman for January comes in fine dress. The smaller edition has been discontinued, and the larger one substituted. Mrs. Annie Wittenmyer is the energetic editor and proprietor. No. 11 N. 13th street, Philadelphia.

Full of good things is the American Agriculturist for February (its just at hand, with upwards of sixty engravings—a distinguishing and important feature of this journal—illustrating more than a hundred useful practical articles, too numerous to describe in detail. No family can afford to be without its reliable information for the household, as well as out door work, for the children as well as grown people. The cost is only $2.50 a year, or four copies for $5, with a splendid engraving to each subscriber adding 20 cents extra. Single numbers 15 cents. A specimen copy for 3-cent stamps. Orange Judd Company, Publishers, 245 Broadway, N. Y.

The National Repository for February contains two principal illustrated articles, the first entitled "Winter with the Poets," being selections from standard poetry about Winter; the second, by Prof. William Wells, entitled "Saunterings in Tyrol," a portion of Europe through which most tourists only pass, but where they do not linger. The writer gives an entertaining account of the country and its countrymen. Rev. Lucian Clark contributes a good article on "Deaf-mute Education;" and Henry B. Dawson on the "Dunmore Indian War." Mrs. Dickson continues her story "Among the Thorns;" and S. G. Arnold writes an appreciative sketch of "Clara Barton," a real sister of mercy during our civil war and the Franco-Prussian conflict to many a poor sick and wounded soldier. Three or four selected or translated articles and two poems, with a page of Music and the ever readable "Miscellany," make up one of the best numbers of this magazine which we have seen.

"Haus und Herd" for February invites attention by unusually numerous attractions. Those who judge for themselves do no not wonder at the growing popularity of our German Methodist monthly. We are assured, by those well posted, that a better publication of its kind in the German language does not exist, in this or any other country. The steel engraving is "A Distant View of London from Greenwich Arsenal," followed by "Sketches of London," illustrated. Other illustrated articles are, "The Children of the Wilderness," telling how Indians and Esquimaux mothers carry, clothe, and care for their babies; "Afghanistan," the Seat of War in Asia, accompanied by a valuable map; and "Childlike," a poem. As especially valuable or interesting we mention, among many other articles of various character, "Socialism and Communism in the Light of Revelation;" Night-walking," and "The Three Most Influential Popular Orators of the United States." The Sunday-school Department is carefully provided for. The Editorial Departments are well supplied.

New Books.

THE THIRTY YEARS' WAR. By Charles K. True. [illegible] Hitchcock & Walden.

The story of the terrible religious civil war that prevailed in Germany thirty long years, is presented in an easy style to suit youthful readers. This volume is uniform with the "Life and Times of John Knox," and "Memoirs of John Howard," by the same author, is a 16mo, cloth bound, price $1 25.

A SELECTION OF SPIRITUAL SONGS, with Music By Rev. C. S. Robinson, D. D. New York: Scribner & Co. $2 50.

This handsome volume, arranged especially for the use of church and choir, contains 1,086 hymns, printed on linen paper, bound in American gros grain silk, with gilt edges. It is intended for Christians of all denominations alike. Dr. Robinson previously compiled two volumes which met with popular approval.

Compound Oxygen.

Is especially valuable in Southern latitudes, where, from climatic causes, the tendency in acute or chronic forms of disease is towards debility and loss of vital force, which always retards convalescence, and renders a return to health uncertain or impossible. After medicine has done its work of breaking the disease, and the physician leaves, as he must, to nature the business of repair and restoration, he too often finds that nature acts so feebly, and builds again so slowly, that the period of convalescence is frequently prolonged through many weary months, while in many cases the old vitality is never restored and the patient sinks into a state of permanent invalidism. To meet this condition of low vitality, the "Compound Oxygen," which acts directly on the great nervous centres, and capable of generating more and more of the vital forces, which are life and health, offers an agent of help and restoration which acts promptly and surely. Our Treatise on "Compound Oxygen," its nature, action, and results, gives the amplest information in regard to this new treatment for chronic diseases, which is being rapidly introduced in all parts of the country. This Treatise is sent free. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1112 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Wise Deacon.

"Deacon Wilder, I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family so well the past season, when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors running to us so long."

"Bro. Taylor, the answer is very easy. I used Hop Bitters in time and kept my family well and saved large doctor bills. Three dollars' worth of it kept us all well and able to work all the time, and I will warrant it has cost you and most of the neighbors one to two hundred dollars apiece to keep sick the same time. I guess you'll take my medicine hereafter." See another column.

Advanced Physicians.

Many of the more advanced physicians, having found Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines prompt and sure, prescribe them regularly in their practice.

TWINVILLE, TENN., May 2th, 1877.

Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—For a long time I suffered with catarrh. I finally called in Dr. Zachury of this place. He furnished me with your nasal Douche, Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and your Golden Medical Discovery. These remedies speedily effected an entire cure. Yours truly,

JOHN S. CHAMLESS.

Dr. M. W. Case, a successful physician for many years standing, announces his system of treatment for Catarrh. The Doctor's Inhalants, though based on scientific principles, border on the magical—both as to the thing itself and the results attending its use. An examination proves the one, and testimonials from all parts of the country prove the other. Our readers may with perfect confidence write to Dr. Case with the assurance that he will give careful consideration to each case.

The Methodist Hymnal,

AND

Hymnal with Tunes.

We are now prepared to fill orders for the following editions of the "METHODIST HYMNAL:"

Pearl, Plain	$0 40
Pearl, Red Edge	0 50
24mo, Plain	0 50
24mo, Red Edge	0 65
24mo, Roan, Embossed	0 75
24mo, Roan, Gilt Edge	1 00
16mo, Plain	0 75
16mo, Red Edge	1 00
16mo, Roan, Embossed	1 20
16mo, Roan Gilt Edge	1 40
Hymnal with Tunes, 12mo	1 00
Hymnal with Tunes, 8vo	1 75

Since the manuscript of the Hymnal was delivered by the Committee, October 26th, last, time has been required to prepare and perfect the indexes, to complete the arrangements of the Hymns and Tunes, and to adjust all to a system of uniform numbering. Time has also been consumed in the transmission of proofs to and from the members of the Committee, but there has been no unnecessary delay. In view of these facts, and the amount of work involved in issuing so many editions in good style, we think that it has been completed at the earliest moment practicable.

The new book contains a great variety of the best spiritual songs, adapting it both to public and social worship. It should be used in social meetings and Sunday-schools, and thus be the means of familiarizing our children with the living hymns of the church. The cheaper editions will cost little more than the ordinary Sunday-school song books that last but a season. The Hymnal with Tunes is a rich and varied treasury of sacred music, and the 12mo edition is the cheapest complete Hymn and Tune Book in the land.

We ask all pastors to aid in the general and immediate introduction of the Hymnal, and Hymnal with Tunes. Let it be the occasion of an effort to intensify the true spirit of worship where it flourishes, and to revive it where it languishes, that the Methodist Episcopal Church may soon become, as aforetime, mighty in song.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.

2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

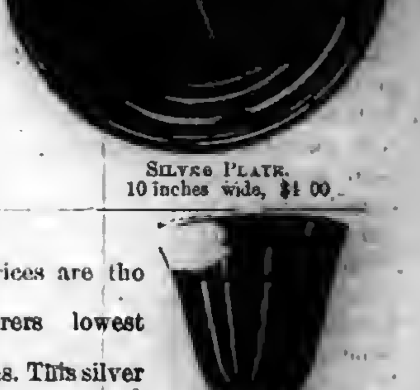
III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

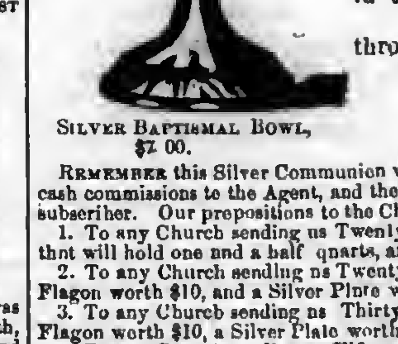
IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:

SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 14 00

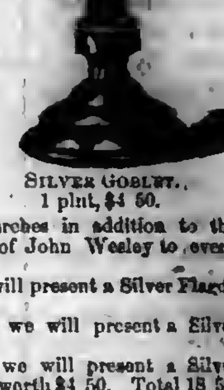


SILVER PLATE. 10 inches wide, $4 00.



SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL, $7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country



SILVER GOBLET, 1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.

2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.

3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total 18 50.

4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.

5. To any Church sending up Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us. This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceeding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregration where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.

2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.

3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission: the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.

4- Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

CATARRH

Is a terrible disease. Its fearful effects are corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, deafness, loss of voice, loss of smell, disgusting odors, nasal deformities, and finally consumption. Thousands, not knowing the great danger in neglecting this disease, die with consumption. In a few years or months it may rapidly develop, and quick consumption announce it is too late.

CONSUMPTION The terror of humanity that yearly carries thousands to an untimely grave, not sparing the young, the talented, nor the beautiful.

ASTHMA which makes life so miserable its victims almost wish for death. Minister's Sore Throat, Catarrhal Deafness, and BRONCHITIS the advance guard heralding the near approach of consumption.—For these and all Pulmonary Diseases, Dr. M. W. Case's Treatment by the use of his

CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANTS IS PLEASANT, THOROUGH, AND SUCCESSFUL. SATISFACTION always GUARANTEED.

Balsams and cordials of the most healing and soothing properties are so combined with Pine Tree Tar that the mere breathing vaporises them into a dense smoke. This is inhaled—taken right to the diseased parts. No heat, no hot water, simply inhaling or breathing it, and you feel its healing power at once. As the oils and balsams condense on the air passages and lungs, their capacity is wonderfully enlarged and the hollow chest soon becomes rounded and full.

HOME TREATMENT sent to any part of the United States or Canada, to be returned if not satisfactory. To consumptives beyond the possibility of cure the Inhalants always give great relief, and often cure cases considered hopeless. CATARRH is readily cured by breathing the vapor and forcing it into the diseased cavities of the head and out of the nose, and is the the only method by which this terrible and almost universal disease can be permanently cured. THE SPARROW.

I am only a little sparrow—
A bird of low degree;
My life is of little value,
But the dear Lord cares for me.

He gave me a coat of feathers;
It is very plain, I know,
With never a speck of crimson,
For it was not made for show.

But it keeps me warm in winter,
And it shields me from the rain;
Were it bordered with gold or purple,
Perhaps it would make me vain.

I have no barn or store-house,
I neither sow nor reap;
God gives me a sparrow's portion,
But never a seed to keep.

If my meal is sometimes scanty,
Close picking makes it sweet;
I have always enough to feed me,
And "life is more than meat."

I know there are many sparrows;
All over the world we are found.
But our heavenly Father knoweth
When one of us fall to the ground.

Though small, we are not forgotten;
Though weak, we are never afraid;
For we know that the dear Lord keepeth
The life of the creature He made.

I fly through the thickest forest,
I light on many a spray;
I have no chart or compass,
But I never lose my way.

And I fold my wings at twilight,
Wherever I happen to be;
For the Father is always watching,
And no harm will come to me.

—Happy Hours.

A Boy's Service.

"Speed boldly, Jean; the safety of God's elect depends on thy fleetness and courage," said a French peasant woman, as, standing at the door of a hut perched over a gorge in the Cevennes mountains, she bade farewell to her young son. He, mounted on a small white pony, looked fearlessly out of his bright blue eyes, and tossing back his [illegible] of fair hair, bent [illegible] mother's hand; then [illegible] a steep, winding path, [illegible] his intelligent animal [illegible] sure footing, the young [illegible] disappeared in the dark aisles of a [illegible].

[illegible] today, Jean, [illegible] back of his [illegible] of a missing [illegible] of the [illegible] a delle for [illegible] terrible [illegible] down, said [illegible] troops [illegible] to give youngsters like you to travel in alone," said the officer.

"I have confidence in God. Those who do no ill need fear none," returned the child, calmly.

"You shall come with me," continued the captain, suspiciously; "so fine a boy must not grow up a rebel. I shall dedicate you to the service of the king and the church."

Jean made no answer, riding on with his captors, apparently in submissive composure; but the vigilant little fellow, quick in expedients, contrived to fall back gradually, till, when the dismounted troops, painfully climbing, were half-way up a steep ascent, Jean was among the hindmost. A brook wound round the base of the hill, and Jean knew that near the stream was one of those caverns, common in a country of volcanic formation, the entrance to which was concealed by thick, clustering bushes. Seizing an opportune moment, the active boy turned his pony, dashed down into the brook, leaped from his steed, and ran into the cavern. Some minutes elapsed before the more clumsy soldiers could descend; when they reached the stream, the pony was scrambling homeward over the rocks, and no trace of the rider was visible. Little Jean trembingly crouched in his covert during their brief, vain search; but soon, eager for a large prey, the pursuers returned to join the rest of the band.

When the last echoes had died away, and only the brook's gurgle was audible in the stillness, Jean ventured from his retreat, and the time for rescue lessened by his capture; but his childhood's steadfast faith never dreamed of failure; prayer and act were one, as lightly leaping from bowlder to bowlder, by intricate windings about pinnacle and crest—here following the bed of a mountain stream, there swinging himself by gnarled roots over deep chasms—the intrepid boy hasted breathlessly on.

Not far away, some hundreds of resolute men and women were assembled on a rocky platform amid the desolate hills. Muskets stood near, ready for a sudden call to arms. Around the worshippers was a chestnut forest, through whose enormous trunks and leafless boughs the wind moaned in melancholy cadence, accompanying their psalmody and supplication. On a flat, smooth stone, at the base of a precipitous rock, stood the minister, who, while little Jean sped toward them, was thus addressing the congregation:

"What fear you? Did not God nourish His people in the wilderness? Did He not send the ravens to feed His prophets, and will He not again work miracles? Has not His Holy Spirit comforted His afflicted children? He consoles—He strengthens us. Will He not, in time of need, cause His angel to go before us?"

Concluding thus, the preacher advanced to a natural stone slab, serving as a sacramental altar, and the assembly, in reverential stillness, to which peril added a solemn awe, came forward by two bareheaded. A cry startled them.

"Fly! the enemy comes!" rang in shrill, childish treble from above the kneeling multitude, and looking up they saw, on the rocky summit before the pastor, a little figure, whose white goat-skin coat and locks of gold gleamed in the mellow sunset, as the rocks and caverns re-echoed his vibrating cry,

"Fly! the enemy comes!"

The startled throng, gazing up, knew not the son of their neighbor and friend, Roland Cavalier. The solemnity of the place, and the danger always near their worship, had infused their exalted minds with a sense of the immediate presence of the supernatural, and the simple-minded peasants thought the child, Jean, a veritable messenger of heaven.

They quickly dispersed through pass and defile, and when the troops arrived, the early stars shone down on the deserted rocks and [illegible] forest.

Jean joined a party of fugitives, and lived to be a valiant and famous defender of the Protestant faith. While the commander cursed him as a treacherous little rascal, most of the congregation maintained that God sent an angel to save them.—St. Nicholas for November.

Dr. J. M. Howe's Inhaling Tube!

—AND—

COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n3 79 tf.

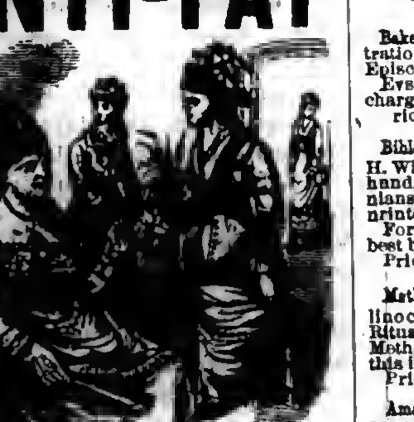
ANTI-FAT



ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week.

In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen:—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN'S drug-store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from 199 pounds to 192 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, SMITH, DOOLITTLE & SMITH, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks, and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N. Y., write: "TO THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen,—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp.

BOTANIC MEDICINE CO., PROP'RS, Buffalo, N.Y.

WOMAN

By an immense practice at the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, having treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman, I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and positive remedy for these diseases.

To designate this natural specific, I have named it

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon personal observation. I have, while witnessing its positive results in the special diseases incident to the organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. On its merits, as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under a POSITIVE GUARANTEE. (For conditions, see pamphlet wrapping bottle.)

The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhea, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing-down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, and Female Weakness. I do not extol this medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfils a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.

Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, a book of over 900 pages, sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.

Favorite Prescription sold by Druggists.

TRIBUTE OF GRATITUDE.

BY A LADY.

The furies of the pestilence are stayed—
E'en yonder new-built homes the flowerets [illegible]
Hope glides into the footsteps of Despair;
And Death's [illegible] yield to Craft and [illegible]
[illegible] grows the image of the horrid past—
[illegible] what mortal could his woes [illegible]
[illegible] past and present both his burden laid?

But all the [illegible], all the brighter glow
[illegible] holy charity, the heavenly power,
[illegible] lighting up its darkest hour;
For, rescued from the grasp of searing woe,
Our hearts in melting gratitude give way;
We count their favors o'er and wondering [knew?]
[illegible] as ours old never sufferers

Then hands we, brothers, sisters, kindred, [illegible]
To sound their praise and lift our grate[ful voice?]
We hearts that bleed, we that unscathed [illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible]

Ye almoners of God, our pride are ye!
Your generous deed, your true, fraternal thought, [wrought.
A mighty link, a precious tie have
Of all our storied boast none loftier be.
We feel our nation's worth as ne'er before,
And cry exultingly, while pondering o'er,
"Of them, and theirs, their race, their country we."

Nor need ye blush your gifts—no wasted shower
The lavish measures of your bounty fell.
O let the sorrowing past our story tell!
Ye'll own that we were brave our dreadful hour;
That patiently our arduous thrall we bore;
And ashen-robed, before the temple door,
We stood to supplicant the only power.

And mid our suffering thousands had ye been, [soul,
Ye might have seen the sick and wasted
Lest honor chide, put by the proffered dole,
The loftiest magnanimity have seen,
The burning lip the cordial cup deny,
Murmuring the dying heroe's noble sigh,
"My suffering brother's thirst is far more keen."

O Heaven reward you, generous heart and hand! [you wait,
All cheer and properous blessings round
All glorious honor that exalts a State,
And Heavenly wisdom hallow all our land!
Be every fatal influence charmed away,
The fire-god's wrath, the tempest's cruel sway, [band!
And far the friends of crime, the murderous

Your deeds, your fame, should bide for evermore—
Not half so glorious nor so sublime
Are echoing down the sounding trump of time. [ie o'er,
But all things change; and, when our day
Some careful chronicler alone may say
"That year a fearful pestilence held its way; [bore."
And men their brother part right friendly

But there's a loftier more enduring scroll:
Where every worthy deed more honor yields [fields—
Than the red lettering of a thousand
There be your record, every noble soul!
Not given to faithless Memory's treacherous care, [fair,
But to the unerring cherub's, bright and
And fadeless white the eternal cycles roll.

Queer Things about Yellow Fever.

BY WM. H. HOLCOMBE, M. D.

Yellow fever is the queerest disease in the world. Nearly two hundred years' study of it has brought no unanimity of opinion about it. Doctors differ, nurses differ, patients differ, authorities differ. The bottom reason of it all is that the yellow fever differs. If to be "many-sided" be a proof of greatness, then yellow fever must be a great fever. Every case differs from every other case, every epidemic differs from every preceding epidemic. He who sees it for the thousandth time can find something new in it, provided he has eyes. He who made up his opinion forty years ago, and sticks to it, is a poor authority now. Yellow fever is like a character actor on the stage, who comes out in different costumes and with different gestures and voices, but is the same man under it all.

The geographical freaks of yellow fever are extraordinary. Between fifty and a hundred years ago it ravaged our Northern cities, especially New York and Philadelphia, as badly as it ever ravaged New Orleans. Now it is unknown in those localities. Until 1850 it never attacked Rio Janeiro, although that city was constantly exposed to it for fifty years. Since 1850 the fever is found at Rio at all seasons. There is one city on the northern [coast] of South America—Caraccas, [I] remember—presenting all the supposed causes of yellow fever in [the] most concentrated form, where no case has ever occurred. It will [ap]pear for a dozen years successive[ly] in one of the West India Islands, [qu]arantine or no quarantine; and [for] the next dozen it will not appear, [al]though unrestricted intercourse [wi]th infected ports is permitted. The monster will survey the whole [Sou]thern Coast of the United States [and] pounce only upon Savannah. [It] will deliberately pass by our [illegible] city, move up the river [an]d attack Shreveport and Memphis. There is no accounting for [its] movements, and no predicting [th]em. It may become epidemic [thr]oughout the Southern States; [it] may retrograde to Philadelphia [or] New York. It may locate in [illegible]

Yellow fever is unknown in the [illegible] of the Eastern hemisphere, [w]here all the supposed causes exist [in] the highest degree. It [illegible] to be an African poison [illegible] the white race of the [illegible]. A treacherous friend [illegible] from its color, its [illegible] and its special ravage [illegible] we might [illegible] ago that the negro [illegible] at the bottom of it. The native [illegible] fever. The [illegible] of the West Indies [illegible] fever. [illegible] the United [illegible] The [illegible] Southern cities had [illegible] ments, and make its attacks "without regard to race, color or previous condition."

Who can give any plausible reason why the native born creole population of this State, especially those of French origin, should have been almost entirely exempt from yellow fever for a hundred years? And who can account for the change going on during the last thirty years, slowly but surely, so that now the children born here have had little exemption more than the children of the stranger?

Now, who do you suppose are least liable of all people to be seized with yellow fever? The neat and cleanly? Those who handle silks and laces, or deal in perfumery? Those who live in salutary spots, occupy fine houses, with bath-room facilities, and are clad in snowy linen? No, indeed! A great many writers agree on the curious fact that scavengers, butchers, farriers, tanners, dissecting-room people, grave-diggers, and those who handle offal and offensive decaying animal matter are remarkably exempt from this disease. Why decaying vegetable matter should cause it (!) and decaying animal matter prevent it, is a nut for the sanitary philosophers to crack.

Yellow fever sometimes attacks the animal kingdom. Who ever heard of a house-dog having chills and fever, or a respectable tabby dying of bilious remittent? The saffron scourge is more diffusive in its nature, and has been known to visit all kinds of animals, from the horse and the cow, down to the rat and the canary bird. Dr. Rush says that in 1798 over five thousand cats died of yellow fever in Philadelphia. In an epidemic which visited Gibraltar in 1812, every monkey, parrot, dog, cat, rat and canary bird in that place perished by this disease. Perhaps the Yellow Fever Commission will explain why the flies disappeared so mysteriously this summer. Why the mosquitoes vanished from some localities altogether, and why at one time it was impossible to get rid of the ants, and at another time impossible to find one.

Yellow fever is supposed, on very slender grounds, to be contagious, and some people are astonishingly afraid of it. It shares with Asiatic cholera the glory of being able to get up a first-class panic in the human race. Small-pox has some reputation for generating a scare, but it will always stand third in the panic market. Yellow fever is unquestionably first. Its contagion, however, like everything about it, is very queer. It is very contagious to some people, and not at all contagious to other people. If one man looks out of a window at a yellow fever funeral, he will catch it—another person may live in a yellow fever hospital and breathe the poison all day and night and keep in rubicund health. If you don't want it you will be apt to get it, but if you seek it you can't find it. Desperate women, seeking death, have often sought in vain by the utmost exposure to the yellow fever poison. Unacclimated doctors, science-blind or crazy, have slept with yellow fever patients, dissected their bodies, injected their blood into their own veins, and even drank the black vomit (!) with total impunity.

Fear has a good deal to do with it, as with many other diseases. The yellow fever is sometimes like a mean yellow dog. If you face him and defy him he will slink away, but if you recede from him he will pursue and attack you. He has been known to chase people as far as Cincinnati or New York. There is an immense deal of pious lying done by doctors and nurses and friends to keep up the hope and courage of yellow fever patients. A doctor and a nurse with a panicky face are as mean a couple of portraits as you could display in a sick room.

Pleasantry aside, a bad case of yellow fever is well calculated to make a thinking man afraid. It is not only a severe malady, but a fearfully treacherous and deceitful one. It is the opossum of diseases; it pretends to be sleeping, or even dead and gone, when it is more alive than ever—not only are its symptoms of the most distressing kind, but the sudden turns it takes are absolutely appalling. What are you to think of a disease in which [you leave] your patient at 9 o'clock in the morning expressing himself [illegible] well, and actually looking [illegible] dispatches to his wife, [illegible] cheerfully and rationally, [and] [illegible] you find dead and laid out a few hours afterwards? These inexplicable changes are the causes of a great many superstitions, false theories, and absurd regulations of the sick room.

The energetic minds of nurses and friends must find a cause for these changes, and they generally seize upon the last thing taken or done as the true one. "O the patient was getting on splendidly, but the doctor came in and threw off one of the blankets, and she went right off into a congestive chill." "The doctor gave him two tablespoonfuls of chicken tea, and it brought on the black vomit." "The doctor let him change his shirt on the fifth day—and of course he died on the sixth!" "They allowed him a drink of ice water, and he had seven convulsions the next day." "The doctor had one of the windows opened, and the patient went out of his mind in fifteen minutes." A thousand such stories are being wafted to and fro upon the air of New Orleans to-day. To all of which we may relate the story of Mr. Smith, who fell dead whilst shaving himself at his looking-glass one morning—and the editorial comment—"and yet, notwithstanding this appalling catastrophe, men will continue shaving themselves at their looking-glasses every day!"

The Mexican Republic.

CLIMATE, POPULATION AND PRODUCTS.

As missionary work is now accomplishing much toward the salvation of the millions of the inhabitants of the Mexican Republic, we give the following extract from the newspaper El Comercio Del Valle:

The Republic of Mexico lies between the 15th deg. and the 22d deg. North Latitude and the 86th deg. and 117th deg. West Longitude. It is divided into twenty-three States, one District and one Territory. The estimated population amounts to 11,000,000 inhabitants, and the republic has an area of 850,000 square miles. The following States—Sonora, with a population of 161,000; Sinaloa, 176,000; Jalisco, 1,184,363; Colima, 77,377; Michoacan, 750,000; Guerrero, 347,000; Oajaca, 849,000; Chiapas, 245,000, and the Territory of Lower California, 18,000 inhabitants—are tributaries to the Pacific Ocean: while Aguas Calientes, with a population of 191,567; Chihuahua, 280,000; Durango, 226,790; Guanajuato, 1,100,000; Mexico, 1,350,000; Michoacan, 560,789; Nuevo Leon and Coahuila, 243,766; Pueblo, 886,000; Queretaro, 212,000; San Luis Potosi, 430,000; Tamaulipas, 124,000; Tabasco, 95,000; Tlaxcala, 90,000; Vera Cruz, 235,760; Yucatan, 790,000; District of Mexico, 385,000 inhabitants, with an aggregate population of 7,310,572 souls—are tributary to the Gulf of Mexico.

THE PRINCIPAL CITIES

are Chihuahua, with a population of 17,400; Colima, 35,000; Durango, 24,000; Guanajuato, 53,000; Guadalajara, 70,000; Morelia, 28,000; Monterey, 15,000; Saltillo, 19,000; Oaxaca, 28,000; Puebla, 100,000; Queretaro, 30,000; San Luis Potosi, 45,000; Mexico, 250,000; Vera Cruz, 9,000; Orizaba, 20,000; rising from the level of the sea at Vera Cruz to an altitude of 9,000 feet at Boca del Monte, on the line of the railroad from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico, on one portion of which the elevation is 4,700 feet in the short space of twenty-five miles, in which distance the traveler passes from the region of perpetual summer to that of perpetual frost; from the land of flowers, tropical fruits and vegetables to the coniferous pines, hemlock and timbers of the frigid zone, ascending again to the altitude of the City of Mexico, 7,500 feet. The table lands of Mexico rise from 5,000 to 9,000 feet above the level of the sea, and furnish all the productions of temperate and frigid zones. These table lands are crossed by mountain ranges, some of which attain a height of 17,000 feet, and are higher and broader in the plateau on which the City of Mexico is situated, surrounded by a wall of porphyritic mountains, among which are the famous volcanoes of Popocatapetl and Istaccihuatl, the former 17,980 and the latter 15,700 feet above the level of the sea, and with its neighboring peaks, Orizaba, and Perete, covered with an almost perpetual cap of snow. Jorullo, a volcanic cone on the Pacific slope of these table lands, rose suddenly from the surface on the night of September 27, 1750.

CLIMATE.

Differences of climate in this wonderful land depend more on the altitude than nearness of approach to the equator. The differences are classified as torrid lands, temperate lands and cold lands. The average heat of the torrid lands is 77° Fahrenheit, the temperate land 70 to 80°, a region of perpetual summer, and the cold lands, 66 to 68°, a region which in this climate would be called warm. Ice is frequently formed in the City of Mexico one-half inch thick during the course of a single night. In general the republic enjoys an even and temperate climate, as above indicated, free from extremes of heat and cold, vegetation even in the colder regions being perennial. The seasons are divided into two great divisions—the wet and the dry season, the former commencing in June and lasting some four months. During the dry season large crops are raised by means of irrigation, a practice universally observed throughout the country.

THE PRODUCTS OF MEXICO

are as varied as her climate and soil. Fruits and flowers unknown and untasted in this region grow in the greatest luxuriance in her moist and genial soil. Corn, rice, sugar-cane, bananas, pine-apples, oranges, manioc, sarsaparilla, jalap, vanilla, olives, grapes, coffee, cocoa, indigo, yams, capsicum, ipecac, dragon's blood, copaiba, india-rubber, valuable timber and dye-woods, mahogany, cedar, fustic, lignumvitæ and innumerable other products abound in this vast and favored region, while all the cereals, fruits and vegetables of the temperate and frigid zones are found side by side with those of tropical growth. Her mountains, hills and valleys abound in gold, silver, copper, iron, zinc, tin, lead, arsenic, quicksilver, sulphur, cobalt, antimony, etc., while the diamond, ruby, topaz, emerald, opal, garnet, chalcedony, amethyst, lapis lazuli, sparkle in the rays of her brilliant sun, and "the dark, unfathomable caves of her oceans" bear the pearls, the margaritas, that were placed in the crowns of Ferdinand and Isabella as among the first trophies from the newly-discovered world laid at their feet by Columbus.

SILVER AND GOLD.

During the year 1874-5 there were coined at the several mints of the republic:

In silver	$19,886,958 50
In gold	762,619 00
In copper	21,712 33
Making a total of	$20,271,289 83

It is estimated that the entire coinage of the country, from the establishment of the country up to 1875, amounts to $2,985,488,168 55.

The local interior trade of the republic of Mexico amounted in the year 1876 to $400,000,000. Taking from this the amount of imports from foreign countries, leaves a domestic commerce of agricultural products and manufactures of $325,000,000. Such is the land that extends a welcome to American enterprise and capital, a large share of whose trade and commerce is to be had for the asking.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The republic of Mexico had, in 1876, 8,751 primary schools (24 seminaries and 54 normal schools), attended by 348,981 pupils. Of this number the Federal Government and that of the States support 677, and various municipalities 5676, corporations and private individuals 395, the Catholic clergy and religious associations 126, and the remainder are self-sustaining or pay schools. The sum of $1,632,436 is expended annually for the support of these schools. In twenty out of the twenty-seven States of Mexico education is compulsory, and there are educational institutions of every description and adapted to the teaching of almost every branch of knowledge.

Such is the land—the second greatest of all the republics of the world—that to-day opens her arms to her Northern sister and extends a cordial welcome to American enterprise and capital, which she is desirous of securing for the development of her immense mineral and agricultural treasures and for the mutual interests of the two republics.

Do you ever hand wine around in your parlor, or have it at your table? If you do, you need not be surprised if your son drinks liquor and become drunkards. Many a ruined man has traced the origin of his dissipation to the wine glass in his own parent's house. A draught of wine in the parlor or at the table has started many a young man on the road to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell.—Raleigh Advocate.

The Episcopal Church.

One of the most notable things in the religious history of this country has been the growth of the Episcopal Church. At the beginning of this century they were indeed a feeble folk. Except in New York and Virginia, and in the cities along the sea coast, they had scarcely a name to live. Yet in three quarters of a century they have grown to be one of the most influential denominations in the United States—respectable in numbers, and still more in strength, if it be considered that it includes an amount of wealth and social influence out of all proportion to its numbers. Its annual statistics make quite a goodly array. Thus, according to Whittaker's Almanac, it has now in this country forty-eight dioceses and thirteen missionary jurisdictions. It has sixty-three bishops, 3,141 priests and deacons, and 3,002 parishes, with 314,367 communicants, 40,651 Sunday-school teachers, 292,375 Sunday-school scholars. It had 46,330 baptisms and 26,713 confirmations last year, and its contributions amounted to $6,477,806. It has eleven theological seminaries, six colleges, and a number of schools for both sexes. It has one quarterly review six monthly periodicals, and seven weekly papers. In this city it has seventy-eight churches and one hundred and seventy-four clergymen—and the property of Trinity parish, which has done a vast deal to build up Episcopalianism, is estimated at over seventy millions. Let no one imagine that the Episcopal Church is given over to formalism, for its charities are numerous and increasing. Whatever may be thought of its pretensions, its faith and its ritual, it has gained a strong foothold in the country and in public respect, and its growth and good works are creditable in the highest degree.—New York Observer.

Give Yourself!

It is of the utmost importance that we put as much of ourselves as possible into the work of alms-giving. You complain perhaps that the poor are ungrateful—and you may have cause thus to complain; but the real cause is more apt to be in your own method of giving than in any thinklessness inherent in those who receive your gifts. You and I would not be grateful to the man or woman who tossed to us a dole out of abundance, or sent it by the hand of one whose presence was a perpetual annoyance and insult. Divine vengeance prevents him from receiving a reward for giving, who has given proudly, ambitiously, selfishly. He has indeed his reward. It is gratified pride, ambition, selfishness. Nor is the cause much better with that giving which is for the easement of spontaneous pity. The more we put ourselves into close vital relations with those upon whom we bestow alms, the more of ourselves, of our life, we put into our alms, the better. Thus to give is vent to selfishness, not expression, to rational charity. It is an attempt to buy off pity and compassion at rates far below par, that we make a profit on them. The voice of beggary will never be hushed except by hands which reach out from hearts voluntarily placed in communion with other needy hearts.—Sunday Afternoon.

Christ church, Boston, the oldest religious edifices in that city, celebrates the Christmas season by ringing its chimes every night during the week before and the week after Christmas. It was in this church tower, side by side with these bells, that the memorable lantern was hung which started Paul Revere on his midnight ride through Concord and Lexington. Besides this, the church has other revolutionary and colonial associations. The Bible and the Prayer book are the same which were used by the first rector in 1733, and were presented by King George II. The first Sunday-school in America was gathered within these walls in 1815, and the chandeliers were taken from a French vessel by the captain of an American privateer.

The circulation of religious newspapers and periodicals in the United States amounts to about 4,764,000, coming next to the circulation of political newspapers, which is 4,781,000, and far in advance of those of other pursuits and interests.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well.—Longfellow.

American Influence in Turkey.

America gave to Syria the first scientific traveler, the first translation of the Bible in Arabic, the first printing-press, the first modern churches, the first colleges. In 1874 Americans printed at Beyroot 30,000 volumes and 9,791,910 pages Arabic. When Cyrus Hamlin was abroad, there was not a school-book in the languages spoken by the people of Turkey. Now we have a long list, not only of text-books on grammar, rhetoric, logic, chemistry, surveying, history, zoology, mental and moral philosophy, and medicine, but also of the English works on distinctively Christian truth, and these in the Armenian, Turkish and Asiatic tongues. There are 11,000 pupils in Turkish common schools, which owe their origin to American influence. In the high schools, founded by Americans for young men and women, thousands are already gathered, But the facts which strike public attention most at a distance are the steady shining of Robert College at Constantinople, since 1862, a beacon light on that stormy coast between Asia and Europe; the steady flame of the Syrian Protestant College at Beyroot, since 1865, as many pupils in it now as in Williams' College, and as able a corps of professors; the gleaming of the Central Turkey College, and the attempt to light up another torch—God bless the attempt!—at Harpoot, on the flashing waters of the Upper Euphrates.

The later discoveries by Dr. Schleimann at Troy include one of some moment to the iron interest as well as to scientific theory. The theory has been, that stone, bronze and iron ages succeeded each other regularly, and that, as Homer refers to iron as a rare metal, and obtained with much difficulty when he lived, it could hardly have been known in the many centuries previous to his age in which Troy flourished That supposition has been partly corroborated by Dr. Schliemann's failure to find iron, or evidence of its use, at Mycena. But since he resumed in the ruins of Troy a few weeks since, the explorer has discovered an arrow-shaped and double edged steel dagger, perfectly preserved in wood ashes. It is, therefore, demonstrated that the people of Troy knew of iron; and understood metallurgy, and that the iron age was projected far back of the period usually assigned to its commencement. The evolution theory is required to recalculate its period and rearrange its inferences somewhat by this discovery, and our own iron makers will know that their specialty is older than most, and associated with the very infancy of that civilization in which he has played so prominent a part.

The church property in the Columbia River Conference, as reported in the Minutes, is valued at $41,770—an increase of $11,200 over the preceding year. The last session of the Conference was held in Dayton, Washington Territory, and the next session is to be held at Walla Walla, Washington Territory. This is one of our most vigorous young conferences, having a number of wide-awaks, energetic, first class preachers to develop the resources of that most interesting field. Were we as young as we were twenty-seven years ago, on coming to this coast, we should pitch our tent east of the Cascade Mountains in East Oregon or Washington Territory.—California Advocate.

The Wesleyans of England have set on foot a movement to build in various parts of the country 100 chapels a year for the next ten years. Towards this scheme two wealthy laymen—Sir Francis Lycett and Mr. William Mewburn—have each promised £10,000. A grant of £45,000 is also to be made in aid of the movement, from the Wesleyan Thanksgiving Fund. The Wesleyans have chapels or preaching rooms in 5,000 places in England and Wales, and provide accommodation for religious worship for one in thirteen of the entire population, but it is calculated that there are more than 9,000 places, with a population of 5,000,000 of people, where no Wesleyan services are held.

The London Telegraph says: "It is not poverty, it is beer, that has robbed the children of knowledge, of liberty, morality, health and long life. It is not poverty that fills our hospitals and jails; it is gin. By the time that a child can use its hands and earn eighteen pence a week, it is offered up on the altar of the great god—Gin."

These statistics for 1878 are interesting to study as compared with 1877. As to membership, there is a slight decrease in probationers, and a slight increase in full members. There is a decrease of three hundred in the baptisms. There is an increase of ten churches, and in their value of $19,715; of six parsonages, and in their value $3,840. There is an increase of two Sunday-schools, but a decrease of 385 scholars. There is an increase of $20 60 in the missionary collection, but in the whole benevolent collections there is a decrease of about $70. This is certainly a creditable showing, considering the epidemic and political excitement in several parishes. There were fewer deaths by seven, in the churches, than during last year, and this is remarkable considering that the bulk of our membership in the State is in cities and regions where the epidemic raged. We have over three thousand members in New Orleans alone. We account for this in two ways; a very large proportion of deaths was among children; and physicians testify that other things being equal, people who were temperate stood the best chance to recover from an attack.

With an increase of ten churches and six parsonages, there comes an increase of about $2,000 in church debts. The total indebtedness on the churches amounts to $30,175. Of this indebtedness, two thirds is upon these large church enterprises in this city. As to the support of the ministry, the amount is about the same, and amounts to an average among pastors and presiding elders of about $300. The total sum of $28,159 raised, includes the $8,500 missionary appropriation, leaving over $14,000 raised by the churches. This, as near as we can judge by imperfect reports, ought to be increased several thousand dollars.

The Louisiana Conference is steadily growing. The growth of late years is not so much in numbers, and this could not be expected when we remember how only a few years ago the Conference was born, almost in a single day, and we consider what a vast amount of work would be required to organize and discipline such large numbers. In the work of church building there has been great progress. There is also a steady growth in improved character of the ministry. There is, year by year, a more intelligent and earnest determination to do all the work of a Methodist [illegible]. The improvement of the [illegible] is very manifest during [illegible] sessions. The work of education received good attention. An educational meeting was held on Thursday night and President Bean and Professor Johnson of the New Orleans University and Rev. J. F. Marshall of Alexandria, made telling addresses. During the year La Teche Seminary has been opened by Dr. Rust and Prof. R. L. Thompson placed in charge. He has enrolled seventy-five students, and there are in the school here over a hundred. Let our friends everywhere do what they can to send students to our schools.

A letter was read from Rev. Dr. Godman, agent of the Orphan Home, who has been traveling in the North raising money to relieve the Home of debt. About $2000 have been raised the past year. A committee will set forth to the public the importance of this institution, and give words of hearty endorsement to Dr. Godman in his noble efforts, in connection with Rev. Dr. Rust, of Cincinnati, to relieve the Home.

The Conference heartily commended the work now being inaugurated among the Freedwomen. Mrs. J. C. Hartzell and Mrs. Rider while in the North last summer began the work of providing for the support of three or four lady missionaries in this city whose duty will be to labor among the women of our schools and churches by holding religious meetings, and aiding in church and Sunday-school work, etc. A building has been rented on Second street and four ladies are already at work. What is accomplished will from time to time be published. We are sure the blessing of the Lord will be upon this work.

The following brethren were transferred to this conference:—Joseph Matlock from North Ohio; Daniel Matthai from Central German, and Albinus A. Johnson from South East Indiana Conference. Peter Brown was readmitted on his certificate of location; Richard L. Beal and Benjamin J. Donnell were received as elders from the Baptist Church after giving full assent to the Doctrines and Discipline of the Church before the conference. William Davis, a deacon of the African M. E. Church, was received on his credentials.

The following were admitted on trial: Robert L. Thompson, Charles Shallowhorne, Milton Morris, Charles Washington, Daniel Ross, Charles Kershaw, Simons Evans.

These remain on trial, to wit: Pierre Landry, William Smith, Aristide E. P. Albert, Alexander Primus, Zachary T. Gayden, James W. Hudson, John Qualls, John Sims, Jeremy S. Bean.

These were admitted into full connection, to wit: Julius F. Marshall, Edward Fields, George B. Lynch, Allen Luster, Thomas G. Montgomery.

Frank Harvey, Prince King, Cortes Thompson, Alexander Martin, were ordained Elders, and Wm. Smith was ordained Deacon.

Frederick Reeves, Robert Anderson, and John Brooks were placed on the supernumerary list, and the superannuated preachers are Scott Chinn, Robert Hodge, Reason Ennis, Charles Downs. A subscription of $412 00 to be paid quarterly was taken to aid Brothers Chinn and Hodge during 1879.

Christopher Hunt and Henry A. Lewin were granted a location.

James H. McCarty was transferred to the Central New York Conference, and John L. J. Barth to the St. Louis German.

The Sabbath services were largely attended throughout the city in all the Methodist Episcopal Churches. Bishop Andrews preached at Ames Church in the morning, and First Street Church where the conference was held at night. Both sermons were excellent.

Jesuits in New Mexico.

The Jesuits of New Mexico secured the passage of an act giving them as a body, authority to hold real and personal estate, of any amount, anywhere in the territory, without supervision or limitation, or even without their members being citizens of the United States. The object appeared to be to gather and hold in their hands the religious and educational institutions of the State. Governor Axtell vetoed the act, but the Legislature passed it by a large majority over the veto. Congress has been notified, and the Senate has passed a bill to annul the obnoxious act.

New Mexico, on the eve of becoming a State, has a population of 10,000 citizens from the States, 20,000 Indians and 100,000 Mexicans. The hope of that community rests in its schools and seminaries, and, as Zion's Herald truly says, there is a fine opportunity for home missionary and educational movements. The man on horseback with his Bible and Discipline has here a fine and fair field offered him for heroic sacrifice and labor. The Government should aid in the public education of the Territory to the utmost of constitutional possibility. A compact, vigorous colony of Jesuits, banished from Italy by King Victor Emanuel, have settled there; and the law alluded to is a specimen of the influence they wield against the republican institutions of this country.

A Correction.

Says the New York Methodist: "In the matter of the Southern election disorders we are interested in whatever will suppress them!! That is sound, but we are surprised to read this statement which it also makes: 'There are certain small sections in the South where both races have armed organizations, and in times of political excitement are almost certain to come to blows.' We would remind the Methodist that such is not the case." There is not a single instance on record where two armed organization of both races, or of both parties in the South, came to blows, since the close of the war. The rifles in the hands of white military organizations are aimed at defenseless unarmed negroes, and hence the duty of a vigorous denunciation of the practice. The blacks are too wise to commit the folly of forming armed organization to defend their rights. It would result in their annihilation. They dare not even vote or speak their convictions in many localities. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, a Democrat and ex-Confederate, says that the "negro of the South is placable and kindly—the fortunate possessor of a sweet, loving and generous nature!" This is an admission which good men of the South are willing to make when it does not interfere with their schemes for power and place, yet true at all times.

"Federal Bulldozing."

Under that head line, the New Orleans Democrat, the organ of the constitutional convention party, begins an editorial as follows:

"There are now here, to stand their trial, a number of citizens of Tensas parish, indicted by the United States grand jury. Sixty-seven citizens of Natchitoches, and fifty-seven of Caddo have also been indicted. Many of these are here, and most of the others are on their way. These citizens of Louisiana have been indicted by a partisan grand jury on the testimony of disreputable witnesses; they will be prosecuted before a partisan judge and jury, and by a partisan district attorney. There is something appalling in the spectacle of more than a hundred freemen arrested and brought hundreds of miles from their homes to be tried by a court organized, from its porters to its judge, to persecute and convict."

This is the way the enforcement of the laws is met by the advocates of bulldozers. The Democrat has never condemned election lawlessness. There was nothing "appalling to it in the banishment of voters who opposed its party from Natchitoches, or in the shooting of negroes in Tensas or Caddo. It is only shocked when the law reaches out a strong arm for evil doers. The Democrat unwittingly testifies to the vigilance and efficiency of the National officials in New Orleans. They are doing their duty, and if conscientious juries do theirs, it is probable that Albany penetentiary will somewhat curb the "freemen" the Democrat describes. As citizens, they are too free with others' rights to be useful.

Glorious News from Fort Worth, Texas.

Rev. H. Webb, pastor at Fort Worth, sends news. He says:

"You want news. We have glorious news. The revival began at dedication, and we began extra services by observing the week of prayer in our church, no other church joining, and we are still going on. Fifty have been converted, and forty-four have joined by letter and on probation. Our house was jammed so last night we could not get the mourners forward. The platform in front of the church was filled standing up. The Lord was present in power. We are reaching out for a grand sweep. Brother Nies, sent by Bishop Haven to supply the circuit, is with us and is a good worker. We are both employed here now but have our plans for taking in several appointments in the country. We find the people hungry for the genuine bread of life."

Brother Webb still adds to his list of subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN and forwards the cash.

The French Republic.

One day last week there was a change of rulers in France, and a bloodless one. President MacMahon out of sympathy with his old comrades in arms, refused to surrender the organization of the army to the Republican leaders. The Republicans were determined to reap the fruits of their recent triumphant victory at the polls, and to place the army and government under their control. MacMahon resigned and Jules Grevy, aged 60 years, and a moderate Republican was elected, President of France by the Senate and Chambers in joint session. Marshal MacMahon called upon and congratulated his successor. The comments of the press illustrate the wholesome republican sentiment reigning in France. It is hoped the new rulers will succeed in showing their country the wisdom of the new order of things.

Bishop Wilmer's Successor.

The State Council of the Episcopal Church of this diocese, called for the purpose of electing a Bishop in place of the late Bishop Wilmer, met on the 29th. On the 31st, on the sixth ballot, Rev. James H. Wingfield, now missionary Bishop of California, was elected. The Bishop graduated at William and Mary College, in Virginia, and was ordained about the year 1860. He was then appointed assistant rector of his father's church, his father being very infirm at that time. Some years afterwards he was ordered to take charge of the congregation of Petersburg, Va., and about five years ago he was elected missionary bishop of Northern California, which position he still occupies.

The City.

The Mint is in operation. On Saturday last for the first time in nineteen years, a dollar piece was issued.

The Seamen's Bethel, on Esplanade street, Rev. L. H. Pease, chaplain, is doing good. There was a large attendance at the meeting of last Thursday night. Regular meetings are now being held.

Mr. Walker Blaine, son of Senator James G. Blaine, of Maine, arrived in the city on the 31st and called upon Collector Smith. He is about 25 years of age, and is on a tour through the South accompanied by his sister.

A detachment of Washington artillery fired a salute in honor of the passage of the Lottery repeal bill. Now let a bill be passed prohibiting the sale of all lottery tickets. This would look like genuine reform; many are now suspicious of a move for a campaign fund for the constitutional convention, and think the repeal is a sham.

Russian railway cars are no longer admitted into Germany territory, and some people refuse paper money for fear of the plague.

Our Southern Methodism.

TEXAS.

Rev. J. Wesley Childs, Hempstead: "I thank God that I can say the church is going forward."

Rev. P. Johnson, Oakland: "I have been round on my circuit, and am starting again. I am glad to say there is glorious religious enterprise among the people."

Rev. John L. Smith, Galveston, Jan. 27th: "Our presiding elder arrived here on Friday, and held the first quarterly conference. We had a blessed time."

Rev. G. W. Richardson, Austin: "Dr. Brust starts North in a few days to be at the meeting of the Book Committee. I start out on my district again to-morrow (30). Prospects fine for a successful year."

Rev. A. R. Norris, San Antonio: "Elder Carper arrived here last night. He was taken sick on his first round, and was compelled to stop. Our class meeting is very lively. Four members received in the church."

Rev. J. R. Carnes, Lockhart, 27: "I have sad news to relate. Our new church, which was erected last year, was blown to pieces last Sunday night. The people here suffered very great losses by that wonderful hurricane. Some dwelling houses were blown to pieces so that they could not be found again. Our cry is, help!"

Rev. P. Douglas, Galveston: "Rev. L. P. Cushman, presiding elder of the Houston district, paid a visit to Galveston East Church on the 54th, and held the first quarter. On Sunday he administored the sacrament, and a goodly number communed. Bro. Cushman was gladly received by the church."

LOUISIANA.

R. Slade, New Orleans: "The sacramental service at Wesley Chapel on the evening of Feb. 2, was administered by Rev. M. Dale, pastor, assisted by others. The services were beautifully conducted, and to a crowded congregation. The sacrament was administered to 307 persons.

Central Tennessee Conference.

So far this conference year we have been tried by the severe cold snaps and the heavy rains of the season. Congregations have been small, yet, there is a spirit to "advance;" to push the work and "occupy the land." The demand for preachers is causing much earnest prayer, to "the Lord of the Harvest," to call more men into his vineyard. Especially is this the case on the Nashville District. W. Rippletoe, P. E., now wants eight young men to take charge of new works.

Last year the work in Dickson county was in one charge. This year Dickson was made a station, and the balance of the work organized into White Bluff circuit. Since conference another division has taken place, and Dickson circuit formed, Rev. J. H. Derryberry in charge.

Dickson charge, with its new pastor has made an advance. New life and vigor are seen, and indications of a general revival are good. Bro. Chandler has introduced the new Hymnal. The Dickson Academy is his holding its own. Rev. Bro. Houston is working night and day in its interest, and will succeed.

Rev. O. O. Knight has one of the best appointments in the conference—Doweltown. He writes: "I find a fine field up here, plenty of work and a good people."

Rev. W. F. Henck, of Bloomington, has been called to Baltimore, to visit his mother, who is supposed to be on her death bed.

The great revival at Shellbyville continues. Nightly God is manifesting his power in saving sinners. The large church—seating 600—is filled with attentive hearers. Up to the 25th sixty-two persons experienced conversions; and 52 united with the church—43 by profession and 9 by letter. The membership is encouraged and united.

Coldwell Camp-Ground.

The attention of the Central Tennessee Conference is called to the annual meetings on this consecrated ground. The Sunday-school Institute will meet on Wednesday night and continue over the first Sunday of May. Drs. Vincent and Ford have promised to be there. Brother Gee will dedicate the ground on the Sabbath.

On the Fourth of July will be the patriotic gathering of the Sunday-schools. Hon. R. W. Thompson, Secretary of the Navy, is invited to make the address.

The camp-meeting will begin on Wednesday and continue over the first Sunday of September. We hope the preachers throughout the entire conference will arrange to be present, as far as possible. Already the blessed influence of a genuine Christian fraternity shines out from this hill of ordinances. Any one desiring to build a cottage can obtain a lease for ninety-nine years to a piece of ground by addressing the President of the Association, Hon. T. H. Coldwell, at Shelbyville.

The times permanently fixed for the annual meetings are: The Sunday preceding the full moon of May for Sunday-school work, beginning on Wednesday night before; and the Sunday preceding the full moon of September for camp-meeting, beginning on Wednesday night before. If these months should have two full moons, it will be always the first one. These times are fixed like the "law of the Medes and Persians," to be observed by us, our children, our grandchildren to the remotest generations.

Balance carried to 1879		5,023 53
Total		$118,433 07

Applications for aid have been granted, to be paid when certain conditions shall be complied with, securing the object proposed as follows:

Donations to Churches	$9,475 00
Loans to Churches	5,250 00
	$14,725 00
The cash balance being	5,023 00
The payment of these grants will require additional receipts of	$9,701 97

At the close of the year there remained on file applications, duly recommended by Conference Boards, from fifty-one Churches, asking for donations amounting to $18,700, and loans amounting to $15,325. To grant these will require additional receipts to the amount of $34,025, showing that our receipts have fallen behind the demands of the year to the amount of $43,756 97, and a comparison with the receipts of 1877 shows:

1. On account General Funds:
Conference, collections and personal gifts, decrease	$617 19
Bequests, decrease	11,589 53
Interest, decrease	8 23
Advertising, decrease	35 00
		$12,[illegible]
Lithographic plans, incr'ee		64 [illegible]
Showing a net decrease on account General Funds of		$12,[illegible]
2. On account of Loan Fund:
Donations to Fund, decrease		$2,[illegible] 90
Bequests, an increase of	$380 00
Subject to life annuity, decrease of		10,400 00
Loans returned, decrease of		5,572 39
Property sold, an increase of	499 39
Showing a net decrease on account of Loan Fund of		$17,[illegible] 90
And a total net decrease on all accounts, of		29,[illegible] 97

The number of Churches aided during the year have been as follows:

By donations	209
By loans	19
By both donations and loans	36
Total	264

Being 73 less than in 1877. They are located in 40 different States and Territories. The average grant per church is:

By donations	$213 00
By loans	531 72

It will be observed that while the total decrease in receipts is nearly $30,000, the collection and personal gifts to the General Funds are but little below those of last year. The decrease is nearly all found in the three items of bequests, amounts subject to annuity, and loans returned. The ordinary sources of revenue have suffered less than was to be anticipated under the increased financial depression of the year. We believe we have "touched bottom," and anticipate a good increase for the coming year.

Feb. 9, 1879.—THE KEEPING OF THE SABBATH.

SCRIPTURE.—Neh. 13: 15-22.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."—Ex. 20: 8.

TOPIC.—The Day of Rest.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

Two days after the feast of tabernacles the people joined in a day of fasting and prayer. The Israelites, aroused to a sense of their sinfulness and to their need of God, put on sackcloth and threw earth upon their heads. They separated themselves from all the heathen of the land and their idolatrous customs. In their assembly, they read in the book of the law one-fourth part of the day, spending the remaining fourth part in confession and worship, consisting in an acknowledgement of the faithfulness of God to their nation from the time of Abraham down, and an avowal of their own sinfulness and fickleness.

A covenant was entered into that was signed by Nehemiah, by his secretary, by 21 priests, 17 Levites, and 40 of the chief men. The other priests, Levites, Nethinims, and those who had separated themselves from heathen alliances, although they did not sign the covenant, ratified it with a solemn oath. 1. To observe all the commandments of God. 2. Not to give their sons and daughters in marriage with the heathen people of the land. 3. Not to buy, or sell, upon the Sabbath day. 4. Every seventh year to let the land enjoy its Sabbaths, and at that time to remit the exaction of every debt. Besides, "they made ordinances" to provide for sustaining the services of the sanctuary. On account of the poverty of the country, the assessment of money was reduced from one-half to one-third of a shekel per capita. So few of the temple servants had returned that it was necessary to portion out the duty of bringing in the wood for the offerings, and the people were placed under legal obligation to devote the first fruits of all that they received to the priests, and to pay the tithes enjoined for the support of the Levites.

We note, next, the filling up of Jerusalem by drawing one in every ten from the surrounding district.

Those who went there thought that they were making a great sacrifice for the good of the commonwealth in going.

Following was the dedication of the walls. The priests and the Levites purified themselves as for a service in the sanctuary. Beginning at a common starting point, two companies went upon the wall, one under Nehemiah, and Ezra, in opposite directions around the wall, stopping at the place in it that had become memorable. This [illegible] the temple, and there they gave thanks and offered up sacrifices with great joy.

The Co[illegible] years of devotion to the people, Nehemiah returned to the Persian court. [illegible] took advantage of his being away. Eliashib, the priest, who was allied by marriage to Tobiah, introduced that foe into Jerusalem, into the very temple itself. He prepared for him a great chamber in the sanctuary by knocking out the partitions of several of the smaller rooms, which had been used as places in which to store the meat offerings, the frankincense, the sacred vessels, and the tithes of corn, wine, and oil. The portions of the Levites were no longer given; and, to [illegible] the singers [illegible] the temple [illegible] the fields. Besides, the Sabbath had come to be habitually desecrated.

GONE.

BY MARY E. ATKINSON.

Gone, in his strong and manly youth,
Out of our world which has need of such,
Eager for action, athirst for truth,
Hoping to learn and do so much!

Out of the struggle, the brave endeavor,
The careful girding for coming strife,
Gone to the calm of the grand forever;
Gone to the tests of the unknown life!

What career, O Father of spirits,
Opens for him in the unseen sphere?
What is the life which the soul inherits
Which had but begun its earthly years?

Labor, and pain, and education,
Hopes and fears, and conquest of sins,
And the solemn sense of Thy great salvation,
Brought him where earnest life begins.

And just as we looked for great achievement,
Hoping much from his strength and worth,
Came a black—a sudden bereavement,
God has taken him from the earth.

Not for sleep or inaction, surely,
Who knows where there was need of him?
We leave him to God, and trust securely,
Till all is clear that is now so dim.

We look to see, in the heavenly land,
Great deeds by that brave young spirit wrought,
A nobler career than our hope had planned,
A wider range of life and thought.

Oh to follow the soul's grand story
In the city secluded by sorrow or sin,
From strength to strength, from glory to glory!
—Thanks for him who hath entered in!

Compound Oxygen.

Referring to his own complete restoration to health, through the use of "Compound Oxygen," after many years of invalidism and exhaustion from over-work, T. S. Arthur, the well-known American author, says, in his Home Magazine, under date of February, 1878: "Drs. Starkey and Palen are physicians in regular standing, of high personal character, and above the suspicion of quackery or pretense. A new curative agent has come into their possession, and their administration of it, so far, has resulted in restoring to health many who had regarded their ailments as incurable, and in giving back a good measure of health to a large number of invalids who had vainly sought for help through other means of cure." The testimony of others as well-known to the public will be found in our Treatise on the Nature, Action, and Results of "Compound Oxygen." It is mailed free. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1112 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Catarrh and its Cure.

Catarrh is a disease so disgusting and dangerous in its tendencies that we do not wonder that persons are horrified when they find themselves subject to its insiduous attacks. Can Catarrh be cured? Among the thousand and one so-called cures is there one remedy that can be depended upon? From reports, certificates, and representations from those who have found in Dr. M. W. Case's Carbolate of Tar a remedy, we are led to direct the attention of our readers to the following facts: Dr. Case is a highly educated physician, of extensive experience and large practice, which is rapidly extending throughout the whole country. Many years ago he perfected a system of treating diseases by inhalation so perfect and so satisfactory as to elevate inhalations as a mode of treatment to the high st point of honor in the medical profession.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read of it in another column.

H. Baldwin, of Monroe City, Ind., writes under date of Dec. 30th, 1877, that his wife used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with wonderful results. It effected her entire cure, after several physicians had failed. The many similar letters positively affirming that the Favorite Prescription had cured the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women, induced Dr. Pierce to sell it under a guarantee. Ladies need no longer submit to useless and painful local treatment, as the Favorite Prescription is a safe, sure, and speedy cure. Hundreds who had been bed-ridden for years have been restored to perfect health by its use.

One side of the body tends to outwalk the other side: with the eyes shut, a person invariably walks to the right.

A polite man will listen to things he knows all about, when told by one who knows nothing about them.

The Methodist Hymnal,

AND

Hymnal with Tunes.

We are now prepared to fill orders for the following editions of the "METHODIST HYMNAL:"

Pearl, Plain	$0 40
Pearl, Red Edge	0 50
24mo, Plain	0 50
24mo, Red Edge	0 65
24mo, Roan, Embossed	0 75
24mo, Roan, Gilt Edge	1 00
16mo, Plain	0 75
16mo, Red Edge	1 00
16mo, Roan, Embossed	1 20
16mo, Roan Gilt Edge	1 40
Hymnal with Tunes, 12mo	1 00
Hymnal with Tunes, 8vo	1 75

Since the manuscript of the Hymnal was delivered by the Committee, October 26th, last, time has been required to prepare and perfect the Indexes, to complete the arrangements of the Hymns and Tunes, and to adjust all to a system of uniform numbering. Time has also been consumed in the transmission of proofs to and from the members of the Committee, but there has been no unnecessary delay. In view of these facts, and the amount of work involved in issuing so many editions in good style, we think that it has been completed at the earliest moment practicable.

The new book contains a great variety of the best spiritual songs, adapting it both to public and social worship. It should be used in social meetings and Sunday-schools, and thus be the means of familiarizing our children with the living hymns of the church. The cheaper editions will cost little more than the ordinary Sunday-school song books that last but a season. The Hymnal with Tunes is a rich and varied treasury of sacred music, and the 12mo edition is the cheapest complete Hymn and Tune Book in the land.

We ask all pastors to aid in the general and immediate introduction of the Hymnal, and Hymnal with Tunes. Let it be the occasion of an effort to intensify the true spirit of worship where it flourishes, and to revive it where it languishes, that the Methodist Episcopal Church may soon become, as aforetime, mighty in song.

COURSE OF STUDY FOR Local Preachers.

In pursuance of the provisions found in ¶ 69, § 3, of the Discipline of 1876, the following has been prescribed as a Course of Study for Local Preachers:

I. Let candidates for license to preach be examined in the common branches of an English education, and on their general acquaintance with the Bible and the doctrines and usages of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

II. FIRST YEAR. The Bible—History. Binney's Theological Compend. Steele's Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

TO BE READ. Scripture History—Old Testament. Smith's. Watson's Life of Wesley. A Hundred Years of Methodism.—Simpson.

III. SECOND YEAR.—The Bible—Doctrines. Wakefield's Theology—First Three Books. Christian Baptism.—Marrill.

TO BE READ.—Scripture History—New Testament.—Smith's. History of the United States.—Ridpath. Ruter's Church History—1 vol., 8 vo.

IV. THIRD YEAR.—The Bible—Sacraments. Wakefield's Theology—Last Four Books. Christian Perfection—Wesley's Plain Account.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons.—Vol. I. Introduction to the Gospel Records.—Nast. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation—In one vol., 8 vo.

V. FOURTH YEAR.—Review of the whole Course. Written Sermon.

TO BE READ.—Wesley's Sermons, Vol. II. Porter's Compendium of Methodism.

The Bishops have received many letters of inquiry relating to the foregoing course of study; and have adopted the following minute expressing their views on the questions which have been proposed, viz:

The action of the General Conference of 1876, providing for a course of study for local preachers, is found only in connection with the organization of the District Conference, and therefore, according to the letter of the law, the course of study applies only to the District Conferences; but in our judgment the General Conference intended to initiate a course of study for all local preachers, under the following principles:

1. The course of study does not apply to local preachers who were in orders at the time of the action of the General Conference of 1876.

2. The course of study does apply to all local preachers whose licenses are to be renewed by the District or Quarterly Conference, commencing with the first year, and continuing successively through the four years.

3. This course of study is not intended in any case to take the place of the examination for orders by the Annual Conferences.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Inhaling Tube!

—AND—

COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaid, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have unlimited confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it, and he led the Lord's [illegible] long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 1t.

New Church Record.

We can now sell the "Record" at a price much less than we have ever been able to do. It is a large quarto, containing about 180 pages, divided into seven sections, namely:

- Record of Pastors.
- Record of Classes.
- Record of Official Members.
- Alphabetical Record of Full Members.
- Record of Probationers.
- Record of Baptisms.
- Record of Marriages.

We are confident that this record will meet the demand long felt, namely, a cheap book, suitable for a majority of our churches. Price, $2.50.

NELSON & PHILLIPS, New Orleans.

Cheap Organs.

We will sell a $200 Estey Organ for $100 cash, and a $275 Beatty organ for $90, cash.

These organs are entirely new and will be sent directly from the factories. This is a rare chance for a church or Sunday-school to get a first-class instrument very cheap.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers, J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.

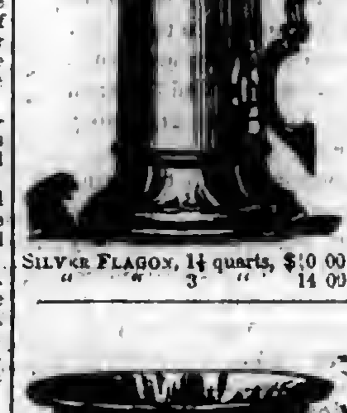
2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

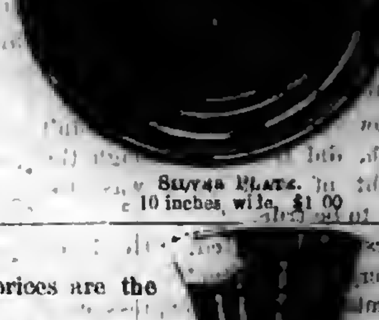
We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

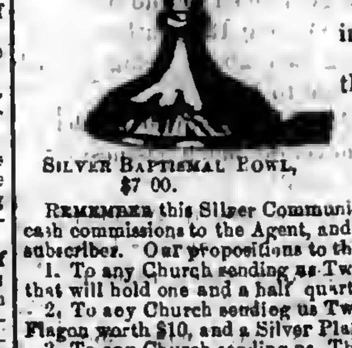
All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:



SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00.
" " 3 " 14 00

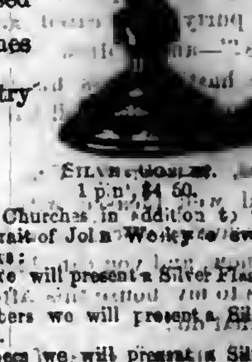


SILVER PLATE, 10 inches wide, $4 00



SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL, $7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country



SILVER GOBLET, 1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10.00.

2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.

3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total $18 50.

4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.

5. To any Church sending up Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us. This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregation where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.

2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.

3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission: the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.

4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

BE GENTLE TO THY HUSBAND.

Be gentle, there are hours when he
By anxious care is tossed,
And shadows deep lie on his brow,
By business trials crossed.

Be gentle, 'tis for you he toils,
And thinks, and strives to gain
Home comforts, and home happiness,
Don't let him strive in vain.

Be gentle, though some hasty word
Should fall—it was not meant;
A smile, a kind word will recall,
And many more prevent.

Be gentle, oh, 'twill soothe much care,
And make each burden light,
A gentle tone will smooth the brow,
And draw an answer bright.

Be gentle, though it may seem hard
To check an angry word;
But try, and it will surely bring
A full and rich reward.

Little Tim.

MRS. C. B. CREIGHTON.

"Can you put your chair within that door-way and clean my shoes, little boy?" I asked, pointing to an open passage-way.

"Yes, ma'am," he answered brightly, "there won't nobody see you in there."

I asked him his name, and striking his battered old cap, he said:

"Tim, ma'am; Tim's short for Timothy Gilroy."

And then and there my brave manhood Mike Tim and I became friends. He told me all his story—how he was ten years old, his sister Maggie eight, Polly six, and Janey only four years old, and how he had never been to school in his life. This was sad; but sadder yet, he had never heard of our dear Lord! [illegible] in a few words I told him the story of Jesus, the beautiful Saviour, and all about His love for little children, and when I described the [illegible] came down from heaven to open him he looked up into the cloudy sky with such a wistful look, and said:

"Now—now ma'am. He didn't though, did He?" as though the thought of such love was too sweet to be true.

"Yes, I repeated, "He loves you just [illegible] Tim!"

[illegible] expression of [illegible] crept over his pinched, [illegible] don't never think there 'mong all [illegible] cared anything [illegible] drew his ragged [illegible] his eyes. "I [illegible] a feller the [illegible] not tell him of other severer injuries.

"What'll become of Maggy, and Polley, and Janey, if I die?" he asked anxiously.

"Oh! I'll take care of them!" I said, hastily, to ease his mind.

"Thank'ee marm! I'm glad to die, then, 'cause I know they'll have enough to eat!"—and he turned his wan face to the wall.

"Missus," he added, after a short silence, "how glad I be that you got your feet muddy that there day; you remember?"

"Why, Tim?"

"'Cause you've made me gladder than ever I were afore; and missus, ef you hadn't a telled me bout my Jesus, I couldn't never seen Him!"

"Then you are sure you love Him, Tim, dear?"

"Oh! marm," and a look of reproach fell from his fading eyes, "how can I help it when He loves me!"

"Missus?"—

"Well, dear—"

"I be awfully sorry I ever swore! but, marm, I didn't know as how there really were any body like I swore about!"

"I know, Tim and so does the dear Lord know," I said, smoothing the curly hair off the dampening forehead.

"Missus?" for the last time from the pale lips, "I'll tell my dear Jesus all you've done for us when I gets up yonder!"

"Suffer little children to come unto me," I whispered in the dulling ear. The sunken eyes opened a brief radiant smile overspread his face, and then my heroic little Tim!—safe with the Savior, whom he had known for so short a time, yet loved so unpretentiously and truly. His father and mother had forsaken him and the Lord had graciously taken him up.

What a glorious result to spring from a trifling kindness. So easily can we plant a good seed that may grow into a tree of righteousness, the fruit of which will be sweet to our taste when we reach the kingdom.—Church Union.

Outdone by a Boy.

A lad in Boston, rather small for his age, works in an office as errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chaffing him about being so small, and said to him:

"You will never amount to much—you can never do much business; you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them. "Well," said he, "as small as I am I can do something which none of you four men can do."

"And what is that?" said they.

"I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied.

But they were anxious to know, and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them were able to do.

"I can keep from swearing," said the little fellow.

They were some blushes on four manly faces, and there seemed to be very little anxiety for further information on that point.

A lady was the mother of a bright little boy about three years old. The whooping-cough prevailed in their neighborhood, and the mother became very much alarmed lest her boy would take it. She had talked much about it, and worried over it, that she had infected the child with her fears to such an extent that he would scarcely leave her side. One night after the little fellow had been put to bed and to sleep, a jackass was driven past the house, and when just opposite set up his he-haw, he-haw. With a shriek the little fellow was out of bed, screaming at the top of his voice: "The whooping-cough is coming, mamma; the whooping-cough is coming!"—Cincinnati Commercial.

Make the bridge from the cradle to manhood just as long as you can. Leave your child a child as long as you can—especially if you live in [illegible] intelligence or by anything else. Let it be a child, and [illegible] little span of a man running [illegible]

THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S
CELEBRATED
LIVER PILLS,
FOR THE CURE OF
Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated. Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. MCLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

Paralysis,
Sexual Exhaustion,
Spinal Diseases,
Indigestion,
And other chronic ailments.
VOLUNTARY TESTIMONY.
[Extract from the Baltimore "American," December 21, 1878.]
"The Pulvermacher Electric Belt is recommended to general use for the following reasons: First, for its wonderful properties for the cure of diseases of the kidneys, stomach, liver and blood; secondly, for its extreme simplicity, and the fact of its being applied outside, precludes all possibility of any injury being done to the patient, as an external remedy is universally acknowledged to be safe. Another advantage is the facility with which the progress of the disease and cure can be watched, and if the Belt be not quite in the right place, it can be very easily readjusted so as to cover the parts affected. The Pulvermacher Electric Belt, and its perfection, has been hailed with delight, not only by the sufferers who have regained health, enjoyment, and a new lease of life through its beneficent qualities, but by the medical profession, who very frequently prescribe its use to their patients."
PULVERMACHER'S
are indorsed and approved by the most eminent medical and scientific authorities in the world, by the Faculties of France, England, Austria, Prussia, Belgium, and America, and by well-known writers, who refer to the extraordinary cures effected by Pulvermacher's Electric Belts and Bands, in upwards of one hundred medical and philosophical works.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
By its great and thorough Blood-purifying properties, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Pimple, such as Tetter or Eczema, Ulcers, Mercurial, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt-rheum, Fever Sores, Swelling or Tumors, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine.
Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Tumor, Hip Joint Disease, Fever Sores, Scrofulous Sores and Scrofulous, White Swellings, Goiter or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.
If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellow-brown spots on face or body, frequent headaches or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flashes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from "Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.
In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs, it invigorates the system and purifies the blood. $1 by druggists.

Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets
SIZE OF PELLETS.
THE "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC.
As a case of taking these Pellets, no gripe, nor griping pills, composed of cheap, [illegible] bulky vegetables. These Pellets are scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them. They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For Jaundice, Windy Colic, Costiveness, Indigestion, Bilious Fever, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles in the Shoulders, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations from the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Pain in region of Kidneys, Internal Fever, Heated Feeling about the Stomach, Rush of Blood to Head, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial powers of these purgative Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may be said that their action upon the animal economy is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their penetrative energy. Are not impair the properties of these Pellets. They are sugar-coated and inclosed in glass bottles, their virtues being therefore preserved unimpaired for any length of time, and they are portable, so that they are always fresh and reliable. This is not the case with pills put up in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes. For all diseases where a Laxative, Alterative, or Purgative is indicated, these little Pellets will give the most perfect satisfaction. Sold by druggists.

CATARRH
Is a terrible disease. Its fearful effects are corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, darkness of vision, loss of smell, disgusting odors, nasal deformities and finally consumption. Thousands, not knowing the great danger in neglecting this disease, die with consumption. In a few years or months it sweeps rapidly forward, and quick consumption announces it is too late.
CONSUMPTION of humanity that yearly carries thousands to an untimely grave, not sparing the young, the talented, nor the beautiful.
ASTHMA which makes life a burden to its victims almost wish for death.
BRONCHITIS Breathing, Coughing, and near approach of consumption.—For these and all Pulmonary Diseases, Dr. H. W. Clark's Treatment is by the use of his
CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANTS IS PLEASANT, THOROUGH, AND SUCCESSFUL. SATISFACTION always GUARANTEED.
Balsams and cordials of the most healing and soothing properties are so combined with Pine Tree Tar that the mere breathing vaporizes them into a dense smoke. This is inhaled right to the diseased parts. No food, no hot water, simply inhaling or breathing it, and you feel its healing power at once. As the oils and balsams condense on the air passages and lungs, their capacity is wonderfully enlarged and the hollow chest soon becomes round and full.
HOME TREATMENT sent to any part of the United States or Canada, to be returned through the mail, if not found to be as represented. To consumptives beyond the possibility of cure the inhalants always give great relief, and often cure cases considered hopeless. CATARRH is readily cured by breathing the vapor and forcing it into the diseased cavities of the head and out of the nose, and is the first step, without which this terrible and almost universal disease can be permanently cured. Jar, terms, and pamphlet free.

CAST THY BURDEN.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He will sustain thee."

Hast thou a care whose pressure dread
Expels sweet comfort from thy bed?
To thy Redeemer take that care,
And change anxiety to prayer.
Hast thou a hope, with which thy heart
Would almost feel it death to part?
Entreat thy God that hope to crown,
Or give thee strength to lay it down.
Hast thou a friend whose image dear
May prove an idol worshipped here?
Implore the Lord that nought may be
A shadow between heaven and thee,
Whate'er the care that breaks thy rest,
Whate'er the wish that swells thy breast,
Spread before God that wish, that care,
And change anxiety to prayer.

THE NEGRO,

AND HIS PECULIARITIES IN FEATURES, COLOR AND WOOLLY HAIR.

BY REV. A. E. P. ALBERT,

A former student of Atlanta University and Clark's Theological Seminary, now Pastor of M. E. Church at Houma, La.

A LECTURE.

With no small amount of reluctance, do I engage myself, to expatiate upon the theme to which I am about to court your attention. My reluctance arises partially from the unpopularity of the theme; but more especially from a deep sense of my inability to do full justice, to a subject so novel so strange; and yet so securely treasured in the coffers of Archæology. But being desirous to use all my endeavors and [illegible] for the promotion of [illegible] knowledge, I beg your indulgence [illegible] to bear patiently with [illegible] what is said.

[illegible] under consideration is [illegible] interest to all people, [illegible] interest in the Ethiopi[illegible]; forasmuch as it [illegible] upon which [illegible] claims to perfect [illegible] other races of our [illegible] one which ought not [illegible] interests or [illegible] by an impartial [illegible] is about "The [illegible] peculiar[illegible] and woolly [illegible] is derived from [illegible] meaning [illegible] Ethiop or [illegible] a Greek [illegible] exchanged [illegible] the Negro or [illegible] very properly be [illegible] an Ethio[illegible] occupying [illegible] civilization, [illegible] and then [illegible] state of [illegible] and happiness, [illegible] history. [illegible] attention. [illegible] will notice [illegible] the [illegible] His Color; [illegible] His Hair; [illegible] and Fe[illegible] [illegible] of our dis[illegible] the [illegible] Arche[illegible] [illegible] Negro [illegible] [illegible]

profane history seem to direct us to Ham for our parental head. Yes, Ham, the one that beheld with apparent indifference his father's nakedness while he was drunk. Please notice for this action or inaction of Ham, Noah cursed not Ham, nor his sons Cush, Mizraim or Phut, but Canaan, the youngest son, whom it is believed first saw Noah's nakedness, and reported it to his father, whereupon he was cursed. Canaan is our brother, but we deny that we are his descendants: First, because he settled in Palestine, and we are from Ethiopia. Secondly, because Joshua was commanded by the Lord to utterly destroy him and his people, and so complete was the destruction they never thereafter existed as a seperate and distinct people. But we assert without fear of successful contradiction, that we are the descendants of Cush; for it may be clearly proven that he settled Ethiopia and Central Africa, the Negro's home; whereas it is known that neither Mizraim, Canaan or Phut settled that portion of country. Therefore we know that we have received no curse through Canaan, for we are no more related to them than our brethren of the other races.

The first great kingdoms of which we have record, were foundered by the sons of Ham. Yes, they founded among others Carthage, the birthplace of commerce, letters and the arts. The first great and distinguished warrior that the world was called upon to admire was a Hamite. Again we come later in history, and we find the Hamite or Negro race, not only to be the most civilized and powerful of all other races, but we meet caravans from all parts of the known world, coming from her granaries heavy laden with grain to save a starving world, which they had left behind; while the Egyptian negroes were rejoicing in their civilization and power, with peace and plenty joined hand in hand as safeguards of their power and liberties.

The Negro, Ethiopian or Egyptian, is one and the same race; which we are prepared to prove by Heroditus, the most correct and reliable historian of ancient times. Heroditus says: "The army of Sesostris, must have been real Egyptians." Why? "for they were black and had woolly hair." What better description of the Negro can be had? The Negro is black and has woolly hair. Therefore in in accordance with the principles of Geometry, that things which are equal to the same thing, are equal to each other, we are bound to recognize the Egyptian as of the same race. If indeed the Negro and Egyptian be one and the same race, as what we have just said plainly demonstrates; then truly we have proven that the Negro attained a very high degree of civilization and power in Egypt, when she was in her glory, during the Pharoahs, when she owned the Israelites or Jews, as her slaves, by the millions. Were it not superfluous, I would attempt to comment upon the ancient greatness and glory of Egypt, but suffice it to say that they were the most remarkable and powerful people of the ancient world; and whatever of greatness and grandeur belongs to Egypt, belongs to the Negro race as his footprints upon the sands of time. Of course it will not be out of order to state here that all people of the same race and color, are not of the same nation; hence as we are of the Ethiopian origin, we will particularize upon the Ethiopians. Ethiopian, the country of the Ethiopians is situated directly south of Egypt.

The origin of this nation is lost in antiquity; but history informs us that about 1000 B. C., its former capital, Meroe, became the emporium of Arabia, Egypt and other great nations in its vicinity; and [illegible] grew to be one of the [illegible] States of the ancient world. Egypt was tributary to it. [illegible] (1000 B. C.,) and thus [illegible] swayed a powerful hand, [illegible] moulding the character of the [illegible]. Let us pause here one [illegible], and follow the march of [illegible]. Wherever its light [illegible] burned once clearly, it [illegible] diffused, but not extin[illegible] [illegible] knows that [illegible] civilization from [illegible] Greece again [illegible] Egypt; Egypt [illegible] Thebes, the [illegible] whence [illegible] higher we [illegible] ancient are the ruins upon which we tread, till we come upon the "hoary Meroe," the queenly city of Ethiopia, which Egypt acknowledged to be the cradle of her institutions. So it is that we trace the light of Ethiopian civilization, first into Egypt, thence into Greece and Rome, whence gathering new splendor on its way, it hath been diffusing itself all the world over. We now come to the second division of our subject, the consideration of the color of the Ethiopians or Negroes, that distinguish their descendants in such a marked manner from the rest of the human race.

The Bible says very little about the color of the various races of men; and absolutely nothing as to the time when or reasons why these varieties were introduced. Job said: "My skin is black upon me." In Lamentations it is said; "Their visage is blacker than a coal;" also, "our skin was blacker than an oven;" both of these writers no doubt, had reference to the change of color produced by the famine. Another writer says; "I am black but comely," but he being a shepherd the change might have been caused by his lying much in the sun. "However we have the testimony of one, whom we clearly understand, and which is of utmost importance in settling this question."

Jeremiah asks, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?" Indeed he seems to be as well satisfied that the Ethiopian was black, as that the leopard was spotted; and that the one was as indellible as the other." But the question is how shall we account for his color? Was it a curse in Cain that descended to us? Oh; no, it could not be; for Noah and his family, were the only ones that survived the flood, to repopulate the world; and he descended not from Cain, but Seth; and even he were descended from Cain and we bear the mark of Cain, how happened any to be white? Well; how came this peculiarity in color? We assert that the climate made the Negro black. The climate made his skin so dark; the sun his hair did curl; thus where 'er he goes; where 'er he be; he bears the impress of his fatherland. The various colors seen in the native of Africa, where amalgamation is impossible, clearly indicate to us that climate and climate alone is the sole cause of difference. Remember that the word Ethiopia means sunburnt; hence the Ethiopians are the sunburnt people. The Jews descended from one stock, and were prohibited by the most sacred institutions, from intermarrying, with people of other nations and yet dispersed throughout the world; they are marked with the color of all nations; Fair in Britain and Germany, brown in France, swarthy in Portugal and Spain, olive in Syria and Chaldea, tawny or copper colored, in Arabia and Egypt, whilst they are black at Congo in Africa. Moreover there are two Jewish colonies upon the coast of Malabar, the old and the new; separated by color, and known as the "black Jews" and the white Jews." The old colony having been longer subjected to the influence of the climate, are the "black Jews" and their hair is curly, showing a resemblance to the Negro; while those of the new colony are as dark as gypsies, and each succeeding generation grows darker and darker. As with the Jews, so it is with us. Again, Dr. Livingstone tells us that in certain parts of Africa there are persons as white as in Europe; but as he advances under the equatorial sun, the darker hues he sees. This climatic color having been obtained through long ancestral lines, is disposed of in like manner. Thus we hold that if the Negroes of Africa, were to migrate to the cold mountains of Lapland and the Laplanders to equatorial Africa, in a few centuries the posterity of the one would swap color, hair and features with the posterity of the other. This theory we advance upon the observation of historians and the experience of the Jewish colonies upon the coast of Malabar. But I imagine the question revolves in your minds, "What will you do with his curly hair, that like the bark to the green tree sticks?" Very well, we have an answer; only hear us for our cause and be silent.

We hold that as the climate changes his color, so it changes his hair. Yes, the climate curls his hair so tightly, and combs them into kinks. The hot equatorial sun, working upon the Ethiopian's hair, produces upon it the same effect that the heated stove does upon the lady's tresses, which are put into the stove to curl. We may notice also that in proportion to the change in color from white to black the more curly and crispy the hair appears, until it varies from the silken strand of the Malay, to the wool of the Ethiopian, and vice versa. The Swiss in the high mountains above the plains of Lombardy have sandy hair, while just at the foot of the mountain the peasants of Milanese have black hair. What contrast in color of hair in the same part of country, with only this difference, that the one makes his home upon the snow capped mountains, and the other upon the parched plains. So natural is the difference, that we notice the change, not only in the human family, but also among the animals of the brute creation, of the same species, when scattered the world over. And moreover, it is a well established fact, that heat is not only the great colorer, but a great crisper of hair; whether it is upon man's head or upon the back of animals. Impressed with the opinion that we have sufficiently proven this portion of our discourse, we now come to account for the negroes' peculiarities in features.

Why is his head so slanting backward and flat? Why is his nose so flat? and his lips so thick? Allow me to answer that it is not altogether the working and influence of nature; but the formation that heathen parents gave. As the flat head Indians adjusted boards to the heads of their children, to make their foreheads flat; and as the rich Chinese bund their children's feet in iron shoes, to shape them as they pleased; so the heathen Negroes applied instruments to their foreheads, lips and noses, to shape them to accord with their idea of beauty. As the corset is the delicate female form; so are those instruments to the Negro's members, and upon this point, we have nearly the unanimous opinion of the medical profession in favor of our theory. Besides these causes, "religious superstition and the worship of idols," together with a mind far strayed from the ever living God, have done much in changing the features of the Negro, from the original Ethiopian of Meroe, to the present inhabitants of Zambesi. As the African by his fall has lost those qualities that adorn and beautify the visage of man, so the Anglo Saxon has improved his features, enlarged his brain and brightened his intellect.

We acknowledge the Anglo Saxon to be the highest type of civilization. But from whence sprang this refined, proud, haughty and intellectual race? Macaulay says: "When the Briton first became known to the Tyrian mariners, they were little superior to the Sandwich Islanders." Hume says: "They were a rude and barbarous people, dressed in the skins of wild animals;" while Cæsar and Cicero join in saying, that they were the most degraded and the ugliest people they had ever seen or conquered. Thus they improved in appearance as they improved in mind. The people in Africa, be it remembered, whether living in houses or in the open air, are oppressed with a hot climate, which causes them to sleep, more or less with their mouths open. This fact alone is sufficient to account for the large wide mouth and flat nose; common sense teaching us that with the open mouth the features must fall. Therefore if we wish to be pretty we must keep our mouths shut.

Having considered the negro's origin, and his peculiarities in color, hair and features; in conclusion we we will glance over his general history and future prospects. The history of my race viewed from a lofty plane, in the full light of history, presents a varying picture of human grandeur and sad reverses. About 900 B. C. we see them parading the most formidable and disciplined army that the world had ever seen; bringing terror and consternation to the world. Her pyramids, architecture and general civilization, courting the wonder and admiration of the ancient world. She gives birth to commerce, starts her out, with her white canvass of peace, upon the bosom of the Mediteranean, when Rome knew nothing of the form of a ship. She opens her laps to the Mediteranean, and the world pours out her wealth at the feet of Carthage; thus Carthage, the daughter of Meroe, the Ethiopian queen, sat the mistress of the world. But just over the sea, her rival was preparing to bury her history and wipe her off from the map. But looking over the pages of history, scanty though it be, and written to suit the tastes and prejudices of our enemies, still we cannot see but that the Negro race has played an active and conspicuous part in the world's history. She built among other cities of the ancient world, Babylon, Nineveh and Carthage also, to which the world owes the present civilization that it now enjoys. Yes, we can boast of our glorious history; ancient though it be, it is glorious. True, we, a part of the race, were kept in servitude about 250 years, but it was not till after the race had held in slavery the millions of Israel for hundreds of years. We became ignorant, but it was not till after we had supplied Greece enough of the light of civilization to diffuse the world over. We forgot all the arts of war; but not until we had presented to the world the greatest general that ever lived to adorn the pages of the world's martial history. But in Hanibal it seems, we had attained to the culminating point of our brilliant history, and with the close of his eventful career came the execution of the Roman verdict upon Carthage, "Delenda est Cathago," (Carthage must be destroyed); ever since the execution of which, after leading the world in the arts and sciences over 1500 years, the race took the downward march to make her abode in the lowest dens of shame and disdain, to bow to the lash of masters, and the chains and fetters of her oppressors; but as the world and the sea have their hills and vales, so the Negro has been dormant in one of the valleys of his history.

But we are already ascending the next mountain. We can already boast of recent progress in what we had lost. Though like the mummies of Egypt, we have slept, bound up in our embalm, yet the world need not think that there is no sign of our ever taking the front rank again, for we are arising from our lethargy and sleep. Like the dry bones in the valley; the winds and pure air of intelligence are coming in contact with us, leaving traces of refinement and culture, and evidences of a healthy intellectual life. Let us, like the Phœnix, after our burial in our own ashes, arise from our death more glorious and resplendent than ever, arrest the attention of a busy world, and cause her to shower palms of victory across our path, as we enter the golden portal of the temple of fame.

Our prospects for the future are bright. The Lord has wrought wonders for us. Every avenue and avocation of life being now opened to us, the Lord has provided friends to invite us to enter. The lions of oppression and predjudice are fast dying out, and where they stood in the way of our progress, we will soon be able to rear the triumphal arch of victory, and enter into the temple of fame, and write our names upon her highest niche, in full view of an admiring world and a transported race.

Thanking you for your appreciation, permit me to advise you to "stamp improvement upon the wings of time," and when the journey of life is over and you leave the shores of time for a blissful immortality, you will certainly leave "your footprints upon the shores of time," which will do you honor in time and in eternity.

A Temperance Man.

A man who does not drink liquors of any kind. He's a man who votes against putting temptation in the way of men; he votes, therefore, against drunkard making, against property squandering, against criminal making, against pauper making. He is thus not only a temperance man, but all his practical, effective power is directed against intemperance and all its results. He don't talk republicanism and vote democracy. He has no doubt as to which side he is on. The liquor dealers know he is against them, and they vote against him every time.

"There is surely plenty of opportunity in the six days of the week for ladies to indulge in costly array without going to church to display new dresses, new bonnets or rich ornaments."—Weekly Witness.

Let every one sweep the drift from his own door and not busy himself about the frost on his neighbor's door.

Returned Missionaries.

It is a most remarkable fact in the history of the India missions that notwithstanding the insalubrity of the climate it has at this moment no missionaries absent on leave. Some have been compelled of late to return from the work, but being able to work in our cooler climate have at once relieved the missionary society by taking appointments. One of these opens his heart to the Secretary in the following strain: Your prayers that I may be permitted to do for this place what I was not permitted to do for India touches a tender place. Would that it could be so, but it is hardly possible. Should I do, as is not impossible, more good here than there, still the difference in the needs of the two fields is such that any amount of good here does not counter balance a little there. To add fortunes to the affluent is not so needful nor so important as to feed the famishing. Yet the first may appear the greater. I will tell you confidentially that I regret very sincerely my return though every human consideration and every providential indication seemed to demand it. I am sorry I did not accept every risk, peril every earthly interest and resolutely leave my case to in God's hands and even die it it must be in the sacred cause of missions.

Startling.

There is one fact staring us in in the face that we cannot escape. We are spending $700,000,000 a year for intoxicating drinks. From every city and village in the country comes up the cry of "hard times;" we meet hundreds of anxious looking men on the streets, out of work and under the pressure of actual want; hungry women and children are hiding away in tenement houses, and yet there is no perceptible diminution of this expenditure that is impoverishing the country. Saloons and the "beer rooms" of corner groceries are more regularly patronized than any other places of business. There is but one reason for nine tenths of the poverty that is constantly appealing to us. The prohibition of the traffic in spirituous liquors—liquors drank in the dram shop—would enrich the country more certainly than the abundant harvests we are now reaping. In truth, as it is, the harvests are wasted in ministering to a depraved appetite that is ruining body and soul, nurturing crime and disease. And yet Christian men vote for liquor sellers and drunkards.—Ex.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Advice.

In Bayley's Life of Sir Walter Raleigh, we have the following very weighty advice which that distinguished man gave to his son:

"Take especial care that thou delight not in wine, for there was never any man that came to honor or preferment that loved it; for it transformeth a man into a beast, decayeth health, poisoneth the breath, distroyeth natural heat, brings a man's stomach to an artificial heat, deformeth the face, rotteth the teeth, and to conclude, maketh a man contemptible, soon old, and despised of all wise and worthy men, hated in thy servants, in thyself and companions; for it is a bewitching and infectious vice. And remember my words, that it were better for a man to be subject to any vice than to it; for all other sins and vanities are recovered, but a drunkard will never shake off the delights of beastliness; for the longer it possesseth a man, the more he will delight in it, and the older he groweth the more he shall be subject to it; for it dulleth the spirits and destroyeth the body, as ivy doth the old tree, or as the worm that engendereth the kernal of the nut.

"If the religion of refinement, preaches as its law simply the laws of convenience, of delicacy, of meekness, of softness, of morol effeminacy—all under the guise of high sounding expressions—this religion of æsthetics becomes a religion of anæsthetics, which dulls and deadens conscience, and snaps asunder the magic tie which binds Israel to its past."—Jewish Messenger.

"Mammon is a demon, useful when bound a slave to the chariot wheels of honorable commerce, but cruel and terrible when permitted to be the master of a man."—Zion's Herald.

Circumstances cannot control genius; it will wrestle with them; its power will bend and break them to its path.

Cleaning a Beadstead.

Yesterday afternoon a Brush street house-wife lugged a bedstead into the back yard, leaned it against the fence, rolled up her sleeves, and went to work and brought out a teakettle full of boiling hot water. Her sole object of course, was only to wash off the dust and cobwebs which settle on every bedstead in the land, and she needn't have looked all around in a sly and stealthy way before proceeding to business.

There was a boy in the alley. He was hunting for plunder in a pile of rubbish, and hearing the woman in the yard he looked through a knot-hole in the fence and began to chuckle. He knew that her object was to put the bedstead in tidy trim for the summer. Yet he maliciously called out:

"Have the water up to the boiling point if you want to knock 'em!"

The woman put the teakettle down in a hurry and looked up at the windows on either side. No one was visible, but presently the boy in the alley remarked;—

"Don't let that water git cold!"

She located him that time, but she disdained to hear his remarks. Lifting up the kettle again, she commenced giving the cobwebs another soaking.

"Now follow it up with kerosene!" hoarsely exclaimed the boy as she paused for a moment.

Her face darkened and she looked anxiously around, nothing but the consciousness that everybody has to clean off the spring cobwebs prevented her from feeling mad.

"We allus use corrosive sublimate to kill 'em!" called the boy from the knot-hole.

She went down to the fence and asked who was there and what he wanted.

"I don't want nuthin'," he softly replied, "only you can't never kill 'em with hot water!"

"Can't kill what?" she sternly demanded.

"Bumble bees!" he chuckled. "We've had 'em up home ever since I was born."

"Boy, I'm only cleaning the dust off the bedstead," she said, as she got closer to the knot-hole.

"You kin call it dust if you want to, but I never saw no jab at dust with a sharp stick!"

"You are a mean, impudent boy, and you just go away from here at once," she exclaimed.

"This alley belongs to the city," he replied "and I can't go. You'd better hurry back there, or they'll come too!"

She picked up a stick, laid it down after a moment, and going to the house she brought a piece of apple pie.

"Boy, aren't you hungry?" she asked as she reached the fence.

"You bet!"

"And if I give you this will you go away?"

"I will that; I'll whoop right out of the neighborhood in two minutes, and you can tack a shingle over this knot-hole."

"Well, now, here it is," she said as she reached it over.

"And I won't tell no one what I saw ma'am, for we're all liable to find 'em and ma says she really believes they're a sign of good luck. Thankee, and if I were you I'd leave the bedstead outdoors to-night and let 'er freeze up. Fust-rate pie, and don't let that water git cold."—Journal.

Missionary Work among the Freedwomen.

There is a growing conviction among the active Christian friends of the colored people, as well as among the more advanced and moral colored people themselves, that there must be more direct and better organized Christian effort to save and elevate the Freedwomen. This sentiment is finding expression in many ways. The Southern Workman, the Louisianian and several other papers edited and published in the South by colored men have spoken out on this point. The same subject is often the theme of earnest discussion among our best colored ministers and their white friends. The Christian Advocates at New York, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, have spoken clearly and well respecting this needed work. Our Bishops in their annual visitations to every section of the South have been impressed with the pressing need in this matter, and have often spoken of it. Rev. Dr. Rust, Corresponding Secretary, and the Board of Managers of the the Freedmen's Aid Society of the M. E. Church, together with Mrs. Bishop Clark, Mrs. Rust, Mrs. Dr. Hoyt and others, all of Cincinnati, have for some time been considering the advisability of organizing a special church movement in this field of Christian effort. Several prominent ladies of Chicago and elsewhere in our Church have felt moved to do something toward inaugurating this labor of love.

This universal connection is but the outgrowth of intelligent and heartfelt interest in the colored people. The society of any people is pure only as their women are pure—and there can be no permanent and advancing elevation of a people, only as their women are saved, and made representatives of virtue and industry in social life, and in the family circle. Slavery cursed the African woman as it could not the man. As the Louisianian says: "Slavery degraded the colored woman to a point that she became the pliant, willing tool of the white man's purpose. This generated into a habit." On this point there need be no multiplication of words, or collation of facts. Slavery knew no marriage relation, except in rare cases and even then to a limited extent. What an awful hell of degredation would the women of any people descend into, who were made to pass through generations of promiscuous, unrestrained, sexual intercourse! Out of that "bottomless pit" the freedwomen of America came. The ameliorating efforts of Christianity had their influence in exceptional cases and to a limited extent. But how exceptional, and how limited! It is not strange therefore, that as the work of elevating the colored people comes to be more intelligently studied, that thought and sympathy should be concentrated upon the Freedwomen. The fact that this is so, is most incouraging and indicates progress in the salvation of the Africo-American people in our midst.

The practical question is, how to utilize and make effective this manifest quickening of the American conscience towards the Freedwomen. Two things to us are self-evident; first, this work must be undertaken and carried forward by the Christian churches, and second, it must be done by Christian women.

As to the Churches as yet little can be expected of those composed entirely of colored people. The African Church, the African Zion, and the Colored Church of America are doing great works. But as yet their full strength is demanded in carrying out their direct church labor, and they cannot take hold of outside missionary plans. The time will come when they can. In fact, the African Church by its superior years and compactness of organization ought to begin this work now—as a specialty among its people. The two great churches of America which are the best qualified, and upon which therefore rests the chief responsibility of inaugurating missionary work among the Freedwomen, are the Methodist Episcopal Church with its national organization and immense wealth and missionary power, and the Baptist Church, especially the northern section. The Southern churches, including the M. E. Church South, the Southern Presbyterian, etc., are largely absorbed in questions which grow out of the demoralizations of the war; and, are incapacitated, for the present at least, by their complicity with slavery, and still remaining prejudices against the Negro, as freemen, to have the necessary heart [illegible] to lay hold of and prosecute such a work at once. Al[illegible] the Baptists of Chicago and [illegible] Ohio, and other cities [illegible] lady missionaries in the [illegible] understand comprehen-[illegible] are being [illegible] their [illegible] the Methodist [illegible] the whole [illegible] 300-000 colored people; already she has over 3000 young colored men and women in her schools; her Southern conferences are backed by the great benevolent societies of the Church, and the heart of the whole Church has always been and is now with the colored people.

The Louisiana Conference of the M. E. Church two years ago expressed its conviction that this work should be undertaken and within the past few weeks the work has assumed and organized form in this city. The Presiding Elders of the Louisiana Conference were, at its last session, appointed an advisory committee, with the view of extending the work throughout the whole State as rapidly as possible.

The work is under the general direction of Mrs. J. C. Hartzell, of New Orleans. While in the North last summer she issued through the press an appeal To the Methodist Women of Chicago and the Northwest, in which she made an appeal for money. Among other things she said:

Upon colored women the curse of slavery fell in its most degrading effects. Every womanly instinct of virtue or refinement was outraged, and their sex made simply the convenience of unbridled passion or considered of no higher value than to propagate their species for purposes of gain. There were exceptions, but I speak of the rule. And this terrible crime against humanity was not only perpetrated a single generation, but was kept up for many generations, until, alas! the dispositions and habits born of slavery have, to an alarming extent, become engrafted upon their very natures. This fact is spoken, not as a disgrace to them, but as a disgrace to our land of boasted Christian civilization which sanctioned slavery.

The colored people must have schools and churches, but there can be but little advance in virture and real Christian civilization only as their women are inspired by womanly instincts and home-life is developed among them. Many among the freed people, since coming out of bondage, have settled into homes, and some of these are real homes; but among those who have made the attempt, there is a sad lack in nearly every element of domestic comfort. Then among the great masses, who swarm the rural districts or are huddled together in the quarters on plantations, there is scarcely a thought of the comforts, and but few ideas of the moralities belonging to a Christian home. O! think of these dusky sisters in their degredation, and remember that they are in our own land, at our very doors; and, that their husbands and sons, among whom are seven hundred thousand voters, will be as they are, in virtue and morality.

The Chicago Preachers' meeting gave a hearty endorsement, and several of the pastors of the city opened their churches to Mrs. Hartzell that she might make a statement of her plans and ask for help. As a result, enough money was received to establish a Missionaries' Home at 816½ Second street, and to bring into the field four lady missionaries. Mrs. A. M. Ryder, who has been engaged in this city for two years in missionary work, has charge of the Home. Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, from Normal, Illinois, and Miss Lizzie Thompson, from Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephnes, of this city, are the associate workers.

The duties of these missionaries will be:

1. To visit the people in their homes.

2. To arrange for and hold mother's meetings.

3. To arrange for and hold meetings for young women.

These visits and meetings will have for their objects:

1. Religious and moral instruction.

2. Suggestions and advice on all matters relating to home life, and instructions as to personal habits and tastes.

3. Whenever possible instruction in plain sewing and other useful home works.

4. To increase the attendance upon our Schools and churches, and to labor always and everywhere to save the souls of these women, and help them into consistent and earnest Christian lives.

In addition, a regular Sunday-school teachers' meeting will be held at the Home, and as far as possible, relief societies will be organized in the churches to aid the poor.

Other ladies will be employed as funds in hand will justify, and voluntary helpers will be assigned work such portions of time as they can give. As far as possible the work will be made self supporting. Such is this work in its beginning. Whereunto it may grow we know not, but that is is of the Lord we do not doubt. We wish a hundred lady missionaries could be at once put to work in connection with our churches in this State.

We have set apart a column of the SOUTHWESTERN to this special work, where weekly reports of what is being done will be found, and where words of sympathy, counsel or advice will be printed with pleasure from our friends in any part of the nation.

With Thee.

Moses did not forget the unexpected and unfortunate reception his well meant interposition in behalf of his own people had formerly met. Forgetting that previously he had acted on his own impulses but that now he was to act from the distinct direction of heaven, he pleaded his own unfitness and shrank from a position of so much solemn responsibility. But God removed his objections and banished his hesitation by the promise "Certainly I will be with thee." This promise was his support and strength all through the career that lay before him. So long as he was in the line of duty and doing the work of God, no matter who opposed him, no matter what difficulties interposed, no matter how dark and unpromising the circumstances, however arduous the labors to be done, there was the promise, "Certainly I will be with thee" to cheer him, to give him courage and to give him strength. This was the secret of his success. This promise carried him through Egypt's wonderful scenes and through the forty years of the desert and finally into the borders of the promised land.

The words thus addressed to the man of God under the Old Testament economy are for us also under the dispensation. It was the same Divine Being who centuries afterwards said in tender, sympathetic, loving tones to His disciples, "Lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The presence of some persons is no help to us amid the duties, dangers and distresses of life. There are some who only increase our work by their presence and intensify our worry and woe. There are some whose absence aids us more than their presence. There are persons who could scarcely inflict upon us a greater sorrow than to say "Certainly I will be with thee."

There are times and seasons when we are better without the best of earthly companions—times when it is well for us to be wholly alone, so far as the creature is concerned—when we have to climb our Sinai or enter our Gethsemane and need not, indeed, ought not to have the company of mortals. But there are no seasons when we can dispense with the presence of our Heavenly Father, no seasons when He will not be a blessing to our hearts and a light to our path. For Him to say "Certainly I will be with thee" is a source of infinite satisfaction and strength. He is faithful who has promised. In duty, He will be with us to strengthen the hands, illumine the mind, touch the lips, guide the steps, and bless the endeavor. In trial he will be with us to lighten the burden, calm the billows, disperse the foe, quell our fears and wipe away our silent drops of grief. In sickness He will be with us to elevate the spirit's gaze, soften the couch of pain and afford cheering views of His unspeakable tenderness. In loss and bereavement He will be with us so that when stripped of all surrounding objects that compete for our affections, we shall find ourselves like the disciples on the mount of transfiguration, "with Jesus only."

South India M. E. Conference.

The South India Methodist preachers who to the number of 26 were in session at Madison for their annual conference, found many things to cheer them in their review of the year's work. The total of contributions raised for religions and benevolent objects during the year was, the noble sum of R's 95,000. Since the total membership including members on probation, in these churches was only 2,011 at the close of the year and 290 less than at the beginning, it will be seen that the contributions averaged just about Rs 50 a member. In view of the fact, that very few of these are in anything like affluent circumstances this may be called very generous giving.

We give below the appointments for the ensuing year of the preachers connected with the S. India Conference of the M. E. Church:

Southern Methodism.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Holly Springs: "I united in matrimony Mr. Samuel Lee and Miss Dolly Sills, Feb. 1, 1879; all of Marshall county."

Rev. I. B. Griffin, Holly Springs circuit: "I have been to my appointment, and my people were glad to have me return to them. The second year commences very fair. On the 8th of January God called away one of our faithful members, Sister Betsey Piogues, aged 43 years, 5 months, 11 days. She had been a member for 20 years, and filled a high place in the church."

TENNESSEE.

Rev. E. Provine, Lebanon: "I have preached on education, and then presecuted the claims of our church papers to my congregations."

Rev. J. Braden, Nashville: "School is crowded and hands are full of teaching and work. The Lord is with us: three or four conversions and others seeking Him. Dr. Rust preached for us yesterday (26th) a truly characteristic sermon, full of pathos and logic. He is on his way home from South Carolina. The cold weather has interfered very much with church work. McKendrie M. E. Church, South, was dedicated yesterday. Dr. Wilson, Missionary Secretary, preached and Bishop McTeiyre read dedicatory services."

The French Cabinet.

Five of the nine Ministers, including M. Waddington, the head of the French Cabinet are Protestants. The population of France is near 37,000,000, and over 35,000,000 are denominat d as Roman Catholics. The Cabinet, however, is most acceptable to the people, many of whom are nominally Catholics, with liberal views. Certain church reforms are demanded by the most intelligent men of France, and the Waddington Cabinet will not stand in the way.

The twenty-ninth annual report of the Southwestern Bible Society, incorporated in 1850, has been issued, and we hereby acknowledge the receipt of a copy. The President of the Society is W. H. Foster; agent in charge of Bible House, Rev. J. A. Ivy. The work of last year was restricted by the epidemic, yet 9,475 Bibles and testaments were placed in as many homes. Only six out of more than 100 Protestant churches made any contribution to its treasury; the aggregate of collections being $68 10, individual donations $292 84. The pestilence cut off from their labors Rev. N. W. Wilson and J. J. Irby. Says the corresponding secretary, A. H. Nelson; "God grant that the year 1879 may witness the accomplishment of far greater results than the year 1878, while in His merciful providence He shall spare us the sad experiences of the latter year."

The National Temprance Society has just published Canon Farrar's admirable address, "The Duty of the Church." It is a very able presentation of the duty of the Church of Christ in relation to the greatest obstacle in the pathway of its progress—intemperance, and the drinking customs which lead thereto. Every minister and every temperance worker in the land should have it. It is published uniform with "Talks on Temperance," by the same distinguished author, in a neat pamphlet of 24 pages. Price 10 cents; per dozen, $1. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Read Street, New York.

J. W. E. Bowens, a New Orleans student at the Central Tennessee College, Nashville, writes us: "Am moving on quite lively in the college. We are crowded. Dr. Braden is a Christian gentleman of ability, and understands his work. He is undoubtedly the right man in the right place. He needs no recommendation from me, for his long experience and tried ability is a sufficient guarantee. My work is not easy, but I rejoice in it and am happy thus far."

The New York Times has just issued a Spanish edition for circulation in the West Indies, Mexico and South America. Valuable commercial articles, statistics, and advertisements of American manufactures and business houses are contained in it. This edition is of the usual size of the great daily, and is an enterprise of great value to the country, and we hope a remunerative one to its conductors.

One of our leading men of New England in a private note says: "You and others of our brethren are doing a great work in the South. It seems that you are creating a new base of civilization which will have much to do in regenerating the South."

The world is saved by the breath of school children.

The Africa Fever.

Rev. R. J. Kellogg, principal of Moravia Seminary is handled very roughly by the terrible fever, more severely than any of the other white men recently sent out. He needs the prayers of the church. In a recent letter to the Secretaries he says: The second term of school was in progress only six weeks, half a term when the National vacation month (Dec) came. Children and parents cried out for the vacation so I gave it, and we are now suspended in the midst of a term of school. All other schools in the country are closed. Indeed I was forced to close. My assistant could not stay any longer. He is clerk in the House of Representatives which is in session now. Another lady teacher resigned to prepare for her wedding Jan. 1. Mr Fever was hold of me the second severe attack lasting nearly six weeks of the term. Extra help had to be put into the school on account of my prostation. Doctor, I have a continual fight with the fever. You have no idea about it. I have blowed no trumpet about it, but it is fever and chills to day feeling a little more like work to morrow, fever and chills intermitting. I work right along fighting it with all my resolution and strength, finally down I go once or twice almost to death's door. I am 40 pounds lighter than when I landed here. But Doctor, I am not discouraged, I am pulling through slowly, I have worked hard in the midst of great physical weakness. Last week Bro. Day, came down St Paul's river, and found me just out of bed from a week's prostration. I could scarcely walk. He insisted I should go home with him I shook with fever and ague all the way up and had to be carried from canoe to the house, I am now feeling better, more like myself. This is the third time I've taken refuge at the Muhlenburg mission to get good nursing and find recuperation. I have been handled the worst of any of the three missionaires, yet now I do not speak of these sufferings complainingly at all. No! no! God forbid, I am ready to fall without a murmur."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.
Boston Letter.

The Boston University, founded by the munificent charity of Isaac Rich, though yet in its infancy, is growing to large proportions and gains each day in public favor. The Law School stands at the head of this class of institutions, and the Medical School rivals those of New York and Philadelphia. The grade of admission to the College of Liberal Arts ranges above that of any other like institution in the country. This university possesses several advantages which will tend to make it a universal favorite with our people. It is located in the city of Boston, is open to all classes, rich and poor, male and female, white, black and yellow, and is devoted to all branches of liberal culture.

Uniting so many advantages the institution will be likely to receive frequent donations from the wealthy and benevolent. The city itself will cherish a pride in the university that bears its name. The Trustees have just received notice of a cash gift of $12,000 to form the nucleus of a professorship in the college Liberal Arts, the character of which is not yet made known.

A lady also has given $2000 as the basis of a female professorship in the same college. The Hon. Wm. B. Lawrence, LL.D., of Newport, R. I., offers a prize of $150, to be given to the member of the Law School writing the best essay on "Foreign Judgments." The course of lectures before this School by Hon. Francis Wharton on "The Conflict of Laws" is very able. The famous professors in this university are yet to be more widely known and to send forth in course of time still more famous students.

The last Preacher's Meeting listened to the sermon of Pro. Geo. Prentice, of Wesleyan University, on the life and character of Rev. Ira G. Bidwell. Bro. Bidwell was a native of Connecticut, an able, earnest, eloquent preacher. He leaped almost at a bound to our highest charges and, held his position with ever increasing popularity. With a brilliant and soaring imagination, he joined a genial temper, a warm heart. The great and popular talents with which he was endowed by nature were adorned by the simplicity, the Christian humility of the true gentleman. He had no need to look out for himself. The world was too ready to do him honor; he seemed only desirous to know how it could all be made to contribute to the glory of his divine Master. In his removal the realm of the dead has gained one of the choicest spirits.

The sermon, like all the productions of Prof. Prentice, was able and clear cut. He is totally unlike the friend whose eulogy he pronounced. The one is the man of reason, the other of imagination; the one steps firmly on the solid earth, the other was wont to mount on airy pinions to the depths of the empyrian; the one holds you by the closeness of his statements and reasonings, the other swept you to the third heaven as in a chariot of fire. Prentice is medium height, of full habit and solidly built, with a short neck, and a resolute, determined air as though he were the incarnation of will and afraid of neither men nor devils. With the physical constitution of a bulldog he joins the keen scent and alertness of the airiest greyhound—should life be spared, the Church will hear further from this literary Hercules.

The Atlantic for the month abounds as usual in fresh and racy articles. Literature, art, science, politics and reform get served up in the best form in each number. The Atlantic belongs to the advance school in all these lines. At one period it was given to meddling with religion; but under the later management of Houghton who is a Methodist, it is confined to secular topics. The Atlantic is the magazine for the scholar as Harper's is that of the family.

NAMREHS.

An Answer to the Circular.

"For the first time in the twenty-seven years of the history of this church, we have a monthly missionary concert of prayer, in which some of my people, both male and female, have participated, speaking on the different mission fields. The part of the plan found most difficult to execute is that of No. 1, as our official members will not consent to it. It was so in my former charge. In the last named place I found such stubborn resistance on the part of the richest men in the church, that I was compelled to resort to a sort of festival, to eke out the miserable pittance they had contributed for our benevolent causes. The festival was held in the parsonage, though my wife was ill, our carpets were taken up and the house filled with debris and we achieved success, but those families her named were not represented at the festival. I have here to struggle much in the same way, and only by constant pushing can anything be done. I called a few ladies together to see if they would organize a Woman's Missionary Society, and the wife of one of our most independent men was pledged by her husband before coming that she would not join, and the society was not formed. My dress coat I have worn three years. The boots I have worn this year cost me the sum of one dollar and seventy-five cents, and perhaps I may wear them six months longer. In all other matters myself and wife are practicing on the line of economy, that we may have something to put into the Lord's treasury. We have sold our parlor organ and mortgaged our piano, and so we keep our heads above water."

"I have taken a collection at a monthly concert for 25 years save one, when the official Board ruled it out, but at the annual collection on Missionary Sunday they gave some $400. I give missionary intelligence every month and have for 25 years (save two). Have failed in some points of the Disciplinary Plan—a grand plan, if we could get the whole church to work it. I have (with all my house) set the people an example in missionary giving" every member of my household put something into the box every collection."

The Work in Shreveport.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 4, 1879.

Dear Editor—Now that the Conference year for 1878 has just ended with the appointments for 1879, I thought it would not be out of place to drop you a few words concerning the work at St. Paul Church, Shreveport. On the whole we have had a good time. The church is advancing spiritually as well as in many other things. It is true, 1878 does not exceed 1877's reports, but taking all circumstances into consideration, the results stand equal. We had a series of revival meetings in which 57 souls were converted and baptized; also many infants were baptized, as the conference statistics will show. Late in the year, Dec. 17, 1878, Bishop Haven and Rev. J. C. Hartzell, editor SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE, honored our town and church with a visit that will be remembered some time to come. At night the Bishop gave a lecture upon caste or blue-bloods, but not strictly confined to that subject. It was on the whole splendid and I would have been very glad to have had many of our Southern blue-bloods to hear that and the following lecture by Dr. Hartzell, who, after touching brilliantly and briefly upon his visiting tour up North and West, swung naturally into his favorite theme, the work of the Northern Church in the South and the outlook of the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE. Closing his remarks, Bro. Hartzell offered the SOUTHWESTERN for subscribers, and sung a glorious hymn with the congregation joining chorus. Bro. H. T. O. Abbott, pastor of St. James Chapel, was present with many of his people, so that our coming together had the appearance of a union meeting. Our subscription list amounted to 47 names, some of whom paid full subscription price, others part. On the whole, we had a rousing time. By-the-bye, Bro. Hartzell offered a splendid premium—a picture of John Wesley, father of Methodism.

May the good Lord bless Bishop Haven, Bro. J. C. Hartzell and the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Memorial of I. McDonald.

FRANKLIN, LA. JAN. 9th 1879.

I. McDonald departed this life Nov. 19th 1878, age 73 years. He was born on the Eastern shore of Maryland; raised in this country from eleven years old. He was known as a Baptist preacher in this Parish. One who stood off from every other Church and contended with every one, that no one could be right unless he was a Baptist. When I came here to this charge, after visiting some of the members of my charge who were sick, by reading and explaining the best I could, others spoke to his son, who stayed with his father. He invited me I went, and took with me a little book called the "Seed Thought." I selected some parts I thought suitable for the sick, I sang with him one of the old time hymns, I prayed with him, and he seemed to be happy. The tears fell from the eyes of the old gentleman, which caused his son and the family that was present to rejoice, to see such effect on their father, especially by a Methodist whom he never allowed before to talk with him about religion. From that time I visited him as my own member. I read to him different parts of the Bible. I convinced him that every man who believed in Christ, could be, and that He saith he shall be saved. By reading the Scripture to him I got him to take sacrament one time, and I administered it twice before he died. He sent for me one night about 12 o'clock, told me when he died he wanted me to bury his body. He died on the 19th of November. We took the remains to our church, and held over the body regular service at which the family, wife and two sons and their wives were much pleased. The old man in his bed said to his son, I am fighting for the city.

Missionary Work among the Freedwomen.

There is a growing conviction among the active Christian friends of the colored people, as well as among the more advanced and moral colored people themselves, that there must be more direct and better organized Christian effort to save and elevate the Freedwomen. This sentiment is finding expression in many ways. The Southern Workman, the Louisianian and several other papers edited and published in the South by colored men have spoken out on this point. The same subject is often the theme of earnest discussion among our best colored ministers and their white friends. The Christian Advocates at New York, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, have spoken clearly and well respecting this needed work. Our Bishops in their annual visitations to every section of the South have been impressed with the pressing need in this matter, and have often spoken of it. Rev. Dr. Rust, Corresponding Secretary, and the Board of Managers of the the Freedmen's Aid Society of the M. E. Church, together with Mrs. Bishop Clark, Mrs. Rust, Mrs. Dr. Hoyt and others, all of Cincinnati, have for some time been considering the advisability of organizing a special church movement in this field of Christian effort. Several prominent ladies of Chicago and elsewhere in our Church have felt moved to do something toward inaugurating this labor of love.

This universal connection is but the outgrowth of intelligent and heartfelt interest in the colored people. The society of any people is pure only as their women are pure—and there can be no permanent and advancing elevation of a people, only as their women are saved, and made representatives of virtue and industry in social life, and in the family circle. Slavery cursed the African woman as it could not the man. As the Louisianian says: "Slavery degraded the colored woman to a point that she became the pliant, willing tool of the white man's purpose. This generated into a habit." On this point there need be no multiplication of words, or collation of facts. Slavery knew no marriage relation, except in rare cases and even then to a limited extent. What an awful hell of degredation would the woman of any people descend into, who were made to pass through generations of promiscuous, unrestrained, sexual intercourse! Out of that "bottomless pit" the freedwomen of America came. The ameliorating efforts of Christianity had their influence in exceptional cases and to a limited extent. But how exceptional, and how limited! It is not strange therefore, that as the work of elevating the colored people comes to be more intelligently studied, that thought and sympathy should be concentrated upon the Freedwomen. The fact that this is so, is most incouraging and indicates progress in the salvation of the Africo-American people in our midst.

The practical question is, how to utilize and make affective this manifest quickening of the American conscience towards the Freedwomen. Two things to us are self-evident; first, this work must be undertaken and carried forward by the Christian churches, and second, it must be done by Christian women.

As to the Churches as yet little can be expected of those composed entirely of colored people. The African Church, the African Zion, and the Colored Church of America are doing great works. But as yet their full strength is demanded in carrying out their direct church labor, and they cannot take hold of outside missionary plans. The time will come when they can. In fact, the African Church by its superior years and compactness of organization ought to begin this work now—as a specialty among its people. The two great churches of America which are the best qualified, and upon which therefore rests the chief responsibility of inaugurating missionary work among the Freedwomen, are the Methodist Episcopal Church with its national organization and immense wealth and missionary power, and the Baptist Church, especially the northern section. The Southern churches, including the M. E. Church South, the Southern Presbyterian, etc., are largely absorbed in questions which grow out of the demoralizations of the war; and, are incapacitated, for the present at least, by their complicity with slavery, and still remaining prejudices against the Negro, as freemen, to have the necessary heart [illegible] to lay hold of and prosecute [illegible] a work at once. Al[illegible] the Baptists of Chicago and [illegible], Ohio, and other cities [illegible] lady missionaries in the [illegible] understand comprehen[illegible] [illegible] future are being [illegible] their [illegible] the Metho[illegible] [illegible] 250,000 colored people; already she has over 3000 young colored men and women in her schools; her Southern conferences are backed by the great benevolent societies of the Church, and the heart of the whole Church has always been and is now with the colored people.

The Louisiana Conference of the M. E. Church two years ago expressed its conviction that this work should be undertaken and within the past few weeks the work has assumed and organized form in this city. The Presiding Elders of the Louisiana Conference were, at its last session, appointed an advisory committee, with the view of extending the work throughout the whole State as rapidly as possible.

The work is under the general direction of Mrs. J. C. Hartzell, of New Orleans. While in the North last summer she issued through the press an appeal To the Methodist Women of Chicago and the Northwest, in which she made an appeal for money. Among other things she said:

Upon colored women the curse of slavery fell in its most degrading effects. Every womanly instinct of virtue or refinement was outraged, and their sex made simply the convenience of unbridled passion or considered of no higher value than to propagate their species for purposes of gain. There were exceptions, but I speak of the rule. And this terrible crime against humanity was not only perpetrated a single generation, but was kept up for many generations, until, alas! the dispositions and habits born of slavery have, to an alarming extent, become engrafted upon their very natures. This fact is spoken, not as a disgrace to them, but as a disgrace to our land of boasted Christian civilization which sanctioned slavery.

The colored people must have schools and churches, but there can be but little advance in virture and real Christian civilization only as their women are inspired by womanly instincts and home-life is developed among them. Many among the freed people, since coming out of bondage, have settled into homes, and some of these are real homes; but among those who have made the attempt, there is a sad lack in nearly every element of domestic comfort. Then among the great masses, who swarm the rural districts or are huddled together in the quarters on plantations, there is scarcely a thought of the comforts, and but few ideas of the moralities belonging to a Christian home. O! think of these dusky sisters in their degredation, and remember that they are in our own land, at our very doors; and, that their husbands and sons, among whom are seven hundred thousand voters, will be as they are, in virtue and morality.

The Chicago Preachers' meeting gave a hearty endorsement, and several of the pastors of the city opened their churches to Mrs. Hartzell that she might make a statement of her plans and ask for help. As a result, enough money was received to establish a Missionaries' Home at 316½ Second street, and to bring into the field four lady missionaries. Mrs. A. M. Ryder, who has been engaged in this city for two years in missionary work, has charge of the Home. Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, from Normal, Illinois, and Miss Lizzie Thompson, from Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephnes, of this city, are the associate workers.

The duties of these missionaries will be:

1. To visit the people in their homes.

2. To arrange for and hold mother's meetings.

3. To arrange for and hold meetings for young women.

These visits and meetings will have for their objects:

1. Religious and moral instruction.

2. Suggestions and advice on all matters relating to home life, and instructions as to personal habits and tastes.

3. Whenever possible instruction in plain sewing and other useful home works.

4. To increase the attendance upon our Schools and churches, and to labor always and everywhere to save the souls of these women, and help them into consistent and earnest Christian lives.

In addition, a regular Sunday-school teachers' meeting will be held at the Home, and as far as possible, relief societies will be organized in the churches to aid the poor.

Other ladies will be employed as funds in hand will justify, and voluntary helpers will be assigned work such portions of time as they can give. As far as possible the work will be made self supporting. Such is this work in its beginning. Whereunto it may grow we know not, but that is is of the Lord we do not doubt. We wish a hundred lady missionaries could be at once put to work in connection with our churches in this State.

We have set apart a column of the SOUTHWESTERN to this special work, where weekly reports of what is being done will be found, and where words of sympathy, counsel or advice will be printed with pleasure from our friends in any part of the nation.

With Thee.

Moses did not forget the unexpected and unfortunate reception his well meant interposition in behalf of his own people had formerly met. Forgetting that previously he had acted on his own impulses but that now he was to act from the distinct direction of heaven, he pleaded his own unfitness and shrank from a position of so much solemn responsibility. But God removed his objections and banished his hesitation by the promise "Certainly I will be with thee." This promise was his support and strength all through the career that lay before him. So long as he was in the line of duty and doing the work of God, no matter who opposed him, no matter what difficulties interposed, no matter how dark and unpromising the circumstances, however arduous the labors to be done, there was the promise, "Certainly I will be with thee" to cheer him, to give him courage and to give him strength. This was the secret of his success. This promise carried him through Egypt's wonderful scenes and through the forty years of the desert and finally into the borders of the promised land.

The words thus addressed to the man of God under the Old Testament economy are for us also under the dispensation. It was the same Divine Being who centuries afterwards said in tender, sympathetic, loving tones to His disciples, "Lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The presence of some persons is no help to us amid the duties, dangers and distresses of life. There are some who only increase our work by their presence and intensify our worry and woe. There are some whose absence aids us more than their presence. There are persons who could scarcely inflict upon us a greater sorrow than to say "Certainly I will be with thee."

There are times and seasons when we are better without the best of earthly companions—times when it is well for us to be wholly alone, so far as the creature is concerned—when we have to climb our Sinai or enter our Gethsemane and need not, indeed, ought not to have the company of mortals. But there are no seasons when we can dispense with the presence of our Heavenly Father, no seasons when He will not be a blessing to our hearts and a light to our path. For Him to say "Certainly I will be with thee" is a source of infinite satisfaction and strength. He is faithful who has promised. In duty, He will be with us to strengthen the hands, illumine the mind, touch the lips, guide the steps, and bless the endeavor. In trial he will be with us to lighten the burden, calm the billows, disperse the foe, quell our fears and wipe away our silent drops of grief. In sickness He will be with us to elevate the spirit's gaze, soften the couch of pain and afford cheering views of His unspeakable tenderness. In loss and bereavement He will be with us so that when stripped of all surrounding objects that compete for our affections, we shall find ourselves like the disciples on the mount of transfiguration, "with Jesus only."

South India M. E. Conference.

The South India Methodist preachers who to the number of 26 were in session at Madison for their annual conference, found many things to cheer them in their review of the year's work. The total of contributions raised for religious and benevolent objects during the year was, the noble sum of R's 95,000. Since the total membership including members on probation, in these churches was only 2,011 at the close of the year and 290 less than at the beginning, it will be seen that the contributions averaged just about Rs 50 a member. In view of the fact, that very few of these are in anything like affluent circumstances this may be called very generous giving.

We give below the appointments for the ensuing year of the preachers connected with the S. India Conference of the M. E. Church:

OUR Southern Methodism.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Holly Springs: "I united in matrimony Mr. Samuel Lee and Miss Dolly Sills, Feb. 1, 1879; all of Marshall county."

Rev. I. B. Griffin, Holly Springs circuit: "I have been to my appointment, and my people were glad to have me return to them. The second year commences very fair. On the 8th of January God called away one of our faithful members, Sister Betsey Piogues, aged 43 years, 5 months, 11 days. She had been a member for 20 years, and filled a high place in the church."

TENNESSEE.

Rev. E. Provine, Lebanon: "I have preached on education, and then presented the claims of our church papers to my congregations."

Rev. J. Braden, Nashville: "School is crowded and hands are full of teaching and work. The Lord is with us: three or four conversions and others seeking Him. Dr. Rust preached for us yesterday (26th) a truly characteristic sermon, full of pathos and logic. He is on his way home from South Carolina. The cold weather has interfered very much with church work. McKendric M. E. Church, South, was dedicated yesterday. Dr. Wilson, Missionary Secretary, preached and Bishop McTeiyra read dedicatory services."

The French Cabinet.

Five of the nine Ministers, including M. Waddington, the head of the French Cabinet are Protestants. The population of France is near 37,000,000, and over 35,000,000 are denominated as Roman Catholics. The Cabinet, however, is most acceptable to the people, many of whom are nominally Catholics, with liberal views. Certain church reforms are demanded by the most intelligent men of France, and the Waddington Cabinet will not stand in the way.

The twenty-ninth annual report of the Southwestern Bible Society, incorporated in 1850, has been issued, and we hereby acknowledge the receipt of a copy. The President of the Society is W. H. Foster; agent in charge of Bible House, Rev. J. A. Ivy. The work of last year was restricted by the epidemic, yet 9,475 Bibles and testaments were placed in as many homes. Only six out of more than 100 Protestant churches made any contribution to its treasury; the aggregate of collections being $68 10, individual donations $292 84. The pestilence cut off from their labors Rev. N. W. Wilson and J. J. Irby. Says the corresponding secretary, A. H. Nelson; "God grant that the year 1879 may witness the accomplishment of far greater results than the year 1878, while in His merciful providence He shall spare us the sad experiences of the latter year."

The National Temprance Society has just published Canon Farrar's admirable address, "The Duty of the Church." It is a very able presentation of the duty of the Church of Christ in relation to the greatest obstacle in the pathway of its progress—intemperance, and the drinking customs which lead thereto. Every minister and every temperance worker in the land should have it. It is published uniform with "Talks on Temperance," by the same distinguished author, in a neat pamphlet of 24 pages. Price 10 cents; per dozen, $1. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Read Street, New York.

J. W. E. Bowens, a New Orleans student at the Central Tennessee College, Nashville, writes us: "Am moving on quite lively in the college. We are crowded. Dr. Braden is a Christian gentleman of ability, and understands his work. He is undoubtedly the right man in the right place. He needs no recommendation from me, for his long experience and tried ability is a sufficient guarantee. My work is not easy, but I rejoice in it and am happy thus far."

The New York Times has just issued a Spanish edition for circulation in the West Indies, Mexico and South America. Valuable commercial articles, statistics, and advertisements of American manufactures and business houses are contained in it. This edition is of the usual size of the great daily, and is an enterprise of great value to the country, and we hope a remunerative one to its conductors.

One of our leading men of New England in a private note says: "You and others of our brethren are doing a great work in the South. It seems that you are creating a new base of civilization which will have much to do in regenerating the South."

The Africa Fever.

Rev. R. J. Kellogg, principal of Moravia Seminary is handled very roughly by the terrible fever, more severely than any of the other white men recently sent out. He needs the prayers of the church. In a recent letter to the Secretaries he says. The second term of school was in progress only six weeks, half a term when the National vacation month (Dec) came. Children and parents cried out for the vacation so I gave it, and we are now suspended in the midst of a term of school. All other schools in the country are closed. Indeed I was forced to close. My assistant could not stay any longer. He is clerk in the House of Representatives which is in session now. Another lady teacher resigned to prepare for her wedding Jan. 1. Mr Fever was hold of me the second severe attack lasting nearly six weeks of the term. Extra help had to be put into the school on account of my prostation. Doctor, I have a continual fight with the fever. You have no idea about it. I have blowed no trumpet about it, but it is fever and chills to day feeling a little more like work to morrow, fever and chills intermitting. I work right along fighting it with all my resolution and strength, finally down I go once or twice almost to death's door. I am 40 pounds lighter than when I landed here. But Doctor, I am not discouraged, I am pulling through slowly, I have worked hard in the midst of great physical weakness. Last week Bro. Day, came down St Paul's river, and found me just out of bed from a week's prostration. I could scarcely walk. He insisted I should go home with him I shook with fever and ague all the way up and had to be carried from canoe to the house, I am now feeling better, more like myself. This is the third time I've taken refuge at the Muhlenburg mission to get good nursing and find recuperation. I have been handled the worst of any of the three missionaires, yet now I do not speak of these sufferings complainingly at all. No! no! God forbid, I am ready to fall without a murmur."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Boston Letter.

The Boston University, founded by the munificent charity of Isaac Rich, though yet in its infancy, is growing to large proportions and gains each day in public favor. The Law School stands at the head of this class of institutions, and the Medical School rivals those of New York and Philadelphia. The grade of admission to the College of Liberal Arts ranges above that of any other like institution, in the country. This university possesses several advantages which will tend to make it a universal favorite with our people. It is located in the city of Boston, is open to all classes, rich and poor, male and female, white, black and yellow, and is devoted to all branches of liberal culture.

Uniting so many advantages the institution will be likely to receive frequent donations from the wealthy and benevolent. The city itself will cherish a pride in the university that bears its name. The Trustees have just received notice of a cash gift of $12,000 to form the nucleus of a professorship in the college Liberal Arts, the character of which is not yet made known.

A lady also has given $2000 as the basis of a female professorship in the same college. The Hon. Wm. B. Lawrence, LL.D., of Newport, R. I., offers a prize of $150, to be given to the member of the Law School writing the best essay on "Foreign Judgments." The course of lectures before this School by Hon. Francis Wharton on "The Conflict of Laws" is very able. The famous professors in this university are yet to be more widely known and to send forth in course of time still more famous students.

The last Preacher's Meeting listened to the sermon of Pro. Geo. Prentice, of Wesleyan University, on the life and character of Rev. Ira G. Bidwell. Bro. Bidwell was a native of Connecticut, an able, earnest, eloquent preacher. He leaped almost at a bound to our highest charges and, held his position with ever increasing popularity. With a brilliant and soaring imagination, he joined a genial temper, a warm heart. The great and popular talents with which he was endowed by nature were adorned by the simplicity, the Christian humility of the true gentleman. He had no need to look out for himself. The world was too ready to do him honor; he seemed only desirous to know how it could all be made to contribute to the glory of his divine Master. In his removal the realm of the dead has gained one of the choicest spirits.

The sermon, like all the productions of Prof. Prentice, was able and clear cut. He is totally unlike the friend whose eulogy he pronounced. The one is the man of reason, the other of imagination; the one steps firmly on the solid earth, the other was wont to mount on airy pinions to the depths of the empyrian; the one holds you by the closeness of his statements and reasonings, the other swept you to the third heaven as in a chariot of fire. Prentice is medium height, of full habit and solidly built, with a short neck, and a resolute, determined air as though he were the incarnation of will and afraid of neither men nor devils. With the physical constitution of a bulldog he joins the keen scent and alertness of the airiest greyhound—should life be spared, the Church will hear further from this literary Hercules.

The Atlantic for the month abounds as usual in fresh and racy articles. Literature, art, science, politics and reform get served up in the best form in each number. The Atlantic belongs to the advance school in all these lines. At one period it was given to meddling with religion; but under the later management of Houghton who is a Methodist, it is confined to secular topics. The Atlantic is the magazine for the scholar as Harper's is that of the family.

NAMREHS.

An Answer to the Circular.

"For the first time in the twenty-seven years of the history of this church, we have a monthly missionary concert of prayer, in which some of my people, both male and female, have participated, speaking on the different mission fields. The part of the plan found most difficult to execute is that of No. 1, as our official members will not consent to it. It was so in my former charge. In the last named place I found such stubborn resistance on the part of the richest man in the church, that I was compelled to resort to a sort of festival, to eke out the miserable pittance they had contributed for our benevolent causes. The festival was held in the parsonage, though my wife was ill, our carpets were taken up and the house filled with debris and we achieved success, but those families her named were not represented at the festival. I have here to struggle much in the same way, and only by constant pushing can anything be done. I called a few ladies together to see if they would organize a Woman's Missionary Society, and the wife of one of our most independent men was pledged by her husband before coming that she would not join, and the society was not formed. My dress coat I have worn three years. The boots I have worn this year cost me the sum of one dollar and seventy-five cents, and perhaps I may wear them six months longer. In all other matters myself and wife are practicing on the line of economy, that we may have something to put into the Lord's treasury. We have sold our parlor organ and mortgaged our piano, and so we keep our heads above water."

"I have taken a collection at a monthly concert for 25 years save one, when the official Board ruled it out, but at the annual collection on Missionary Sunday they gave some $400. I give missionary intelligence every month and have for 25 years (save two). Have failed in some points of the Disciplinary Plan—a grand plan, if we could get the whole church to work it. I have (with all my house) set the people an example in missionary giving" every member of my household put something into the box every collection."

The Work in Shreveport.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 4, 1879.

Dear Editor—Now that the Conference year for 1878 has just ended with the appointments for 1879, I thought it would not be out of place to drop you a few words concerning the work at St. Paul Church, Shreveport. On the whole we have had a good time. The church is advancing spiritually as well as in many other things. It is true, 1878 does not exceed 1877's reports, but taking all circumstances into consideration, the results stand equal. We had a series of revival meetings in which 57 souls were converted and baptized; also many infants were baptized, as the conference statistics will show. Late in the year, Dec. 17, 1878, Bishop Haven and Rev. J. C. Hartzell, editor SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE, honored our town and church with a visit that will be remembered some time to come. At night the Bishop gave a lecture upon caste or blue-bloods, but not strictly confined to that subject. It was on the whole splendid and I would have been very glad to have had many of our Southern blue-bloods to hear that and the following lecture by Dr. Hartzell, who, after touching brilliantly and briefly upon his visiting tour up North and West, swung naturally into his favorite theme, the work of the Northern Church in the South and the outlook of the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE. Closing his remarks, Bro. Hartzell offered the SOUTHWESTERN for subscribers, and sung a glorious hymn with the congregation joining chorus. Bro. H. T. O. Abbott, pastor of St. James Chapel, was present with many of his people, so that our coming together had the appearance of a union meeting. Our subscription list amounted to 47 names, some of whom paid full subscription price, others part. On the whole, we had a rousing time. By-the-bye, Bro. Hartzell offered a splendid premium — a picture of John Wesley, father of Methodism.

May the good Lord bless Bishop Haven, Bro. J. C. Hartzell and the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Memorial of I. McDonald.

FRANKLIN, LA. JAN. 9th 1879.

I. McDonald departed this life Nov. 19th 1878, age 73 years. He was born on the Eastern shore of Maryland; raised in this country from eleven years old. He was known as a Baptist preacher in this Parish. One who stood off from every other Church and contended with every one, that no one could be right unless he was a Baptist. When I came here to this charge, after visiting some of the members of my charge who were sick, by reading and explaining the best I could, others spoke to his son, who stayed with his father. He invited me I went, and took with me a little book called the "Seed Thought." I selected some parts I thought suitable for the sick, I sang with him one of the old time hymns, I prayed with him, and he seemed to be happy. The tears fell from the eyes of the old gentleman, which caused his son and the family that was present to rejoice, to see such effect on their father, especially by a Methodist whom he never allowed before to talk with him about religion. From that time I visited him as my own member. I read to him different parts of the Bible. I convinced him that every man who believed in Christ, could be, and that He saith he shall be saved. By reading the Scripture to him I got him to take sacrament one time, and I administered it twice before he died. He sent for me one night about 12 o'clock, told me when he died he wanted me to bury his body. He died on the 19th of November. We took the remains to our church, and held over the body regular service at which the family, wife and two sons and their wives were much pleased. The old man in his bed said to his son, I am fighting for the city.

The Freedwomen.

WORK PROPOSED.—The purpose is to employ Christian women to visit the homes, and churches and Sunday-schools of our colored people, and to labor especially for the salvation of the souls and bodies of the colored women. Mothers' meetings, and meetings for girls and young women will be organized; also sewing-circles, where the simpler duties of household work will be taught and instructions given as to personal habits and tastes. Special efforts will everywhere be made to increase attendance upon our Sunday-schools and churches, and the New Orleans University. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in New Orleans alone fourteen churches among the colored people with a membership of over 8000. This membership represents a population of over 10,000. Our work will be at first in connection with these churches, whose pastors will be our advisers and assistants.

MISSIONARIES' HOME.—We have rented and furnished a house, No. 316½ Second street, where our missionaries will reside, and where meetings can be held whenever desired.

VOLUNTARY HELPERS.—Besides those who are employed and give their whole time to the work, there are many who would be glad to give a part of the Sabbath; or a day or two of each week to this work of the Master. Such will please call at the Home or on Mrs. Hartzell.

OUR PRESENT MISSIONARIES.—At present the following are our missionaries: Mrs. A. M. Ryder, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, of Normal, Illinois; Miss Lizzie Thompson, of Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephens, of New Orleans.

MONEY.—No work of this kind can be carried forward without money. No debts will be made. All money given will be conscientiously applied, and a published report given. We have some cards on which is printed a simple pledge to raise ten dollars in ten cent subscriptions. Send for a card and help us, or if you prefer it send us what you can direct.

THIS COLUMN.—This column of the SOUTHWESTERN has been devoted to our work, and in it will be found the announcement of meetings, extracts from letters, notes of progress, incidents connected with the work, etc.

PRAY FOR US.—This work is as much missionary work as that done in Africa, in India or Mexico.

Feb. 16, 1879.—THE WAY OF THE RIGHTEOUS.

SCRIPTURE.—Ps. 1: 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"But the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."—Pr. 4: 18

TOPIC.—"All her Paths are Peace."—Pr. 3:17.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

The Connection.—The first Psalm has been called the Psalm of Psalms. Like the sermon on the Mount, it opens with a benediction. In the original, the word "blessed" is made the more significant by being in the plural. It might be translated, "Oh, the blessedness." The character of the righteous man is first shown negatively. He is blessed in what he does not do. He walks not in the counsel of the ungodly. He standeth not in the way of sinners. Nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. He who surrenders to evil at all is led from bad to worse. First he walks in the counsel of those who are simply careless transgressor's of God's commands—those of whom it is often said, "Oh, they mean no harm!" Reckless fun is their uppermost thought. They are in for a frolic, without any regard to time, place, or consequences. They are ungodly simply—without God in this world. Such gay companionship, to a young man, is not very seductive. Devotion to duty appears very unlovely beside the enjo[illegible] society pro[illegible] humdrum as [illegible] brings fo[illegible] things which [illegible] with Pleasure, under the [illegible] affording Joy, charm one [illegible] that he most longs for with a transient intoxication. Second, he stands in the way of sinners. That is the next step. He becomes openly associated with wilful transgressors. He becomes an habitual offender against divine things. He is no longer among the thoughtless, but among the reckless and open [illegible] the commands of [illegible] in the way of [illegible] recognize this [illegible] with a sinking [illegible] they know then that [illegible] have come, to love the sake of evil, and to hate [illegible] is good. Third, he [illegible] of the scornful [illegible] attitude that a [illegible] It is the [illegible] of reform. The [illegible] [illegible]

But a man may refrain from evil doing out of a clear perception of the disastrous consequences that result from it, and yet not be a good man at heart. And of the righteous man the Psalmist says: "But his delight is in the law of the Lord." It means something more than that he delights to read the Word of God, though that is included. It means that he delights in the law itself. He takes pleasure in it, because he sees that it is just, because it is to him a mirror in which he can see God himself, and because he loves to obey it. He is not from under its fear. It is not to him a galling yoke. Bad men may obey—only good men can take delight in the law of God. "And in his law doth he meditate day and night." Whatever one takes a delight in he will meditate upon. And one of the sweetest pleasures a Christian has is to meditate upon the Word of God. There is many a one who can say with the Psalmist, "How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" And the writer of that had only the Pentateuch! How much richer we ought to feel than did he! For he had only the law—we have both the law and the gospel. He had only the thundering of Sinai—we have the beatitudes of the Mount.

Now we look at his condition. "And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers (brooks) of water." "Planted"—not placed there wholly of his own volition. The righteousness within him was a seed sown there by the divine hand. He was selected, or, as the Scriptures put it, elected, or chosen, for the large place into which the divine gardener has placed him. In Psalm 92: 12 it is said: "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree; he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon." In Hos. 14: 6, we are told: "His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon." Here are comparisons that are very suggestive of spiritual graces. The palm tree shoots up straight as an arrow toward heaven. It has a crown of leaves at its summit, which it seems to be lifting up as far away from the earth as is possible. It bears fruit all the year round. It grows from within. It flourishes in a desert, just where one would not expect any tree to grow. The secret of its fresh green leaves in such a place is that its roots go down until they find water, penetrating sometimes for a hundred feet below the surface sand. Now apply every item of that to the Christian and his life, and see how perfect in every particular is the correspondence! And, besides all that, he has the strength of the cedars of Lebanon, and the beauty and use of the olive tree.

Fruitfulness is required by the heavenly gardener. "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." And the fruit of the Spirit is: "Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." These he brings forth in due season. "His leaf, also, shall not wither." "Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." "All things work together for good to them that love God."

Lost (4-5) "The ungodly are not so." He walks in the counsel of those who are like to himself. He stands in the way of sinners, etc. He takes no delight in the law of the Lord. Instead of meditating in that, he puts it far away from him. He is unlike the tree that is planted by the brooks of water; for he has nothing to sustain him when the outward sources of his comfort fail him, and nothing that he does ever prospers.

We also have here the character of the sinner weighed. They are "like the chaff which the wind driveth away"—light, frivolous, without substance—worthless to themselves and to any one else. They impede and hurt the growth of the good wheat—are a vexation in God's husbandry.

"Therefore, the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous." It is because of their character that the ungodly shall not be able to meet the tests of that awful day. The chaff dooms itself to fire. It is fit for nothing else. The husbandman is always anxious to save everything that is worth saving in his harvests. He destroys nothing of value. The tares and the wheat are mixed here in this world, and often it is impossible to tell the one from the other, but the time is coming when they will be separated. "Let them," says the divine husbandman; "grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, "Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn."

And the surety that we have that this judgment will be just is, that "the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous." His eye never for a moment is off from his children. "The Lord knoweth"—what a comfort that is to many a burdened heart! He knoweth them that are his. Christ, the Good Shepherd, not only knows his sheep, but also is known of them. The issue of the judgment day are knowingly settled here. "But the way of the ungodly shall perish."

Memoir of Dora E. Cassele.

Why weep? a Christian kneels at God's own throne;
Earth mourns her dead, but Heaven claims its own.

DIED.—In the full triumph of faith, in New Orleans, Oct. 1?, 1878, Dora E. Casselo, aged 25, native of Baton Rouge, wife of John W. Bowie, and daughter of Henry A. Cassele and Lucy A. Reed.

Childlike faith in God and unbounded love to the Savior, was so beautifully exemplified in the death of our beloved sister, that we cannot refrain from giving some of her dying words as an encouragement to those who are enlisted in God's army and are fighting the battle of good and evil: "I have a house not made with hands but eternal in the Heavens. One peep in Glory, will pay me for all my suffering here. Mother and Husband you have done all you can for me and the Lord will do the balance. I wish I could show you what I see and in what a mysterious way God works his wonders. I am so happy; some one help me praise my God. If I had the wings of morning I would fly to my Jesus on high. Ma! do you know how I feel this morning! I feel as if I had been a long tedious journey and had just got to the place of Rest—resting from pain, resting from labors and the cares of the world—resting from everything. My bed is so sweet! I never laid in such a comfortable bed in all my life before. How happy is every child of Grace, that knows his sin is forgiven.

"Servent of God, well done,
The glorious warfare past,
The battle is fought—the victory won,
And thou art crowned at last."

I have never given up my sword, nor laid my armor down. I have always fought my battles on my knees. God has been my Captain. There is not a veil between me and my God.

My Savior has been here and he says he is coming again and when he comes, he will take me to himself. You ask me who will go with me across Jordan? Why, my Savior, my Almighty-Friend. He says he will go with me, he'll bear me conqueror through. He says, even he has fought my battles in this world and he will go with me to the end."

I herewith take the opportunity of thanking the "Harmonious Society" for their attention during my daughter's illness, and for their generosity as evinced at her funeral—no expense was spared—no kindness wanting.

New Publications.

The Advocate of Christian Holiness for February is received.

The third annual report of John Hopkins University, Baltimore, was received from the Educational Bureau, Washington.

The Irish World and American Industrial Liberator is a large weekly, devoted to topics indicated by its title. Patrick Ford, publisher, New York. It is a volume of much that is trashy, with much that is good, with illustrations.

The South is a 24 page monthly, quarto form, published in New York, and devoted to Southern and Southwestern progress. The January number began its sixteenth volume. Terms, $1 50 per year.

Godey's Lady's Book for March is at hand. The subscription price was reduced recently from $3 to $2 a year. L. A. Godey, who published it for 47 years, closed his connection in December last, and sold to a company. Its stories and fashion plates are of a fair order.

"Beware of Strong Drink" is the title of a New Temperance Concert Exercise published by the National Temperance Society, written by Mrs. E. H. Thompson, and adapted for use by Sunday-schools, juvenile organizations, etc. Price six cents each; 60 cents per dozen. Send for it. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Read Street, New York.

The International Review for February has an article on "English and American Painting at Paris, 1878," by P. G. Hamerton; "Gas Stock," by Prof. John Trowbridge; "The Birth of the Commune," by J. H. Diss DeBar; "Recollections of Mazzinis' Views of Russia and the East," conclusion, by Karl Blind; "An American Wedge," by Edwin C. Taylor; "Robert Browning," by George Barnet Smith; "Expressions of Emotions on the Human Countenance," by Prof. H. Calderwood. And an outline of the literary movement in England, France and Germany.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine improves with age; and Editor Deems seems determined that it shall be the Household Magazine of America, par excellence. The contents are by no means of a sombre character, but are peculiary bright and cheerful; the pages teeming with pleasing, entertaining and highly edifying literature. The present number possesses some attractive features; the opening paper on "The Island World of the Pacific," by Byron A. Brooks, embraces a most interesting account of the social and moral condition of the Sandwich Island Society, Samoa, and Fiji Islands before the introduction of Christianity. Among other descriptive articles are "Street Scenes in Madrid," "Funeral Procession in the Caucasus," "The Convent of La Rabida," etc., etc. The serial story, interesting; a new one is shortly to be commenced, entitled "Little Hinges." There are several short stories by popular writers; "Thirteen Hundred Years Ago," by Mrs. J. J. Hussey, and Andrew Fordham's Second notable. New Books.

AMERICAN AUTHORS. By David J. Hill, Sheldon & Company, New York. New Orleans: J. C. Eyrich, 130 Canal street.

This is the first of a series of personal, literary, and anecdotal biographies for popular reading, and is handsomely bound with a steel portrait. The series will include several of America's most noted authors. Each volume will give the life of one author. We congratulate the publishers on this plan of bringing before the public in a cheap and attractive form the life portraitures of the authors who have reflected glory upon the American name. These books should have wide sale and no doubt will.

Theological students reason that if there be counterfeit money, there must be genuine; so, if there be infidels, there must be christians. If this be true of money and religion, will not the same rule apply to "put up" medicine? Do not the cheap and worthless nostrums prove that there are genuine and meritorious "put up" medicines? The great popularity of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has resulted in the manufacture of many shoddy alterative and tonic remedies, but one after another these have disappeared, the proprietors having found that, no matter how loud they advertise, success depends upon merit. In South America, as well as in this country, the Discovery is the standard remedy for all scrofulous and eruptive diseases. It acts promptly on the stomach, liver, and blood, toning up, regulating, and purifying the system. It speedily allays all bronchial irritation, and cures the most stubborn cough or cold in half the time required by any other remedy.

Doctors Gave Him Up.

"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?"

"I assure you, it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters, and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!"

"Well-a-day! If that is so, I will go this minute and get some for my poor George. I know hops are good."

Compound Oxygen.

Is especially valuable where, from any cause, there exists great physical and nervous exhaustion. All convalescents [illegible] it just the help they need for full and quick recovery; because it acts as a revitalizer. A Treatise on "Compound Oxygen," containing a large number of testimonials to most remarkable cures, will be sent free by mail. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1112 Girad St., Phila., Pa.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.
2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:

SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 11 00

SILVER PLATE. 10 inches wide, $1 00

SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL, $7 00.

These prices are the Manufactures lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country

SILVER GOBLET. 1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.
2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.
3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total 18 50.
4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.
5. To any Church sending us Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

☞NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us. This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceeding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregation where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

☞Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.
2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.
3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment; the preacher gets his commission; the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.
4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

SOWING AND PRAYING.

Sow, sow, sow;
Ever keep on sowing;
God will cause the seed to grow
Faster than your knowing.
Nothing e'er was sown in vain,
If, His voice obeying,
You look upward for the rain,
And falter not in praying.

Pray, pray, pray;
Ever keep on praying;
In the brightest, darkest day,
Still His voice obeying.
Never from the gates of prayer
Turn with doubting sorrow;
For the One who standeth there
May answer thee—to-morrow.

Pussy in History.

It was during the stormy times in England, when the wars of York and Lancaster were ranging, that Sir Thomas Wyatt, a fierce Lancastrian, was confined in one of the dismal dungeons of the Tower of London.

Sir Thomas was not very comfortable, as you may suppose. He was cold and hungry. One day, as he sat there in his loneliness and misery, a cat made its appearance in his cell. He took the animal and warmed his numb fingers in her soft fur, and laid her in his breast, where she cuddled, quite delighted with this kind treatment. Next day pussy came again, and, wonderful to tell, carried in her mouth a pigeon, which she laid at the prisoner's feet.

The next time the jailor came to visit him, Sir Thomas complained of his hard fare, and begged for some meat. His request was gruffly refused.

"If I provide the game, will you dress it for me?" inquired the old knight.

Humorous.

A little girl's idea of a plane—a thing that scrubs snakes out of boards.

When a man has no bills against him he feels that he belongs to the no-bility.

There is no change this season in the style of ladies' noses. Some of them will remain turned up as usual.

An Iowa school mistress was discharged because she stood on her head to amuse the children.

That was a very greedy boy who took the measles from his little sister; they were the only measles she ever had.

"Duty before pleasure," as the custom-house officer said when he lighted upon some smuggled tobacco.

It was observed of a deceased lawyer that he had left but few effects. To which a lady remarked that "he had but few causes."

The George Washington sociable of men who could not tell lies, was abandoned. The only guests who came were two insurance agents.

"Isn't your husband a little bald?" asked one lady of another, in a store, recently. "There isn't a bald hair in his head," was the hasty reply of the wife.

A little girl has a present of rabbits. When she goes to bed she prays, "O God, we thank thee specially for the wabbits—all but the cage: we had that before."

"My lord," began a pompous young barrister, "it is written in the book of nature—" "On what page, sir—on what page?" interrupted the judge, with pen in hand.

What is the difference between a school boy studying his lessons and a farmer watching his cows? One is stocking his mind, the other minding his stock.

A Massachusetts cow returned to the water-trough one evening with a memorandum pinned to her horn: "Enclosed find six cents for one quart of milk taken this forenoon.

I was showing my watch to my nephew, who was about six years old. He pointed to the face of the dial and said, "Why, there is another little watch!" I said, "that is called the second hand." He tossed his head contemptuously, and walked off, saying, "I wouldn't own a second-hand watch."

The colored people held a meeting a few days ago, in Caldwell county, N. C., to pray for rain. One brother was called upon who prayed after this manner: "O Lord God! us poor niggers is perishing dis year, an' ef you don't gib us rain we will perish next year, too. So, good Lord, gib us rain. Don't gib us one of dese little slippery-slappies, but do, good Lord, gib us one ob dem gulley-washers and trash-movers."—Ex.

A person more remarkable for inquisitiveness than good breeding—one of those who, devoid of delicacy and reckless of rebuff, pry into every thing—took the liberty to question Alexander Dumas rather closely concerning his genealogical tree: "You are a quadroon, Mr. Dumas?" he began. "I am, sir," replied Mr. Dumas, who had seen enough not to be ashamed of a descent he could not conceal. "And your father?" "Was a mulatto." "And your grandfather?" "A negro," hastily answered the dramatist, whose patience was wanting. "And may I inquire what your great-grandfather was?" "An ape, sir!" thundered Dumas, with a fierceness that made his impertinent interrogator shrink into the smallest possible compass—"An ape, sir! My pedigree commences where yours terminates."—Chamber's Journal.

It is a dreary sensation to find one's self wholly forgotten by mere acquaintances; but to find that we have no place in the thoughts of those we love, seems in a certain sense like being annihilated.

"It is a question whether half of our people really ever set themselves to solve the problem of just how to get the most real comfort and satisfaction out of the means at their command."—Evangelist.

The man or woman whom excessive caution holds back from striking the anvil with earnest endeavor, is poor and cowardly of purpose.

Beauty may attract love at first, but it alone cannot retain affection. It is the sterling qualities of the heart and mind that win in the long run.

WORM SPECIFIC

OR

VERMIFUGE.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eye-lid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,

DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant.

The genuine DR. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrapper.

DR. C. McLANE'S

Dr. J. M. Howe's Inhaling Tube!

—AND—

COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 tf.

ANTI-FAT

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week. In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen:—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN'S drug store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from [illegible] pounds to 192 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, SMITH, DOOLITTLE & SMITH, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks, and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N. Y., write: "TO THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen,—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp. WOMAN

By an immense practice at the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, having treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman, I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and positive remedy for these diseases.

To designate this natural specific, I have named it

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon personal observation. I have, while witnessing its positive results in the special diseases incident to the organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. On its merits, as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. (For conditions, see pamphlet wrapping bottle.)

The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhœa, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing-down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, and Female Weakness. I do not extol this medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.

Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book of over 900 pages, sent post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.

Favorite Prescription sold by Druggists.

[illegible] THE PLAGUE.

blood; putrid inflammation of the lungs; fetid pestiferous breath and expectoration of blood. When it spread to Europe, fever evacuation of blood, and pulmonary carbuncles proved mortal before other symptoms had been declared. In well-nigh all instances death ensued in two or three days after attack. Spots and tumors were the seals of doom which medical skill had no power to avert and many sufferers anticipated by suicide.

The rise and progress of the plague in the fourteenth century have not been clearly or consistently related; but there seems to be no doubt that it originated in China. There is also concurrent testimony that the co-operating causes existed and acted at least 15 years before any outbreak in Europe, and are to be sought as far back as 1333, in a series of mighty convulsions of nature which continued for 26 years to affect and derange the normal conditions of animal and vegetable life. The precise date of the beginning of the plague in China is unknown; but from 1333 to 1349 that country suffered fearfully from droughts, famine floods, swarms of locusts, and earthquakes that overthrew cities and leveled mountains, and these catastrophes were folllowed by the scourge. At the same time the order of things seemed to be reversed in Europe. Thunder-storms occurred in midwinter, ice formed in summer, tornados swept regions that had never felt them before, volcanoes, long thought extinct, blazed with fury, and water spouts rose in placid seas.

The mortality was hideous in the East and West, and it is believed that the great activity of the globe accompanied by decomposition of vast organic masses, myriads of locusts, bodies of brutes and men, produced some change in the atmosphere hostile to life. It is said that, in the progress of the plague westward, the impure and poisoned air was traceable as it moved on laden with pestilence and death. A writer of the time remarks: "A dense, awful fog was seen in the heavens rising in the East, and descending upon Italy." The inhabitants of Europe are also thought to have been predisposed to the pest partly from scarcity, and partly from the inadequate modes of living. The theory is very plausible that it sprang directly from atmospheric poison, acting on the respiratory organs, which were the first to be attacked. Still, while impure air and defective physical conditions may have fed the pestilence largely, it doubtless owed its extension almost entirely to infection and contagion. It seems that it had appeared in Europe in milder form in 1342; but it had come to an end, and there is little reason to hold, as has been held, that it had in the interval remained latent until new causes had requickened it six years later. The invasion of 1348 may be distinctly tracked in its advance from China along the caravan routes toward the West. The northern coast of the Black Sea sent the plague by contagion to Constantinople; thence in the same way it reached the ports of Italy, and was so diffused throughout the remainder of Europe. Its progress may be followed through Germany and France to England, whence it was transmitted to Sweden. Three years elapsed from its appearance in Constantinople until it crept by a great circle to the Russian territories; and the fact of its contagious communication has started the speculation whether by rigid quarantine it might not have been excluded altogether from Europe. Such rules have now long been enforced at many points to prevent introduction into the West of the plagues of the Orient, but they have been insufficient in the present instance to keep it out of Russia.

APPALLING HORRORS.

The mortality, though no portion estimate can be made in the absence of statistics, was prodigious [illegible] terrifying. In China [illegible] 13,000,000 persons are asserted to have died, and in other parts [illegible] East nearly 24,000,000 more. In Europe details were more exact. [illegible] 100,000 souls perished, [illegible] 15 Continental cities about [illegible] Germany lost, it is calculated [illegible] and Italy one-half [illegible] population. It is within [illegible] in all Europe [illegible] were [illegible] Africa suffer[illegible] and it is believed [illegible] fully [illegible] human beings from ravages of the plague. The mere facts are appalling to the imagination; the scenes of suffering are scarcely credible. Death was everywhere; it seemed to have usurped the place of life. All animal life was menaced; birds, beasts, men, women and children, hosts of members of every nationality, savages, scholars, peasants, priests, Princes, Kings, of every creed, clime and race, were swept from the face of earth. Rivers were consecrated to receive corpses for which none dared to perform the rites of burial; bodies were cast by thousands into huge pits dug for the purpose. Death stalked over sea as well as over land. The entire crews of vessels were killed by the poison-breath that infested the globe. Ships freighted with putrefying bodies drifted aimlessly and hideously on the Mediterranean, Black and North Seas—not a human creature alive anywhere — and spread contagion on the shores whither the winds or tides had driven them. Hope, peace, content, law, order, affection, naturalness, humanity seemed never to have been. Ancient custom and the need of companionship were for the time obliterated; all was death, agony, and despair, and by these the infected world appeared to be exclusively and shudderingly possessed.

The moral effects of the plague were not less dreadful than its physical destruction. Thousands perished from fear, which dissolved among the living all ties of kindred, all bonds of fellowship, all links of sympathy. Children fled from their polluted parents; mothers deserted their helpless infants; husbands and lovers left their wives and mistresses to die howling and alone. Terror generated superstition; the virtuous and vicious alike made distracted and distracting appeals to a God who, they imagined, had sent the pestilence to punish them for manifold sins. Crowds rushed to sacrifice their worldly goods to the Church; franaticism swelled on every hand; women screamed to heaven for mercy; men tore out their hair and scourged themselves until they had fainted from loss of blood, that they might propitiate a deity whom they actually believed they had enraged. This world was mad with fright, suffering, and superstition, and thousands who had tried to stay the pestilence with prayer declared that God was dead, and hell had begun on earth.

The horrors of the time were further heightened by cruel persecutions against the Jews, who had been accused of poisoning the public wells, this being in popular belief the cause of the pestilence. The people rose in mad fury to exterminate the Hebrew race, and slaughtered them by tens of thousands. In the inconsiderable City of Mentz (Germany) alone, near 15,000 fell victims to the public wrath. They were killed with steel and club, hanged, drowned, burned, and often barbarously put to death by every kind of torture. In numberless instances they took their own lives in masses to avoid cruelties of the mob, and in many communities every man, woman, and child was sacrificed to insensate rage.

To aggravate the scourge, the panic about poison caused the wells to be closed. The people were afraid to touch water, and those who escaped the plague perished of thirst and terror. Society, rude at best in that day, was totally disorganized, and such means as might have been adopted to prevent or mitigate the stupendous evil were either neglected or unthought of, in the derangement and frenzy that possessed everybody from the highest to the lowest. The influence of the plague and its desolation were so overwhelming that it frequently destroyed all honesty and principle among its survivors. Many were rendered callous, and many took advantage of the universal horror to indulge their worst passions, to plunder, murder and perpetrate the most revolting crimes.

OPINIONS AS TO ITS CAUSE.

The plague has again and again visited Western Europe since the fourteenth century, but never has it been so baleful as then, continued so long, or been attended with such incidental horrors. Previous to its last outbreak, in 1665, it invaded England, according to the celebrated physician, Sydenham, every 30 or 40 years. Although its symptoms and virulence have varied at different times, its general features have been sufficiently alike to prove that it is always the same terrible disease. Great difference of opinion still exists as to its cause. Some authorities maintain that it is exclusively propagated by a peculiar contagion; others contend, while admitting its contagiousness, that it may also be engendered spontaneously by endemic or epidemic influences; others again deny its contagiousness altogether, and assert that it arises from local or epidemic causes. Intelligent opinion favors the second of these views, and there is a mass of sound evidence to sustain it. Whatever the cause, temperance seems to affect it favorably. In the tropics it is unknown, and the cold of northern climates has been observed to check its ravages. In Europe it has been most fatal during Summer and Autum, especially in September. Thus, in London in 1665 the deaths from the pestilence were, in June 590; in July, 4,129; in August, 20,046; in September, 26,230; in October, 14,373; in November, 3,449, while in December they fell below 1,000. The precise nature of the distemper is still unknown. A poison whose properties evade all chemical and microscopic detection is absorbed into the system, and alters at once, or after a brief period of incubation, the quality of the blood and the condition of the tissues.

Christ's Rule of Revenge, and that of Confucius.

"But I say unto you, love your enemies—do good to them that hate you and pray for them that despitefully use and persecute you." This is the golden saying of the Prince of Peace.

"Thou shalt not live under the same heaven with the murderer of thy father or thy master," says Confucius the teacher of four hundred millions of men. So likewise taught Moses the law-giver of the Hebrews. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy." "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

Blood and iron, hatred and revenge to one's enemy, taught Moses and Confucius. Forgiveness and mercy taught Christ the son of God.

Yet in Japan, where texts from Confucius' writings are inscribed on wall and silken scroll, and book and cup, and cut into the steel of sword blades, there were no cities of refuge, as in the old Hebrew commonwealths. The murderer, if not instantly killed, was pursued and hunted down until slain. It the children of the dead man were but infants, the duty of revenge was taught them at the breast. Kataki-Uchi (vengeance on the murderer) was the daily theme for years; while all the time from the age of ten the boy practiced swordmanship and spear exercise. At eighteen he sallied forth in disguise, but with girded sword, to stain his bright blade in the murderer's bloyd.

If the children were girls, they too were trained for the supreme duty of revenge. They were taught to handle the spear, and the sickle and chain which skilfully thrown around an enemy's neck would sever the jugular vein. Or they practiced shuriken (thowing flat pieces of steel sharpened at one end like arrow-heads) to put the eyes out and penetrate to the brain.

Religion and Workingmen.

Christianity is the only system that cares for the poor. There are men sometimes who have control over masses of people and tell them that Christianity is not the poor man's friend. I tell you that what religion has done to civilize this earth has been by being the poor man's friend. Jesus, the great Captain of our salvation came from above and laid Himself down beside us—His great heart of sympathy besides our heart. He came down, and you cannot find a man on earth poorer than He was. He had not where to lay His head and from that platform of lowliness, down in the midst of that society, he lays the arms of his humanity beneath the lowest of the low and the poorest of the poor, and then rising in the majesty of dominion, He raises mankind up to the throne of God. Blessed be God for such a Savior, for such a King of salvation, even Jesus Christ the Lord. Now that system cannot fail which binds itself to humanity.—Bishop Simpson.

Bishop Merrill, of the Methodist Church, has appointed the Rev. C. W. Drees, now in Mexico, to the superintendency of all Methodist missions in that country.

Delivery of the Sermon.

From Bishop Simpson's sixth Yale lecture we make the following extract:

The two great requisites for extempore speaking are a command of language and self-possession. This command of language may be best gained in two ways: first, by the practice of translating aloud, especially the reading of a work in company written in some foreign language. This was recommended strongly by Pitt and Macaulay, and has, in some form, been practiced by many eminent writers and speakers. Dr. Franklin was accustomed to read one of Addison's essays, and holding the ideas in his mind, to write them out in his own language and then compare what he had written with the original. Without any design as to influence on my future life, I acquired the habit, when a youth, of reading aloud to my friends from books in any language that I was studying. Passages which I found to be either very beautiful or very interesting were selected. Especially was this the case with the writings of Xenophon, the orations of Demosthenes, Virgil's "Æneid," and Fenelon's "Telemachus." It was also my practice to read in family worship from the original language of the Bible. This practice, though not adopted for that purpose, gave me a greater command of the language; but it may not have made me quite so familiar with the idiomatic structure of other languages. At least, I never advanced as far as the sophomore who descanting upon the subject of Latin, said he could think better in Latin. (Laughter.) I confess that during all my life my thinking has been in English. Another method is to hold personal religious conversation with individuals. The process of explaining to one attentive mind some passage of Scripture, presenting some motive or urging to action, imparts a readiness of language which will be of great service in the pulpit. There is philosophy, as well as piety, in visiting those who are sick and in prison, and in going out into the highways and hedges and compelling men to come to the feast of love.

To acquire choiceness and beauty of language some have recommended the reading of some poet who has written on religious themes such as Milton—for half an hour before entering the pulpit. I would greatly prefer, however, spending that period in reading the words of Jesus or of the inspired penmen.

Self-possession can be best gained by having the mind filled with thoughts of the wonderful message about to be delivered, and the responsibility connected with it. If one feels that God is present, and that the words are spoken for Him, the timidity arising from the presence of the audience will vanish. It is well, also not to keep in mind the distinguished men who may chance to be present; but to speak for the benefit of the masses. Luther said he did not speak for the doctors or the professors; but for the mass of the working-people who were before him. Young men are prone to ask themselves: 'What will this doctor or that judge or this professor say?' Their preaching will almost insensibly be formed to gain their approval. Now let me whisper to you two things, young gentlemen. First, as a general rule, distinguished politicians are very poor judges of preaching. They study almost everything else more than their Bibles. Like a former governor of Texas, who, congratulating the Legislature upon the hopeful prospect before the country, said: "To use the language of Scripture, 'Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious by the summer's sun.'" (Laughter.) The other thing I would whisper to you is this: The most learned and distinguished men, especially in theology, are the most lenient critics. If your aim is to do good, you will have no kindlier hearers. They know the difficulties of speaking, and are ready to make every proper allowance. They do not expect you to make sermons for them. So far as captious and unkind criticism is concerned, I would much rather speak before your faculty than before a class of recently initiated freshmen. (Laughter.)

You will never attain to full self-possession in the pulpit without thorough self abnegation. You must become absorbed in your glorious work for Christ. You must remember that you are polishing gems for Him; that you are building a temple for His glory. This intensity of feeling, this conception of the grandeur of your work will make your memory more attentive and yourself less prominent.

The question then arises: "Shall not the mind be occupied with choice of words while speaking?" I answer: Not directly. The words will come in the height of your intense feeling; but they will be the result of your previous discipline. If you should chance to stumble, do not go back; but press on, following Whitefield's rule—"never to correct anything unless it was wicked."

The same in regard to gesticulation. Never try to make a gesture. Those only are natural which come of themselves. The man who is full of the subject, whose heart is burning for utterance, if his feelings are not restrained, will generally gesticulate earnestly. In gesticulation, also, the discipline must be preparatory. Elocution should be studied previously; but no thought should be bestowed upon it at the moment. I know we are told that actors study every word and practice every gesture before a glass; and why should not the minister? The difference is the minister is original. He gives expression in his own words and to his own feellings. He has simply to be true to himself. The actor is not thinking of himself. He has no thoughts and feelings of his own. He familiarizes himself with the thoughts of others through their words, and he imitates the expression of their feelings through his actions. His highest glory is to speak and act just as they are supposed to have spoken and acted. All his study and all his preparation bring him just to the point where the minister starts, if his heart be full of his subject and if he feels his deep responsibility. While I earnestly recommend the study of elocution as a preparatory discipline, I once more caution you against imitation. Improve your own voice, and do not try to imitate the voice of another. I have known some young ministers who have lost their sprightliness and vigor of utterance. Students from different schools of theology, colleges and universities can frequently be distinguished from each other by the manner of intonation acquired in their elocutionary exercises.

For myself, I never had any difficulty in finding suitable language to express my thoughts. My great anxiety to reach some hearts early led me to brave, in great measure, the presence of men of superior intellect and commanding position. My voice seemed in every way unfit for public speaking. It was weak and the pitch was high. By close application to study I had become stooped. My lungs were weak, and I was troubled with a cough. I wore plasters for years, and many of my friends feared that I was going into consumption: I spoke because I felt that I must speak. At the end of my first year my physician urged me to desist from preaching. I was junior preacher on a circuit, in which I preached twenty-eight times to the round. I took up also six additional appointments, making thirty-four. One of these appointments was in a small village, and was in the sitting-room of a house belonging to a humble widow. It would not seat more than twenty people. On my second and last visit to that place I was informed that a physician there, who was an infidel, desired to see me, as he thought he might be of some service by directing me as to my health. I called, and he said he had heard that I was in feeble health, and gave me some simple suggestions. I was pleased with his general advice, and at the close of the interview I asked him in regard to my continuing to preach. He answered that as to the religious question he had nothing to say; but simply as a physician he would recommend me to ride eight or ten miles and preach once every day. (Laughter.) The suggestion harmonized with my own feelings, and I resolved to follow it; and the only request I ever made for any appointment was that, on account of my weak lungs, I might be placed where I could ride eight or ten miles and preach once every day. My presiding elder promised me his full concurrence and heartiest support; but I was sent to the city of Pittsburgh, with its smoke and dust, right in the midst of the time when the Asiatic cholera was prevailing there. My friends were alarmed at my going there; but I went. My health was preserved by careful attention to food and exercise, and by keeping regular hours. My voice gradually strengthened, and, though never musical, I had power to address the largest audiences. My conviction to-day is that if I had not continued to preach I should, in all probability, have fallen an early victim to bronchial or pulmonary disease. Often, when called to face danger, that passage has seemed to ring in my ears: "He that will save his life shall lose it; and he that will lose his life for My sake, the same shall save it." (Applause.)

The Reformers in Congress.

Here are a few items of individual purchases of members of Congress, charged to the contingent fund of the house, and paid for by the people of the United States:

One Homer's Illiad for W. A. Phillips, of Kansas	$5 00
One razor and equipments for L. F. Watson, of Pennsylvania	5 00
One diary for Hendrick B. Wright, of Pennsylvania	70
One silica slate for W. J. Bacon, of New York	75
One opera glass for W. S. Stenger, of Pennsylvania	12 00
One visiting list for Thomas Ewing, of Ohio	1 00
One photograph album for A. W. Cutler.	2 50
One opera glass for C. E. Hooker, of Mississippi	10 00
One "Baby Opera" for W. J. Bacon, of New York	80
One "Songs for the Sanctuary" for W. J. Bacon, of New York	3 00

Says the N. Y. Graphic: "Under the title of 'disbursements for stationery' appear some interesting items, of which the following are examples: Twenty dozen 'magic pencils,' at $81 60 per dozen; magic pearl pencil's diamond, at $102 per dozen; one dozen ivory desks at $23 80 each. Solomons & Chapman present a bill for ninety-three dozen knives, or four knives each for every member of Congress. Corkscrews were also purchased to the extent of about thirty dozen, and it is difficult to imagine what a congressman wants of a corkscrew. Several purchases of "champagne knives" were made and "cork holders" were bought by the dozen. About forty dozen diaries are accounted for—two for each member. Fans were purchased by the dozen, and among a lot of other items appear about 700 pocket-books. Scrap books and pocket compasses are among the other congressional supplies as well as about forty traveling bags."

The Battle in South Africa.

On the 21st of January, a British column, consisting of a portion of the 24th regiment, a battery of artillery and 600 native auxilliaries were utterly annihilated near Tugela river, by 20,000 Zulus, who captured a valuable convoy of 102 wagons, 1000 oxen, two cannon, 400 shot and steel, 1000 rifles, 25-000 pounds ammunition, 60,000 pounds of provisions, and the colors of the 24th regiment. It is estimated 5000 Zulus were killed and wounded in the battle.

Among the killed on the British side are two majors, four captains, twelve lieutenants and the quartermaster of the 24th regiment, two captains of the royal artillery, a colonel, captain, four lieutenants and the surgeon major of engineers besides twenty-one other British officers, commanding the levies. Seven attacks subsequently by the Zulus have been repulsed, and the colony is now somewhat recovering from the utter consternation which at first prevailed. Natal, however, is in great danger, and disturbances are feared in Pongolard.

Lord Cholmsford, commander of the expedition, has been forced to retire in consequence of the defeat. It is estimated that five hundred soldiers were killed, besides the officers enumerated above. Gov. Sir Bartle Frere has sent appeals to England and the Mauritius for reinforcements. The mail steamer for England was dispatched a day earlier than usual, with a request for six regiments of infantry and a brigade of calvary.

Theebaw, the new King of Burmah, was educated by an English missionary, and has chosen for his Prime Minister a man who has visited both England and France. The new monarch signalized his accession by abolishing, in so far as foreigners are concerned, the rule of the court which compelled every one to remove his shoes in the royal presence.

How strange it is that those who have so little music in their own lives should be the ones to make music for others; and yet is it not true to many of us that in the whole circle of our friends the life which makes the most happiness and music for others is the one into which there comes the most suffering and pain!—*J. The New Hymnal.

The Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences at their late sessions, made it the duty of every preacher having charge of a station or circuit to see that their pulpits were supplied with a New Hymnal, and all were to use their influence in having the people supply themselves with Hymnals and to use them in the public congregation and in social meetings.

We are now prepared to supply the following styles of the Hymnal at the prices named. Our terms are cash before sending, or we will send by express C. O. D. Specimen copies sent by mail on receipt of price.

The Laboring Classes of England.

The wide spread distress among the laboring classes of England has attracted general attention. Many enquiries naturally arise as to the cause of this distress. We propose just to glance at one of the sources of these troubles. This is foreign competition. An illustration of this, recently brought out in a letter of Col. Wrottesley, is deeply interesting to Americans. The Col. observed the locks at the War Office are of American manufacture. His request for an explanation of the circumstance drew from the contractor the startling statement that the "old handicrafts in metal are becoming obsolete" and "that the Americans have obtained a start of us by being the first to recognize that those manufactures which, like guns, time-pieces and locks, consist of a number of small parts, exact counterparts of one another, can be produced at a greatly reduced cost and that unless our manufacturers bestir themselves the Americans will completely command the markets of Europe." The contractor thinks, however, that the distress prevailing in many of the manufacturing districts is attributable to many causes besides foreign competition which "would not be possible if our masters and men were to study each other's interests more;" and he adds, "trade would be much better than it is if the leaders of trades unions were to employ their funds in educating the men technically or in relieving disabled members, instead of wasting their resources in fighting their masters." He gives many painful instances of the drunkenness, improvidence and ignorance of workmen; and complains of their short hours and long wages and their antipathy to the use of machinery. He also blames the obtuseness of the masters who prefer to reproduce the same class of goods from generation to generation instead of adapting themselves to the advancing ideas of the age." He relates the following anecdote from the iron districts. "An iron-master in Belton told me a year or two ago that a large order for hoop iron had been offered him from a Russian source at a certain price; but he could not accept the order, unless his men were prepared to reduce their price. He could not do so himself without giving the men six months notice. He therefore called the men together and stated the case. The men consulted and said let us draw cuts (lots); and they ultimately voted against a reduction. They were then earning $25 to $30 per week. The master told them that the order would go to Belgium and that their obstinate blindness was fast driving the trade out of the country. The men's reply was "We care not. Let the trade go to Belgium; we will follow it there; it will be a bit of a hunting for us." The result is that these men are now living on meal and water and the master whose counsels they set at naught is obliged to take care of their wives and children."

With regard to the lock trade Mr. Hill gives many interesting details, explaining how, by the use of machinery, by the cultivation of intelligence and knowledge by sober and industrious habits and the observance of some other conditions the Americans "have made a breach in our lock trade" while they have almost annihilated Geneva watch trade."

What a valuable commentary this upon education! Skilled labor will make its way everywhere. But the best educated labor must also be united to habits of sobriety and industry or the same distress will prevail here as well as there.

Bishop Haven and his Texas Slanderers.

The following we clip from the Texas Christian Advocate of January 25th. Absence from our office attending Conferences prevented its being noticed before:

AN APPARENTLY WILLFULL MISSTATEMENT BY BISHOP HAVEN.

Bishop Haven — among many other seemingly malicious statements as regards the South generally, and Texas in particular—arraigned our present Governor (Hon. O. M. Roberts) as one who led a party that warned Bishop Janes to leave Bonham, Texas, during one of the political excitements that led to the war between the sections. We saw the article in the Northwestern Christian Advocate. Knowing that it was a false statement, Dr. John clipped it out and forwarded it to Governor Roberts at Austin. The following [illegible] reply:

[illegible], TEXAS, Jan. 29, 1879.

[illegible]

1859, when the transaction happened attempted to be related, and heard about it, and afterwards the whole matter was explained to me by Judge Roberts (most commonly known as "Col. Sam Roberts,") who was a member of President Lamar's cabinet for a time, and who afterwards settled at Bonham at an early day, and engaged in the practice of law. He was educated at West Point. During his whole residence in Texas, for nearly forty years, he was generally regarded as a highly respectable and honorable citizen and a good Christian gentleman. He is now dead. If Bishop Haven had known him, and the motives that prompted him, in leading a party, who peaceably gave Bishop Janes notice to leave Bonham, he surely would not have written as he did about him. He was a man of peace, and what he did was done to preserve it, as can be attested by persons still living at or near Bonham. As to myself, I can truly say that I was never engaged in an act of violence in my life, unless being an officer in the Confederate army should be so regarded.

Respectfully yours, etc.,
O. M. ROBERTS.

Now, we ask Dr. Edwards to drop all prejudice for just one moment and make a sensible decision, to-wit: Keep all productions of Gilbert Haven out of your paper. He is a firebrand and a disgrace to Northern Methodism. We write not in anger. We express our deliberately formed opinion when we say he is not fit to sit at meat with Christian and truthful people.

We accept this letter as conclusive that Bishop Haven was mistaken in the "Judge Roberts" who led the "peaceably" disposed mob, which ordered Bishop Janes and his Conference, to leave Texas in 1859. We published upon the same information the same statement respecting Governor Roberts. The information was received from what was considered reliable sources. Our informants were in error, as to the given name of the man, although they lived in Bonham at the time. The mistake is not in respect to the event, for that occurred; nor in respect to the man's name for that was Judge Roberts, the title by which the present Governor is largely known. But the present Governor of Texas was not the man. We gladly correct the mistake.

But what shall be said of the apology which Governor Roberts offers in his letter for the act of his namesake twenty years ago, in heading a mob to break up and drive from Texas an Annual Conference of Methodist preachers? "Oh but he 'peaceably gave Bishop Janes notice to leave Bonham.'" Exactly. That is the old story. "Peaceably" if you will, but death if you don't. Such is the language and law of mobocracy everywhere. Is there never to come and hour in the South, when her leading men shall have one word of censure or adverse criticism, or even a single regret for any one of the long and terrible catalogue of outrages against civil and religious liberty, committed in the Southern States, in the defense of slavery?

And then what shall be said of a religious journal which will seek to make the impression upon its readers, upon so slight a pretext as the above, that a Christian minister has deliberately lied? The event referred to did occur at the time, in the place, and for the purpose, in the manner, and was brought about by a Judge Roberts, as stated by Bishop Haven. He erred only by substituting the wrong Judge Roberts and his information on this point, as we know, was gained from persons who were in Bonham, at the time, but who had since confounded the two Judge Roberts. The Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate knew all these facts, except the manner of the mistake of substituting one Roberts for another. We pity that editor or any other public man, including Gov. Roberts, and would give but little for their chances of salvation, if they were to be accounted as falsifiers for every mistatement they have made on as good authority. But any man or journal which would so misjudge them, without first giving them a chance to rectify their mistake, would deserve and receive the contempt of every gentleman, no matter what his party, creed or profession. "With what measure ye mete it shall be measured unto you."

As to the advice given the Northwestern, we leave that journal to speak. We only publish it as a specimen of what might be appropriately termed "low down" journalism.

The publishing committee of the New Orleans CHRISTIN ADVOCATE, organ of the M. E. Church South, in this city, has placed the business management of that paper in the hands of Mr. T. G. Lathrop. Mr. Lathrop has for several years been connected with the Southern Methodist book house here and is in every way qualified for his new and responsible work. We congratulate him on his promotion and predict success for him.

The President should veto the anti-Chinese bill as destructive to commerce, and a confession of a want of faith in republican institutions. Not a single reason can be urged against Chinese immigration that warrants so discourteous a treatment of a great nation. The cause of Christianity will suffer from the legislation contemplated to an incalculable extent.

Dreadful Sanitary Condition of New Orleans.

Dr. Joseph Holt, of New Orleans, has just published his special report as sanitary inspector of the Fourth district. It is a document that should be read and lead to sanitary reforms. The condition of his district, one of the fairest and most populous of the city, last summer was "excessively bad." Dr. Holt says it was due to absolute negligence on the part of the authorities and employes, dumping garbage in the street and to fill up lots; and that no provision had been made for cleaning the city by sanitary engineering. The district may be kept tolerably clean by unremitting hard labor on the part of scavengers. There are precisely the same reasons for declaring yellow fever to be the product of human filth, as malaria to be the product of a swamp or marsh.

The privies are dangerous enemies of the public health. There is hardly one in New Orleans but whose contents saturate the ground, and contaminate the soil. Specimens of subsoil water taken from different depths, as low as ninety-five feet, and in different parts of the city, have yielded fifty-three grains to the gallon, products of animal excretion. During wet weather vaults and sinks fill and overflow yards and gutters. Under a sun almost tropical one half the year, this ferments, emitting a most abominable stench.

The Doctor says that in his district there are depressions of the area of a square, where the gutters are lower than their outlets, and become stagnant pools. The necessities of the poor at times are so desperate they are compelled to resort to street gutters for water to be used in cooking, drinking and washing! Many houses are built on lots not filled to the prescribed level, under which are nauseating pools. He demands the enforcement of the ordinance relative to water supply, and an amendment requiring that no promises shall have cisterns of less than 1800 gallons capacity. There are 84 cow stables which should be removed to the rear of the city, and many mud hovels not fit for habitation.

"I, myself, making an inspection, witnessed the burial of a corpse. The grave was prepared by uncovering a coffin, opening it, raking the bones together and throwing them out, breaking up and prizing out the old coffin, and depositing the new in the mould of the former. When laid in its uncertain resting-place the lid of the box, like of the one preceding, was two inches below the surface of the earth, to hide it, the earth formerly removed was piled upon the coffin in a mound about two feet high. In this covering I counted the skulls of three former occupants, besides observing other bones innumerable. So filled with bones was the earth as to make the use of the spade extremely difficult. Another coffin lid, warped by the sun, displayed in hideous reality the body a poor wretch who had died a few months before; the stench was disgustingly perceptible. The whole surface of the ground was strewn with ribs and small bones, like pebbles upon the hills. Here and there huge thigh-bones served as head and foot stones to the unknown dead. The citizens living in the vicinity presented a petition to the City Council March 13, 1877, wherein they set forth in the strongest terms the horrible facts relative to this graveyard; how that, in the summer season, the stench from human bodies pervaded their homes; that, whether eating or sleeping, in doors or out, they were ever in an atmosphere heavy with exhaltations from the dead. They pictured the disgusting sights presented and forced upon the gaze of themselves and their children. They referred to their pitiable condition during an epedemic, when the putrefying dead were piled in heaps, under a blazing sun, awaiting burial, and the over-burdened earth reeked with rotten human flesh, while clouds of flies swarmed back and forth upon the graves, and upon their tables. * * * Adding danger to the disgusting features of this horrible picture, the boards of coffins broken up, as described, were in constant demand to be used as fire-wood for cooking and for the construction of yard fences, by certain degraded whites and negroes in the district. * * * The neighbors assured me that hogs repeatedly made their way through the picket pence, and even declared to me, that they had been known to root up the dead out of their graves, and to revel in their carcasses the live-long night, filling themselves with human flesh to fatten on it."

These official statements of an officer whose conscientious reports were highly commended by the press of this city last summer cannot be successfully denied. It is difficult to exagerate the deplorable sanitary condition of the city, well known to every intelligent citizen. To escape the v[illegible]tation of plagues, or remove the h[illegible]r of them, equally detrimental to the commercial prosperity of New Orleans, a thorough system of sanitary engineering must be undertaken. Death-dealing graveyards in the heart of the city, squares of pools, leaking vaults, and gutters that do not perform their office, are a few objects needing attention. The establishment of a standard real estate level, and a better water supply are as requisite as good drainage.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, Astor Place, New York February 6th. Wm. H. Allen, Esq., President, in the chair.

The Rev. James M. King, read the ninetieth Psalm and offered prayer.

The death of the Hon. James B. M'Kean, a Vice-President of the Society, was announced, and a committe appointed to prepare a suitable minute for the records of the Board.

Grants of books were made to the American Seamen's Friend Society and other benevolent organizations. Fourteen volumes in raised letters were given for the blind; 906 volumes granted for the foreign field, making a total of 2,195. Books to the value of $1,025 30 were granted, including $500 for colportage work, and $31 50 for railroads.

Appropriations were made amounting to $44,585 79, including $43 053 for the yearly estimates of the Levant Agency.

Among the foreign letters were communications from Rev. Isaac G. Bliss, giving an account of an interview with the King of Greece, and an estimate of expenditures for the ensuing year; from Dr. Gulick at Shanghai, Dec. 25th, with a sketch of a day's colportage on the Yangtze River; from Dr. Gore, at Mexico, Jan. 14th; Mr. Milne at Monte Video, Dec. 12th; Mr. Blackford at Rio de Janero, Jan. 2d; also from Rev. J. W. Butler of Mexico, and Rev. M. Phillips of Yucatan, with reports of sales of Scriptures; Rev. S. C. Damon of Honolulu, with a remittance in return for books donated; Rev. J. M. Erikson and Rev. V. Witting, with reports of Bible work in Sweeden; Rev. W. H. Gulick, with an account of sales at the Santander fair; and Rev. S. C. Pixley of South Africa, in respect to the edition of the Zulu New Testament.

The receipts for January were $44,864 99; copies of Scriptures issued, 58,266 vols.

The Seamen's Bethels.

The two Bethels of New Orleans are doing service, and we are pleased to observe the generosity of the morning dalies in making them better known to the community. The records show that thousands of seamen annually attend the Bethels, and find in them hours of pleasure and of prayer. Refined ladies and gentlemen assemble in them and contribute both vocal and instrumental music. Homelike influences are extended to the stranger sailor, and he is materially assisted in avoiding dangerous temptations. Letters from the commander of the U. S. war vessel, Canonicus, police officers, and the shipping commissioner testify to the efficiency of the Bethel work.

Rev. A. J. Witherspoon, chaplain of the up town Bethel, on Fulton near Jackson street is greatly encouraged by the temperance influence his charge has over the surrounding neighborhood. Rev. L. H. Pease, of the down-town Bethel, the pioneer one, is tireless in his efforts, and they are evidently appreciated. We learn that Mr. George L Wright, recently lectured on temperance here, and will probably be heard in the up-town Bethel on the same subject. He is spoken of as a natual orator, making powerful appeals against the use of strong drink. He is a reformed sailor.

Bible Distribution in Tennessee.

Wm. Kay, a colporteur of the American Bible Society reports in the Nashville Advocate the work of canvassing the following counties of Middle Tennessee: Dickson, Humphreys, Peray, Wayne, Lawrence, Lewis, Houston and Stewart. He says: "Commencing in Dickson on the 1st of October, 1877, and going over them in the order named, these are the figures: Number of families visited, 8,969; number of families found destitute, 2,093; number of families supplied, 1,821; number of individuals also supplied, 852; number of copies sold 2,359; worth of these, $1,192.90; number of copies dated, 1,680; worth of these, $419.65; miles traveled, 6,-576, days' actual service, 397.

These counties all lie on the east side of the Tennessee River, and are generally very broken and poor. Money is so scarce that many families contrive to live without that useful article. I have seen not a few who had not had a dime in the house for months, and there are no rich men among them. To supply all these poor people with a copy of the Scriptures, large numbers of the Word have been gratuitously distributed, and without this liberality on the part of the American Bible Society a vast proportion of the poor in these counties would still live on and die without a Bible in the house."

The City.

The largest and best assortment of school books we have seen in the city is at Lathrop, 112 Camp.

The Agricultural, Mechanical and Industrial Exposition for the Gulf States began on last Monday and still continues.

The Senate committee reported favorably on the nomination of Gen. Badger to be collector of the port of New Orleans.

The selection of candidates for the constitutional convention is deservedly receiving much attention from the commercial men of New Orleans.

The Evening Post is now under the management of Messrs. Collins and Sagendorph, editors and proprietors. It claims to be independent in politics.

The State Sunday-school Convention for Louisiana meets this week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the First Presbyterian Church. The attendance promises to be large.

Henry Benders, a child aged eleven years, was bitten by a dog on the 5th of January, and as the wound did not appear serious he received no treatment. On Thursday last the child exhibited strange symptoms, the doctor pronounced it hydrophobia, and the case hopeless.

The entertainment given by the Young Men's Christian Association last Friday night was well attended and creditable. The rooms, 57 Camp street, are comfortably fitted up and are well located. The Association should be well sustained by the Christian workers of New Orleans.

The following are the grand jurors in the U. S. Circuit Court: H. T. Vennard, foreman, Lewis L. Bourges, W. H. Green, D. T. Kirby, J. F. Bourges, A. Grosch, jr., E. Heath, W. C. Flanders, Daniel C. Harrison, J. W. Donnellau, J. F. Caleico, W. Lyons, P. E. Bechtel, O. P. Lettere J. W. Leeleve, J. Blylaudin, E. Dejeau, James Fitzpatrick, James Barry, Wm. M. Bachelor and John H. McVean.

Dr. Harrison Gray, late of Denison, Texas, and who rendered good service at Holly Springs, Miss., during the yellow fever epidemic, committed suicide in a closet of the St. Charles hotel by shooting himself with a pistol. Pecuniary troubles are supposed to have caused the deed. Dr. Walker Bailey, Jr., his comrade at Holly Springs, took charge of the body and gave it a decent interment.

Last Sunday the police detected three little girls picking pockets in the Jesuit Church. They captured two, the other ran away. They belonged to a gang of which a colored girl named Manda Mosea was the captain. She was put in jail once before, but returned to her organization as soon as she was released; and now goes in again. It is clear that the doors of some asylum should be opened to these young criminals, who have neither a conception or a fear of the law, human or divine against their transgression.

Letter from San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, Feb. 12, 1879.

ED. SOUTHWESTERN:— Madame E. C. L. Walker, of Hayti, a refined colored lady, is lecturing on the past, present and future of the negro, and also on the manners and customs of the people of Hayti. She lectured here to a crowded house. She is earnest, and her very countenance indicates intelligence. Monday and Tuesday nights I listened to her lectures, equal to any I ever heard. She is very highly spoken of by all the leading nespapers (including Democratic,) of the country.

When she came to San Antonio, she went to the great Menger hotel, that would just make a common kithen for some of the fine hotels she had put up at in New York city. They assigned her a dirty back room, not fit for a person to stay in; but she had too much womanhood to remain. Afterward, a gentleman conducted her to Mrs. Raglan's private boarding house, where she was well taken care of and will be until she leaves. She intends to open a manual labor school for girls. I hope the time will come, when prejudice will not prevent men from treating strangers with proper respect.

ANDREW R. NORRIS.

Twenty Christians can fight heroically where one can suffer greatly and be strong and still.—Cuyler.

Southern Methodism.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. L. L. Shumpert, Okolona; "Our first quarterly meeting was held on the 8th and 9th, Elder D. McLachlan, presided. We had a glorious time. A large number communed Sunday night. The church was full."

TENNESSEE.

Rev. A. Phillips; "We are having good spiritual meetings at Mc Minnville. Rev. A. Martin preached for me last Sunday night. Rev. P. P. Brooks, from Murfreesboro, will preach for me Thursday night, and Bro. Mason on Friday night."

TEXAS.

Prof. W. H. Jackson, San Felipe: "I send you ten more subscribers, making 50 in all; when the weather becomes real good I feel as if I could send you half as many more. The subscribers tell me the SOUTHWESTERN is a preacher in any Methodist family, and they will never do without it again. For myself I feel as if the Lord was with me, acting as your agent."

Rev. J. S. Whitaker, Hearne: "I reached my work January 22. On my arrival here I was introduced to 4 members of the old Methodist Church. They said they were glad to see me and hear of the great family of Methodists. They have had many trials. Three times they have put up a church, and the wind has blown it down; many became discouraged, turned away and joined the Baptist and A.M.E.Churches. I told them to be of good courage, and we would put it up again, and it would not fall down, because I would pray the Lord to hold the winds till the building is finished, and he will do it."

Central Tennessee Conference Letter.

The meeting at Shelbyville was closed on the 9th. The result of the meeting was 86 conversions and 70 accessions to the church. Several persons professed religion away from church. Mr. Ernest Coldwell, one of the converts and son of the Hon. T. H. Coldwell, begins a young peoples' prayer-meeting to night. A layman describes the Sunday morning meeting as the best one of the series, "The church re-echoed the praises to God." This has been the most remarkable meeting held in Bedford county. To God be all the glory.

Bro. Clark of Hillsboro circuit, reports a pleasant quarterly meeting. Some accessions to the church

Our church at Tullahama has been repainted, etc., and in its new dress is more inviting than ever. This is the most liberal charge in the Conference. Its pastor Rev. D. P. Searcy, is doing a good work.

The West Tennessee Seminary located at Hollow Rook, is advertised for sale on Saturday next. At the last session of our conference a committee was appointed to collect funds to redeem the property, worth at least $3,000. The deed of trust is for $300. Any reader of the SOUTHWESTERN, desiring to lend a helping hand will please forward their "note" to Rev. J. E. Cole, Clarksburg, Carroll county, Tenn.

The Dickson Academy, under the faithful labors of its principal, Rev. Wm. Houston, is rapidly establishing itself and becoming a power for good. Bro. Houston is a well educated man, an earnest laborer and knows no such a thing as failure.

Rev. F. Deal, in charge of Long Branch circuit, is in connection with his ministerial duties, teaching school.

Bishop Haven, is announced to preach at Shelbyville, on the 23rd.

Rev. F. Mason formerly P. E. of McMinnville district has forwarded to Judge Coldwell $30 towards improving the district camp grounds.

Religious Items.

Bishop Peck returned from the South in good health.

The Indianapolis Journal suspended its Sunday issue.

There are Sunday-schools for the Chinese in Chicago and St. Louis.

At a revival in Maquan, Illinois, 100 converts were obtained in six weeks.

Illinois churches received 18,000 new members from the Sunday-schools last year.

Rev. Dr. Shaw, of Rochester says: women shall pray at his prayer meetings.

The Minnesota Methodist Conference will hold its thirteenth annual Sunday-school Congress February 24, 25 and 26, at St. Paul. Dr. J. H. Vincent and Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller will be among its leading spirits.

Mr. Sankey has begun an evangelistic work in connection with the various churches of Newcastle-on-Tyne. On his arrival in the town he was entertained at a public breakfast, which was presided over by the Vicar and attended by a large number of ministers.

Foreign Missions.

One of the American Missionaries of China writes: "I was amazed to see the Native Preachers take up the business of the last Conference, and to hear their powerful sermons. They preached, argued and voted so wisely. The sermons of Hiiying Mi Sea Sokong Hiiying Mi, I have rarely heard excelled. I have not seen at home any one on the conference floor, excel some of these brothern. The organization of the conference has given them a wonderful lift. The time has come for some of us from America, to take up another field in Western China; I am ready for the new field. Will not the Society make promises for extending our work in China? That vast empire waits to receive the Gospel. The success of the Foochow Mission should inspire a move, along the whole line."

Bro. Hart, writes from Central China: "The work on on the River is simply immense. The estalished Church of Scotland, is the only one as yet represented at I Chang. Five hundred miles further up the River, is Sz Chung King. This province is the largest of the eighteen and in variety of products the richest. Chung King will, eventually be the entreport for Thibet."

Rev. H. H. Lowry writes from Peking Dec., 10th 1878. "Bro. Dans and I have recently visited the Tsangchor circuit; we were much encouraged by the prospect of things there. The average attendance at our Sunday service, for several months past has been over thirty. Bro. Dans baptized and received into the Church, seven who had been on probation about a year. Thirty-two remain on probation. We organized a Quarterly Conference, with one Local preacher, one class leader and five stewards. The first duty of the official members, was to determine how much money they could raise during the year, and before we left they had subscribed about twenty-one dollars. The money is to be applied in the purchase of benches for the Chapel, we consider this a very fair beginning for this little church of fourteen members.

The people of this district are removed from want this winter by the abundance of the fall crops. The present is a wonderful contrast to the condition of things a year ago. Some kinds of grain were never known to be so cheap as now, while the yards are full of stocks and fuel. The wheat, of which a great deal has been sown gives good promise for next year. Sad evidence of the famine are still visible everywhere, and will be for years to come nothwithstanding the returning prosperity. Nearly every household is mourning for some member of the family, and the broken walk and dilapidated houses bear evidence of the distress through which the people has passed.

Mrs. Rev. Dr. Maclay on a visit to her son at Shanghai in mercantile business there, has the pleasure of being entertained by our Missionary friends the Lambuth's who a short time since were her guests in Japan. By the way, we were charmed with the missionary information appearing in the Nashville Christian Advocate, from the pen of the younger Mrs. Lambuth, formerly Miss Kelly daughter of late Secretary Kelly, of Missionary Society of the Church South.

Rev. M. C. Harris of Japan writes Jan., 8th saying: "On our return voyage from San Francisco, there were thirty-two Missionaries including Ladies that came out. One bound for China and one for Bareich and India, the rest for Japan. They were a most agreeable band of disciples. There was a Bible reading every day at 2 p. m. Most of the passengers attended, Dr. Ulrich of London, a man deeply learned in the word, by his presence and hearty interest added much to their profit.

A voice from Japan reaches us by one of seventeen Christian students of the Agricultural College at Sappora, on the Island of Yesso the most Northern Island of Japan. His language is "Although we are in such a solitary district, we are not without help. Dr. Maclay of Yokohoma, often writes us encouraging us to be in the way, and Rev. Mr. Harris visits us. Last Saturday we were received into the Methodist Episcopal Church.'

Of the above seventeen christians nine are of a class of the fourteen Juniors and eight of the the Sophomore class.

In one of the Swiss papers Dr. Theirsch an eminent state minister has recently issued a series of Articles nine in number on Rev. John Wesley and Methodism. These are in a very favorable tone, though a few points are brought under criticism. For instance he thinks it an error of Methodism that children are taught the necessity of the same repentance and regeneration that are required of older christians, and he especially disapproves of Class Meetings as tending to the Confessional. So it is apparent that our methodism is awakening attention in high places there.

The Freedwomen.

WORK PROPOSED.—The purpose is to employ Christian women to visit the houses, and churches and Sunday-schools of our colored people, and to labor especially for the salvation of the souls and bodies of the colored women. Mothers' meetings, and meetings for girls and young women will be organized; also sewing-circles, where the simpler duties of household work will be taught and instructions given as to personal habits and tastes. Special efforts will everywhere be made to increase attendance upon our Sunday-schools and churches, and the New Orleans University. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in New Orleans alone fourteen churches among the colored people with a membership of over 8000. This membership represents a population of over 10,000. Our work will be at first in connection with these churches, whose pastors will be our advisers and assistants.

MISSIONARIES' HOME.—We have rented and furnished a house, No. 816½ Second street, where our missionaries will reside, and where meetings can be held when ever desired.

VOLUNTARY HELPERS.—Besides those who are employed and give their whole time to the work, there are many who would be glad to give a part of the Sabbath; or a day or two of each week to this work of the Master. Such will please call at the Home or on Mrs. Hartzell.

OUR PRESENT MISSIONARIES.—At present the following are our missionaries: Mrs. A. M. Ryder, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, of Normal, Illinois; Miss Lizzie Thompson, of Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephens, of New Orleans.

MONEY.—No work of this kind can be carried forward without money. No debts will be made. All money given will be conscientiously applied, and a published report given. We have some cards on which is printed a simple pledge to raise ten dollars in ten cent subscriptions. Send for a card and help us, or if you prefer it send us what you can direct.

THIS COLUMN.—This column of the SOUTHWESTERN has been devoted to our work, and in it will be found the announcement of meetings, extracts from letters, notes of progress, incidents connected with the work, etc.

PRAY FOR US.—This work is as much missionary work as that done in Africa, in India or Mexico.

Address all letters to
Mrs. J. O. HARTZELL,
123 Carondelet street,
New Orleans, La.

REGULAR MEETINGS.

The following meetings will be held regularly [illegible] and others will be [illegible] as the workers increase.

1. UNIVERSITY SUNDAY-SCHOOL, corner of [illegible] and [illegible] streets, every Sunday at 3 p.m. Prof. [illegible] A. Johnson, superintendent.

2. [illegible] SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS' MEETING, at the Home, 216½ Second street, near Carondelet, every Wednesday night. [illegible] all the officers and teachers of our Sunday-schools are invited.

3. MOTHERS' MEETING, at the Home, every Thursday afternoon from one till six o'clock.

kill time. They wasted what might have made the whole comfortable. Corinne's strength and courage failed first, in their loneliness and increasing destitution: Cesar's hair grew white; finally, both became almost helpless. Where were they to find corn meal and bacon, if they could not work.

Tom Gordon coming from town where he had spent the day playing cards, concluded the old nigger was getting lazy, and sauntered carelessly down to the cabin. "What's the matter?" "I'se mighty bad Massa Tom," said the old slave meekly. "Neber shall be able to work much more. See Mas'r Tom." The black hands were deformed by rheumatism, and trembling with weakness. "Mas'r Tom we is hungry, will you send me something to eat? Corinne can't walk no more." Tom promised, but meeting a companion forgot it, in his eagerness for an evening's entertainment. Cesar waited cold and hungry; Corinne moaned in her pain. Must they starve alone? There were no near neighbors; finally, slowly and painfully, Cesar crept down to the storehouse, with two crutches. There was corn meal and bacon, which his own labor had purchased. He fills a little pail with meal and sat down to rest. It was late; the moon shone clear making every object distinct. When Tom Gordon and his brothers came home, seeing the storehouse door open, he drew his pistol, and called out, "who's there?" "It's me Massa Tom, don't shoot, it's me, Cesar." "Oh you are well enough to steal are you? I'll show you who is master here!" He raised his pistol, fired deliberately, and Cesar was gone where he never would hunger any more. A coroner's jury decided that Tom Gordon killed the negro in self-defense. Public opinion did not favor the verdict, but there was no arrest. The negro who had served faithfully two generations, found this reward for the labor of a lifetime. And Corinne, boken in mind as well as body still lives. A neighboring family who knew her history gives her food and shelter. She calls their little girl Katie.

Feb. 23, 1879.—THE KING IN ZION.
SCRIPTURE.—Ps. 2: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ."—Acts 2: 36.

TOPIC.—The Triumphant Son.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

The Connection.—Almost unanimously the second Psalm is ascribed to David.

The Psalm has a very abrupt beginning. It is as if wonder and contempt at such an act had wrung the question from the Psalmist. "Why do the heathen rage?" The inquiry relates to other nations than the kingdom of the chosen people. In the Hebrew, the word "rage" refers to a fierce and aimless tossing, as of the sea, while the Greek word, used by Luke in Acts 2: 22, is the word to denote the rage, pride and restiveness of the horse. That any one should manifest such a temper toward the omnipotent Ruler of the universe well might bring forth such an exclamation. What reason was there for it? 1. He had given them no occasion. On the contrary, how much he has done to win their love. 2. Such rage is useless, there is both no excuse and no possible means for gratifying such a hatred.

"And the people imagine a vain thing?" The "vain thing" which the nations plot is the breaking of the bands of the Lord and of his Anointed spoke of in the following verses. And the attempts to do that have been na imaginary things They form part of the world's history. Two monuments were erected to Diocletian, the persecutor of Christianity. Among other reasons for their erection, on one of them was inscribed: "For having extinguished the name of Christianity," and on the other, "For having everywhere abolished the superstition of Christ." But in this 'the people imagined a vain thing.' So far from being deceased, Christianity was on the eve of its final and permanent triumph.

The movement was not ano simply of the people. The rulers took part in it, and gave it direction. Their atitude was one of determined hostility. It was manifested, especially in the enmity exhibited to the people chosen of God. The hatred shown toward them is not to be accounted for on the grounds merly of neighboring jealously. They hated the God of Israel more than they did the Jewish nation. They deserted the Jews because they served the One who claimed to be the God of gods, rather than for any reason they had to fear the consequences of their growth as a peaple. "The rulers take counsel together." Their opposition was cool, crafty, and deliberatete. Their own mutual animosities were forgotten in the desire to triumph over this one whom they all regarded as a common foe. They meant to overthrow the kingdom of God in this world.

"Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us." That is the object of their plotting. For this they have entered into secret intrigues, and taken the lives of the faithful servants of God—in order that they might have no monitors to reprove them for their wickedness, and in order that they might no longer feel any restraint upon their actions. Evidently the rulers thought, as many others still think, that it would be a tolerably easy thing to break asunder the bands and the cords which the Almighty has thrown around his creatures as their best protection. The Psalmist has said, "The rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and against his Annointed." That exactly corresponds to the words of Christ, when said: "He that hateth me hateth my Father also."

The King Established (4-9).—From the raging tumult of the people, and from the council chambers of their kings, the Psalmist turns our eyes upwards. He represents God as sitting upon his throne, undisturbed by the puny roar that comes up to him from below. All of the plottings of of the kings is open to his gaze. He does not rise and gird himself; for their challange offers him no conflict. "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision." Pharoah thought to extingish the Israelites by decreeing that every son that was born to them should be slain—and yet his own daughter became the foster mother of the one whom God had selected to lead his downtrodden people out from under the hand of the oppressor. Unwittingly to him, his own house became the means of perpetuating the existence of the people whom he was trying to destroy. The Lord who sitteth in the heavens was laughing at him. In his sore displeasure at the way that the Jews had treated his anointed Son, he vexed them in the destruction of their city, and in their utter annihilation as a nation. Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

Thus speaks the Lord in behalf of the Son. Now the Son himself speaks. Evidently to the enraged people and the conspiring kings. It is uttered to show the futility of their plots against himself. He was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." In Acts 13: 33, the words "this day have I begotten thee" seems to have an intimate reference to Christ's resurrection from the dead. The first part of the decree was a decree of salvation It was that which gave to the world a Savior. "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance," etc., is in the same line of thought. He is to be their moral conqueror. The cross is to triumph, not even through omnipotent force, but through divine, irresistable love. The time is coming when it can be said: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever." For this he has only to "ask."

But for the intractable there is another fact. "Thou shalt break them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Those who will not bend must break Those who crucified the Saviour thought that he held in his hand only a powerless reed—they found that he had in his pierced hands a rod of iron that broke the Jewish nation into fragments.

The Kings Warned (10-11).—The Prophet-psalmist urges the kings and the judges to be wise and instructed now, before the judgments which have just been made known shall come upon them.

How shall they be wise? The psalmist answers: 1. Serve the Lord with fear—that is, with reverence. 2. Rejoice with trembling. "Rejoice" for so great a salvation. "Tremble," because of so great and undeserved an escape. 3. Kiss the Son lest he be angry. In the East, equals salute each other with a kiss upon the mouth, or check; but a kiss upon the hands is a sign of reverence. A kiss was an ancient method, also, of exhibiting one's fealty to the king. The wards in this connection mean that one should yield true allegiance of the heart unto Christ.

Lost Friends.

NOTE.—We receive many letters asking for information about lost friends. All such letters will be published in this column. We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notices. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.

FOES OF SOCIETY OR PEOPLE TO BE FEARED. By T. Dewitt Talmage, D.D., Illustrated. Chicago; J. Fairbanks & Co.

The soul stirring discourses of a great pulpit orator on the temptations and vices of city life, are here gathered together in pamphlet form. It is the only edition authorized by Rev. Talmage, the discourses being stenographically reported for the publishers. For sale at Lathrop's, 112 Camp street.

New Publications.

Harper's Magazine for March offers an unusual variety of reading matter, and has eighty-five illustrations. There are two art papers: one on the English home of Washington's ancestors; "A Few Sea Birds; an outline of the United States Coast Survey; a discription of American and English locomotives; the magneter m tor and its inventor; "The English in India." "Climates for Invalids." "Afghanistan." etc.

Sunday Afternoon for March has a sketch by Octave Thanet illustrating the strong hold Rev Philip Brooks' preaching takes on certain classes. Taking a Mean Advantage, is a story by Edward Bellamy in which love conquers intemperance. A second contribution about Michael Faraday, the scientist, shows the vigor of his religion and the attractiveness of his character. An article from the Journal des Economistes by an intelligent Chinaman shows that infanticide in China is not, as has been supposed, greater than elsewhere, and tells of the care which had been taken for centuries by the government of infants relinquished by their parents because of poverty. A Working-woman's Bureau tells of Miss Jane Helps and her work. Our Peculiar Sunday-School Teachers gives some objections to the International Lesson system. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps has An Hour with Gwendolyn, and there are also Our Debt to Socrates, Calvin the Sinner, and Ministerial Backsheesh The poets are Lucy Larcom, Mrs. Dorr, and Mary E. C. Wyeth. There are the usual departments; $3 00 a year, Springfield, Mass.

Business Failures.

Lack of judgment causes fully 50 per cent. of all business men to fail, earlier or later. Do not an equal proportion of physicians fail to cure from the same cause? At the Grand Invalids' and Tourists' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Pierce, through the skill attained by his several specialists, each having devoted years to a special department of medical science, is able to cure a large per cent. of cases hitherto considered incurable. Many physicians, in view of the superior advantages of this model sanitarium, bring thero stubborn, obscure, complicated, and surgical cases, for examinations, operation and treatment, Full particulars given in the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, an illustrated work of over 900 pages. Price, post-paid, $1.50. Address the author, R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Wise Deacon.

"Deacon Wilder, I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family so well the past season, when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors running to us so long.

"Bro. Taylor, the answer is very easy. I used Hop Bitters in time and kept my family well and saved large doctor bills. Three dollars' worth of it kept us all well and able to work all the time, and I will warrant it has cost you and most of the neighbors one to two hundred dollars apiece to keep sick the same time. I guess you'll take my medicine hereafter." See another column.

Compound Oxygen.

Rev. L. Peirce of Sparta, Ga., father of Bishop Peirce. says: "I do most honestly and earnestly recomend this "Oxygen Treatment" to all persons laboring under any suffering from cold, cough, etc., and for all signs or symptoms causing fear of Consumptions." Lectures on Preaching

Delivered before the Theological Students of Yale College.

By Rev. Matthew Simpson, D.D., LL.D.

(One of the Bishops of the M. E. Church.)

Cloth, 12mo. Price..............$1.50

These admirable Lectures embrace the following topics, delivered in the order here stated:

Lecture I. The Nature and Work of the Christian Ministry.
Lecture II. The Call to the Ministry.
Lecture III. The Preacher Personally.
Lecture IV. Indirect Preparation for the Pulpit.
Lecture V. The Preparation of a Sermon.
Lecture VI. The Delivery of a Sermon.
Lecture VII. Ministerial Power.
Lecture VIII. The Influence of the Pastorate on the Pulpit.
Lecture IX. Collateral and Miscellaneous Work.
Lecture X Is the Modern Pulpit a Failure?

It is needless to say that these topics are treated in a masterly manner—clearly, forcibly, practically; as becomes both the gravity and importance of the subjects discussed, and the reputation of their author as a "workman who needeth not to be ashamed." No minister should be without them, as none can carefully and thoughtfully read them without profit. In them there is nothing showy, but they present the ripe fruit of the matured thought of a long period of ministerial usefulness and oversight. They are weighty, well-considered teachings.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All traveling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.

2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 18x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:

SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 11 00

SILVER PLATE.
10 inches wide. $1 00

SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL,
$7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country

SILVER GOBLET.
1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.
2. To any Church sending us Tweety-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.
3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total 18 50.
4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.
5. To any Church sending up Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

☞NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us. This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceeding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregation where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

☞Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.
2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.
3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission: the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.
4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

Young Folks' Corner.

THE SAFEGUARD.

BY ELIZABETH W. DENISON.

A baby crept to his father's knee,
And was lifted up and lulled to rest,
'Till the blue eyes closed, so tired was he,
And his little head fell peacefully,
At ease on the ready shoulder there,
While the baby hand, so soft and fair,
Lay like a shield on his father's breast.

Of old 'twas said that when men drew near
To fierce temptation or deadly strife,
And lost their way in a maze of fear,
Or periled their souls for worldly gear,
By a way unknown an angel hand
Would lead them out of the dangerous land,
Into the light of a nobler life.

The story is true for the world to-day;
We see no white-robed angels mild;
But out of the dark and perilous way
Where men and women forget to pray,
Into the peace of a purer land
They are led by a gentle, shielding hand,
The hand of a little helpless child.

Nannie's Birds.

BY COUSIN ELLEN.

Many years ago there was a little girl whose name was Nannie. She lived among the hills which rise higher and higher until they form the Alleghany mountains. Like most farmers in these semi-mountainous districts, her father grew little grain but kept all the cattle and sheep his land could support. Now-a-days he would be called a stock-farmer. There were clumps of bushes and many stones and a few great rocks in the pastures, and the little lambs often strayed away from their mothers, and as soon as they were out of [illegible] silly little things thought [illegible] lost. Nannie liked to [illegible] all the hiding-places for the wandering babies, and when [illegible] found them it was hard to tell which was the happiest, she or the lost sheep. She made herself very useful in this way, and saved her father much time and trouble. She was very brave, and never felt in the least afraid—not that there was really anything to be afraid of, but there are not many little girls who would like to go out in the fields all alone. She made many friends [illegible] many playmates among [illegible] creatures whose homes [illegible] the thickets. She [illegible] a great deal about the [illegible] and became more familiar with their habits than she [illegible] had she only read [illegible] books, though no [illegible] would have told her about a much greater variety of birds. Nannie was very fond of her little pets, and as she was always very kind to them they were very [illegible] of her. Sometimes she did some mischief, but it was always unintentional. Once she found a [illegible] nest built low enough for her to reach the pretty blue eggs, and she used to take them out every day and turn them over in her hand and look at them. There were never any little robins in that nest. Once some blue-birds made a nest where the twigs grew so as to form a cup with the nest in the [illegible]. Nannie put her hands [illegible] and when the old [illegible] she caught her and [illegible] all her pretty feathers. [illegible] never went back to their [illegible]

A pair of Phebe-birds [illegible] their nest under the [illegible] barn every year ever [illegible] could remember, [illegible] they came and every [illegible] least three broods of [illegible] their appearance [illegible] nest.

[illegible] afternoon, looking [illegible] Nannie espied [illegible] with long poles [illegible] Phebes' nest. [illegible] was cruel sport on [illegible] do nothing until [illegible] then she [illegible] could be done [illegible] She found [illegible] for the nest [illegible] and the four [illegible] One [illegible] others [illegible] was be- [illegible] close, by [illegible] would [illegible] flying [illegible] did [illegible] moved [illegible] be a [illegible] better [illegible] experi- [illegible] in [illegible] found a [illegible] secure [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and now they are white as snow; but she still remembers the old farm, and her children and grandchildren are almost as familiar with every nook and corner as she was herself, though not one of them has ever seen it, and now her tiny great-grandchildren begin to clamor for 'stories about when she was a little girl.'

Books Among the Ancients

The use of educated slave labor in writing rendered books comparatively cheap among the ancients. We learn from Plato that in his time the works of the philosopher Anaxagoras were sold in the theatre at Athens for drachma, or about seventeen cents of our money, and even if as some of the commentators think, only a single treatise of Anaxagoras is spoken of, this is cheaper than the rate at which opera librettos or other printed pamphlets are sold at our places of public amusement at the present day. The poet Martial tells us that his works were sold in distant Britany at a price quite as low as a good copy of them could be bought for to-day in London. It is difficult in these instances to estimate in modern currency the actual value of books or other articles of sale, on account of the variation in the value of precious metals at different periods. Some writers on political economy have assumed the market price of wheat as a standard of comparison in measuring the value of other commodities at different historical periods, but as the price of flour within the recollection of this generation has fluctuated between the extreme limit of $4 50 and $20 per barrel at retail, this standard can scarcely be accepted as a sound basis for very accurate calculations, Besides, the value of ancient coins differed at different periods, and if it be stated that the price of a particular book was a drachma, we are at a loss in determining whether reference is made to the drachma of the fathers or a trade drachma. But without engaging in such abstruse calculations, it is enough to know that books in the brilliant Athenian period and under the Roman Empire were much cheaper than they were at any time during the first three centuries after the discovery of the printing press.

Letters To Mothers.

"Give me," says the Romanist, "the first ten years of a child's life, and you may have the rest." The early and most important part of these ten years is, or ought to be, almost, exclusively under the mother's Guidance. The impressions made during this period, are the deepest and the most ineffaceable; and frequently, after years of wandering, they bring forth saving results.

A boy leaving his home for a life on the sea, pledged his mother at the gate, that he would never drink intoxicants. He spent many years at sea, surrounded by temptation to intemperance, but he did not break the pledge he gave his mother. One day a noble-looking man entered his office and finding himself unrecognized, inquired if he did not remember, years before, taking to his state-room an intoxicated man, whom the captain and others had maltreated. "You took me," he said; "In that condition, and cared for me with kindness. At parting you asked me if I had a mother; you told me of your pledge to you mother, which you had never broken. As you mentioned my mother, the memory of her rose before me, though long since dead, and I pledged myself, there, silently, to drink no more. I have kept my pledge. Now the best ship that comes into this harbor is mine."

Thus the little candle lighted by a mother on the green hill-side of Vermont sent its ray over the stormy sea, and down to the end of time.—Leaflet.

A story is told of a woman who freely used her tongue to the scandal of others, and made confession to the priest of what she had done. He gave her a ripe thistle-top, and told her to go out in various directions, and scatter the seeds one by one. Wondering at the penance, she obeyed, and then returned and told her confessor. To her amazement, he bade her go back and gather the scattered seeds; and when she objected, on the ground that would be impossible, he replied that it would be still more impossible to gather up and destroy all the evil reports which she had circulated about others. Any thoughtless, careless child can scatter a handful of thistle-seed before the wind in a [illegible], but the strongest and [illegible] man cannot gather them [illegible]

Benefits to Total Abstainers.

Dr. Willard Parker says: "It has been demonstrated that the use of alcohol when employed moderately, as many young men often use it, as they think with impunity, makes the average of life thirty-five and a half, while that of non-users reached an average of sixty-four and one-sixth years, a difference of about twenty-nine years to each individual, a thousand individuals, 29,000.

It is good for a man to be checked, crossed, disappointed, made to feel his own ignorance, weakness, folly; made to feel his need of God; to feel that, in spite of all his cunning and self-confidence, he is no better off in this world than a lost child in a dark forest, unless he has a Father in heaven who loves him with an eternal love; and a Holy Spirit in heaven who will give him a right judgment in all things; and a Savior in heaven who can be touched with the feeling of his infirmities.—Charles Kingsley.

The most unhappy of all men is the man who cannot tell what he is going to do, that has got no work cut out for him in the great world, and does not go into any. For work is the grand cure of all the maladies and miseries that ever beset mankind — honest work, which you intend getting done.—Carlyle.

A professor at Cornell, lecturing on the effects of the wind in some Western forests, remarked: "In traveling along the road, I even sometimes found the logs bound and twisted together to such an extent that a mule couldn't climb over them. So I went round."

Lady Carteret, wife of the lord-lieutenant of Ireland, one day remarked to Dean Swift: "The air of your country is excellent." Swift immediately fell on his knees and exclaimed: "For mercy's sake madam, don't say so in England or they'll lay a tax on it!"

There are only two creatures says the Eastern proverb, who can surmount the pyramids,—the eagle and the snail.

Poverty and Suffering.

"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did them no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost—I know it.

THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S
CELEBRATED
LIVER PILLS,
FOR THE CURE OF
Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

Benson's Capcine Porus Plaster.
FOR WOMEN and CHILDREN.
Females suffering from pain and weaknesses will derive great comfort and strength from the use of Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster. VOLUNTARY TESTIMONY.

[Extract from the Baltimore "American," December 21, 1878.]

"The Pulvermacher Electric Belt is recommended to general use for the following reasons: First, for its wonderful properties for the cure of diseases of the kidneys, stomach, liver and blood; secondly, for its extreme simplicity, and the fact of its being applied outside, precludes all possibility of any injury being done to the patient, as an external remedy is universally acknowledged to be safe. Another advantage is the facility with which the progress of the disease and cure can be watched, and if the Belt be not quite in the right place, it can be very easily readjusted so as to cover the parts affected. The Pulvermacher Electric Belt, and its perfection, has been hailed with delight, not only by the sufferers who have regained health, enjoyment, and a new lease of life through its beneficent qualities, but by the medical profession, who very frequently prescribe its use to their patients."

PULVERMACHER'S
are indorsed and approved by the most eminent medical and scientific authorities in the world, by the Faculties of France, England, Austria, Prussia, Belgium, and America, and by well-known writers, who refer to the extraordinary cures effected by Pulvermacher's Electric Belts and Bands, in upwards of one hundred medical and philosophical works.

Dr. J. M. Howe's
Inhaling Tube!
—AND—
COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.
Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.
The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:
It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.
Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.
The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:
I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.
From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday school Publications of the Church.:
I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 tf.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
By its great and thorough blood-purifying properties, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt-rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine.
Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, White Swellings, Goitre or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.
If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.
In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. Sold by druggists.

CATARRH
SYMPTOMS.—Frequent headache, discharge falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, thick, mucous, purulent, offensive, etc. In others, a dryness, dry, watery, weak, or inflamed eyes, stopping up, or obstruction, of the nasal passages, ringing in ears, deafness, hawking and coughing to clear the throat, ulcerations, scabs from ulcers, voice altered, nasal twang, offensive breath, impaired or total deprivation of sense of smell and taste, dizziness, mental depression, loss of appetite, indigestion, enlarged tonsils, tickling cough, etc. Only a few of these symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.
DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY
produces radical cures of the worst cases of Catarrh, no matter of how long standing. The liquid remedy may be snuffed, or better applied by the use of Dr. PIERCE'S Douche. This is the only form of instrument yet invented with which fluid medicine can be carried HIGH UP and PERFECTLY APPLIED to all parts of the affected nasal passages, and the chambers or cavities communicating therewith, in which sores and ulcers frequently exist, and from which the catarrhal discharge generally proceeds. Its use is pleasant and easily understood, from directions accompanying each instrument. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures recent attacks of "Cold in the Head" by a few applications. It is mild and pleasant to use, containing no strong or caustic drugs or poisons. Catarrh Remedy and Douche sold by druggists.

THE PASTOR'S WELCOME.

Under the shadow of a far-off land,
Shown by the light of centuries dim,
We see the form of the Master stand,
And the twelve disciples that followed him.
We seem to hear his words sublime
Echoed down through the aisles of time;
"Seek ye all lands beneath the sun,
And preach my gospel to every one."

On every wild and distant shore,
In every clime the heavens span,
Behold the world is journeyed o'er
By messengers of God to man!
No plain so far, no peak so bare,
It has not heard the good man's prayer;
No soul so bowed on being's strand
It may not find his helping hand.

Then welcome! man of God, to-day!
Welcome thy helping hand and voice,
To teach our erring feet the way,
To guide us to the better choice,
Welcome to hearts and homes of all,
To share of joy, to sorrow's call,
To lighten toil, to lessen care,
To children's love, to parent's prayer.

The Plague in South America.

Last week we published some facts relative to the plague in Europe. The following concerning the plague in South America we clip from the Inter Ocean:

Much has been written of the horrors of the great famine in China, and scarcely an incident of the progress of the plague in Europe has been allowed to escape the notice of the newspapers, but the great [illegible] in Brazil has received [illegible] little attention. [illegible] ago a brief dispatch [illegible] ravages of the small-[illegible] with the drought [illegible] of the northern [illegible] and this and subsequent [illegible] generally [illegible] to give an adequate [illegible] visitation [illegible] the yellow fever [illegible] districts in the [illegible] the sympathetic [illegible] nation [illegible] and the [illegible] and prompt [illegible] the scourge [illegible] and the deaths [illegible] But in the [illegible] of 900,000, [illegible] many cases not buried, and in other cases only a few handfuls of earth had been thrown upon them. The survivors huddled together in the towns lived in filth and idleness. The whole population of the province was gathered in a strip of territory along the coast not more than seventy-five miles wide. The drought still continued, and birds, insects, and animals died. The people were fed by government rations, but the fearful death-rate continued, and it was discovered that small-pox had broken out among the refugees. This was in June, 1878, and the disease spread rapidly to all classes, including the wealthier and aristocratic people of the cities. Up to this date the government had had the advice and aid of these. Now all became panic-stricken, and a reign of terror was inaugurated. In the 90,000 people gathered in and about Fortaleza the death-rate in the latter part of November was over 500 per day. On the last day of November there were 574 deaths, and during the month nearly 12,000 interments had taken place in the two cemeteries, and thousands of dead bodies lay unburied in the forests. At this date over 30,000 people were sick, and on Dec. 10 the deaths from small-pox were nearly 1,000. This was the date-rate of the great London plague, but there was there a population of 300,000. At Fortaleza, with a population of 75,000, there were 1,000 deaths in a single day. The death-rate decreased from that date, dropping on Dec. 20 to 400, and by Dec. 30 to 200. The reistered death for the month were 21,000.

In the midst of such a pestilence there was necessarily much carelessness as to burial. Dead bodies were laid in trenches and a light covering of sand was thrown over them. This carelessness in due time added new horrors to the situation, and contributed, no doubt to the inauguration of a new disease resembling the Black Plague now raging in Russia.

Scenes like those described at Fortaleza were common in other towns of the province, and, as has been stated, out of a population of 900,000 only 400,000 remain. The Brazilian Government made all possible effort to stop the ravages of the small-pox, and in some localities their agents were successful. As it is the province is, in truth, desolated, and if the new disease at Fortaleza is the plague, more disastrous consequences are to follow. The Black Death has never appeared in America before, and, if the reports as to its existence in Brazil are true, there is need for precautionary measures in this country as well as in Europe. Fortunately the infected province is remote from main lines of travel, and the disease can be the more easily kept within circumscribed bounds.

Our Church Extension work on the Pacific Coast.

BY REV. H. K. HINES.

I am desired to speak on "Church Extension beyond the Mountains." If I could, in a few minutes of time, sketch the vast country beyond the Rocky Mountains, and with what classes of population that country is being filled, I should be glad to do it. I will try.

From San Diego, on the south, to the Straights of Suan de Fuca, on the north, on the Pacific Coast, is more than a thousand miles. When I went to the Pacific Coast, twenty-five years ago, there was a little fringe of settlements along the valleys nearest the coast, but the great valleys of the interior were entirely unoccupied. It was my privilege, twenty-five years ago, to be appointed by Bishop Simpson to the first church that was erected anywhere between Behring Strait and Panama, and I spent four solid years of my ministry there in charge of the congregation worshiping in the [illegible] Chapel in Oregon City—[illegible] Protestant church erected [illegible] the whole line of the [illegible] perhaps I may say [illegible] Strait to Cape Horn. [illegible] a sketch of the country; [illegible] give you its extent. Its [illegible] its great moun-[illegible] rivers, are not [illegible] they are be-[illegible] We are planting [illegible] societies, es-[illegible] of the [illegible] com-[illegible] in the fellowship of the Church of our beloved Methodism. Asia meets us on the shores of the Pacific, and we greet the peoples from all parts of the world. In the population there is a large degree of culture and independent thought, and earnest, out-pushing activity; and we have a great deal to contend with that the toiler in the East knows nothing of. It is not an unusual thing for the minister, especially the Presiding Elder over the large districts of the Pacific Coast, to be obliged to travel more than two days from one station to another; and I have found it necessary to travel from Monday morning to Saturday night, three hundred miles, through valleys and over mountains. Our people are poor. They have come from all sections of the Eastern and Western States, traveling across the plains, keeping pace with the slow march of the ox, as I did twenty-five years ago, being five months travelling from the Missouri River to Portland, in Oregon; and they are without ability to aid, to any large extent, in building churches in which to welcome the in-coming people.

In 1857 I was appointed by Bishop Janes to one of the prominent towns in Oregon, to assist the six women and one man to form a church. That number was all we had. With that one man I went into the woods and cut down the timber, sawed the lumber, and went to work to build; and the church stands there to-day in Eugene City, one of the most promising stations in the new State. We are not obliged to do the work in this way now. This Board comes in with its $100, or $300, or $500, releasing our hands from this toil, and enables the minister to do the more appropriate work that belongs to his ministerial and pastoral office. In the Columbia River Conference, to which I belong, there are but two churches that have not been aided by this Board; and it is true that there are now four churches where there would be but one but for the assistance of this Board.

What the Missionary Society is to the work of preaching, the Board of Church Extension is in the great work of gathering the results of labor and securing them permanently to our Church. I believe that in the greater number of our larger towns we would have had no church and no place where we could have gathered our people and save them to Christianity and to God without the help of this Board; and I assure you your contributions will not be misplaced or misdirected. Its work is to help build altars to God; and we will try to do our part in leading our sons and your daughters, your friends and your neighbors, as they come across the Rocky Mountains, to a place in the Church; and when our work and yours is done, we hope to greet you with them in the glories of that upper temple, "that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—Church Extension Annual.

What Can be Done at the South.

The net earnings of the Eagle and Phœnix Cotton Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ga., for the year just closed, amounted to 10½ per cent. on the capital stock of $1,187,340. Six per cent. was paid in dividends, and the remainder was added to the reserve fund. The sales since January 1, 1879, have been 61 per cent. and collections over 50 per cent. in excess of same time last year. The company has now on hand $170,000 in cash, and 6395 bales of cotton that cost less than eight cents per pound. Another mill recently finished will double the capacity of the factory at materially lessened cost of production. The assets of the company are $1,828,731, and the liabilities $1,257,250, leaving a surplus of $1,581,481 including the quick capital, available in sixty days, of $981,493. The Columbus Enquirer-Sun shows what a great benefit this factory has been to Columbus as well as to the stockholders. The total number of employees is about 1000, and there are about 5000 people drawing support from the workings of this corporation, which pays out over $400,000 annually for wages. The products embrace over 150 varieties of goods, and the daily consumption is forty-three bales of cotton and 800 pounds of wool. Paying over one-sixth of the State and county taxes paid in Muscogee county, and over one-twelfth of the city taxes paid in Columbus, the burdens of the public have been greatly lessened by this successful enterprise.—Mobile Register.

Letter from Houston.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Feb. 14, 1879.

MR. EDITOR: On January 12th after a journey of over two thousand miles we found ourselves at Houston. Looking out of the car window we saw brothers Molloy, Dibble and Loggins, and as we stepped from the cars they gave us a greeting that made us feel that we were among our friends and at home. I have entered upon my work and thus far enjoy it much. Our churches here in Houston are in a healthy and vigorous state. The Sabbath-school connected with the first church is the largest in the Texas Conference, and under skillful management of Bro. F. Vance, it must continue to grow. At Galveston I found both of our churches harmonious, and consequently prosperous. Harrisburg under the care of Bro. Dibble, is putting on strength. Chenango has been regarded as one of the most discouraging fields of labor, but under the of Bro. Kelly it begins to bud; at our Quarterly Meeting four joined the church on trial. At Columbia the brethren are getting ready to ceil and finish their Church. The Church Extension Society gave them $95, they expect to raise among themselves about $120. Here at the close of the sacramental service the Pastor received eight on trial. At Chance's Prairie the Quarterly Meeting was held Tuesday Feb. 14, and was one of those seasons not soon forgotten. Here the Pastor received ten on trial. Everything indicates a prosperous year.

Fraternally,
L. P. CUSHMAN.

Nigger Colleges.

On my way I asked the driver of the street-car if he passed by the Leland University. "Do you mean the 'nigger college?'" said he. I replied, "Yes, if that's the name of it." "That's what they call it here," said he. "All right, then," said I "I want to go there and see what they are doing." I found a large and handsome edifice, within ample grounds. The external appearance, like that of some other institutions which I have heard of, is promising; but I do not find within so large a number of students as might be expected—about fifty in all. Yet I was glad to learn that the number is increasing. I was disapointed not to find Dr. Stone, who has been at the head of the school for some years past. I asked an intelligent colored man why he was no longer there, and received for a reply, "It's best to change teachers once in a year or two!" The present teachers, besides some assistants, are Mr. S. J. Axtell, Jr., who graduated some years ago both at Brown University and at the Newton Theological Institution, and Mr. Frank D. Shaver, a recent graduate of the University of Michigan. Both of these men appear to be doing excellent work, a much-needed work, and I trust they will continue in it for years with ever increasing encouragement. I know of no more important field of labor.

I spent also an hour or two at the Straight University, another school of higher learning, excellently managed by the Congregationalists for the benefit of the freedmen. The number of teachers and pupils is much larger than at the Leland University. It is also an older institution.

Besides these two "universities" in this one city, there is still another, the University of Lonisiana with one branch here and another at Baton Rouge. It is open, I believe, only to white young men, while the other two are open to both sexes. Though an old institution it is very imperfectly developed. The classical department has only one teacher of ancient languages, a young man, with but four pupils in Greek, and those only boys just beginning the language. Surely there is room for growth in this university.

One fact will, I think, strike every intelligent observer, who looks into the schools for high learning in this city. The opportunities for a liberal education, offered at the present moment to the colored youth, are full equal, if not superior, to those which are offered to the sons of the white population. Will they use their advantages wisely? If so, what will be the result? Another generation can answer this question better than the present.—Letter from New Orleans in Standard.

ALUM IN OUR BREAD.

A CHEMICAL EXAMINATION OF BAKING PWDER AND ITS RESULTS.

The use of Alum and its Deleterious Effects—Opinions of Medical Experts—Prompt Action of the Brooklyn Board of Health, etc.

In order that the people of the country may fully understand the causes of the present excitement as to the use of alum in baking powders, a history of the agitation is necessary:

In the Scientific American of Nov. 16, appeared an article by an eminent chemist of New York, showing the presence of alum in large quantities in a number of baking powders.

This article was copied into many newspapers, creating great excitement in every household where baking powder was used. The popular feeling grew so strong that in the early part of December, at a meeting of the Brooklyn Board of Health, on motion of President Crane, the Sanitary Superintendent was directed to procure samples of the various kinds of baking powders sold in Brooklyn, have them analyzed, and make a report thereon to the Board.

Sanitary Superintendent Raymond, M.D., has presented to the Board of Health substantially the following report on baking powders and cream of tartar, and the effects upon the human system:

The digestibility of bread depends in great measure upon its being porous. If it is compact and heavy, the digestive juices are unable to act upon it, and it remains in the alimentary canal undigested, giving rise to those disagreeable sensations all know as indigestion. This porosity is given to bread by the carbonic acid gas liberated in the process of bread making, forming throughout the loaf little vesicles of gas which are held by the gluten of the flour until the baking has solidified the mass and made permanent the spaces originally produced by the carbonic acid gas. This gas is incorporated with the dough in various ways. It may be forced in as is done in the "aerated bread;" or the gas may be formed by fermentation. For this purpose yeast, a mass of minute vegetable cells, is employed; this acts upon the sugar of the flour, converting it into carbonic acid gas and alcohol; or again, the carbonic acid gas may be liberated from salt holding it in combination. This is the principle involved in the use of baking powders.

Without going in detail into the constitution of baking powders, it will only be necessary to say that they are made with bicarbonate of soda, or carbonate of ammonia and cream of tartar, chemically known as the bitartrate of potassa. These powders are especially used in making biscuit and cakes. Before the days of baking powders, and even now, in many families the cream of tartar and bicarbonate of soda were purchased separately from the grocer, and a baking powder extemporized in each kitchen; but the lack of skill, resulting in lumps of soda in the product, led manufacturers to ascertain the proper proportion of these two salts, and to mix them, selling the compound as a baking powder. The manufacturers claim that the cream of tartar sold in the shops is very variable, and that nothing short of chemical analysis will determine the amount of cream of tartar in each sample; that this the householder cannot do himself, and therefore is unable to combine with it the proper proportion of soda.

This variability in the quality of cream of tartar needs the chemist to detect it, and the extensive use of baking-powders would seem to indicate that there is a popular demand for them, due to the inability of the average cook to make her biscuits and cakes successfully when she herself mixes the cream of tartar and the soda. We have been unable to find in any drug store or grocery good cream of tartar sold at retail for less than 60 cents a pound, while in some places it was as high as 85 cents. Some of the manufacturers, in order to supply a cheap baking-powder, have introduced alum as an ingredient, and this seems to be the only satisfactory reason for its use that can be given. Bicarbonate of soda is used in these alum powders, as in the others, and carbonic acid gas is similarly produced.

In many countries alum has long been used by bakers in bread making. It is claimed that the bread is whiter, and that an inferior quality of flour can by its use be palmed off on the public as of the first quality. The effects of alum on the human body are well known, and are beyond doubt injurious when taken in large quantities, or in small quantities often repeated. All authorities agree in this and there is no room for discussion.

The report of the Brooklyn Board concludes as follows:

From a careful examination, I am satisfied that the weight of evidence is against the use of alum in baking powders, and that the risks incurred in its use are too great to be incurred for the sake of cheapness alone. The mucous membrane of the stomach and the intestinal canal is a delicate structure, and materials which would produce no effect on the outside skin might irritate and inflame these organs.

The N. Y. Evening Post has been giving this subject some attention, and has published the result of some remarkable investigations, which are worthy the close attention of the thoughtful people.

From its recent exposure of the use of burnt alum in some brands of baking powders, in place of cream of tartar, the following extracts are mainly taken:

Pursuing the investigation of the quality of the food sold in this city, the representative of the Evening Post took up baking powder as one of the articles in most general use in our households. It is used by nearly every family in the city, and it is naturally of great importance to those who eat the food made with it to know whether it contains anything injurious to health.

There are certain constituents of good baking powder which may be regarded as entirely free from danger. They consist of pure grape cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda, and carbonate of ammonia. The cream of tartar unites with the other two ingredients, and carbonic acid gas is thrown off, producing the same effect as yeast in a much shorter time. It has been found, however, that alum will also unite with the other two articles, and carbonic acid gas will be produced. As alum costs less than three cents, while cream of tartar costs more than thirty cents a pound, it is easy to see why alum is substituted for the latter by some baking powder manufacturers. It is admitted by all medical authorities that cream of tartar leaves no injurious substance in the bread; alum, on the other hand, is in itself an astringent, and there is wide and deep-seated prejudice against its use. In England and other countries the adulteration of food with alum is forbidden by law under heavy penalties. The chemical effect of alum used in bread to whiten it is to form two salts of alumina—the sulphate and the phosphate of alumina. When used in baking powder, the alum forms a third salt, the hydrate of alumina, as well as the other two. This hydrate of alumina is far more easily soluble than the other two; hence any objection that may exist as to the use of alum alone in bread applies with greater force to its use in baking powder. This fact can be proven by the following named authorities:

Parke is the leader of the new school of hygiene in New England. In his "Treatise on Hygiene," he says:

Looking then to the positive evidence, and the reasonableness of that evidence, it seems to me extremely likely that strongly alumed bread does produce the injurious effect ascribed to it. These effects, as he previously states, are indigestion, griping, constipation, and kindred troubles resulting from irritation of the mucous membrane, produced by the astringent properties of alum.

Persons who have not strong constitutions, growing girls, young children, and nursing mothers are particularly liable to the evil effects produced by this use of alum. Heartburn and the prevalent forms of indigestion are often solely traceable to the action of alum on the delicate coats of the stomach.

To make sure of knowing the action of alum, the Evening Post's representative obtained the following expressions of opinion as to its effects when used in baking powder from some physicians of New York of the highest reputation and ability:

Dr. William A. Hammond, formerly Surgeon-General United States, of 43 West Fifty-fourth street, expressed himself as perfectly certain of the injurious effects of alum, whether used alone to whiten bread, or as an adulterant of baking powder. Alluding to the claim advanced that the alum was neutralized and changed into an insoluble salt, he said that this was a wholly improbable assumption, since such a perfect change could not take place unless the amounts of the alum and bicarbonate of soda were combined in the exact chemical ratio necessary for each to absorb all of the other. Not only was this impossible in the manufacture of large quantities of baking powder, but the homogeneous character of the compound could not be exactly maintained throughout the whole mass, and therefore there would be sure to be a certain amount of free alum in any bread made with an alum baking power. But even if the exact proportion were maintained, the salts formed would retain their injurious properties, as they would be dissolved in the gastric juice. The gastric juice contained not only lactic acid, but a large amount of hydro-chloric acid, and both the sulphate and hydrate of alumina would be dissolved. The phosphate might not be, but in that case the bread would be deprived of one of its most desirable ingredients, making the use of alum not only dangerous to the stomach, but deteriorating to the food.

"The hydrate of alumina." Dr. Hammond said, "would certainly be injurious to the mucous membrane. It would inevitably tend to constipate the bowels and interfere with digestion; and anything that tends to render the albumen of the bread insoluble, and therefore takes away from its nutritive value, is injurious."

Dr. Willard Parker said that if alum was substituted for cream of tartar in baking powder, in his opinion such powder would be injurious to health.

Dr. Alonzo Clark considers that alum has its uses, but should not be ignorantly taken into the stomach in food. A substance which can derange the stomach, and in certain cases produce vomiting, should not be tolerated in baking powder.

Dr. Le Grand N. Denslow of 225 West Twenty-third street, gave the following as his opinion on the subject:

Bread containing the salts of alum, which are freely soluble in the gastric juice, is undoubtedly prejudicial to health, the salts acting as irritants to the stomach.

Other great authorities, such as Carpenter Thompson, Gibbon, and Normandy, all agree that the continued use of bread containing alum will bring about dyspepsia and other troubles.

Dr. Sayre, former President of the Board of Health, said to one of the representatives of the New York press:

After the experiments in this line by Liebig and other distinguished chemists, and vivisectors with alum on cats, dogs, and other animals, with the published results, we may well ask what is the use of such experiments if we do not apply them to practice in the preservation of human life and health? The Board of Health should see to this.

Dr. Waller, chemist of the New York Board of Health, When asked by a Sun reporter as to the injurious effects of alum, replied:

You know what the effects of alum is when you take some of it in your mouth; well, that is just the effect it has upon the coats of the stomach.

The analysis of the various baking powders, as officially reported by the Brooklyn Board, reveals only two brands containing alum being sold in that city—Dooley's and Patapsco.

As to the cream of tartar powders, the same report mentions the Royal Baking Powder as free from alum or any other substance injurious to life and health.

There are probably more than five hundred kinds of baking powder manufactured in this country, and, while some of them are sold from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the majority have only a local sale near their respective places of manufacture. Through Dr. Henry A. Mott, Jr., the well-known chemist, one of the most competent, trustworthy, and careful experts of this country, the following analyses were obtained, showing the presence of alum in large quantities in many of the baking powders having a wide sale. Dr. Mott kindly furnished not only the results of his own analyses, but also those of several chemists of high professional standing, including Prof. Henry Morton, President Stevens Institute of Technology; Prof. R. W. Shedler; Dr. Stillwell of Walz & Stillwell, analytical chemists; and Prof. Patrick of Missouri.

Dr. Mott's report is as follows:

DEAR SIR:—In accordance with your request, I herewith embody the results of the analysis of baking powders from samples procured during the past three months, in all of which alum was found as an ingredient:

"Invincible,"............Contains Alum
(Snyder Brothers & Co., Cincinnati.)
"Dooley's,"............Contains Alum
(Dooley & Brother, New York.)

Having obtained the foregoing, the reporter called at the office of the Royal Baking Powder, Company, 171 Duane street, the manufacturers of the Royal Baking Powder, a brand which the report of the Brooklyn Health Board revealed to be pure. Mr. J. Hoagland, President of the Company, gave the following replies:

Reporter—What is the cause of the present excitement about baking powders?

Mr. Hoagland—It is due to the substitution of alum for cream of tartar by some manufacturers.

Reporter—Have you ever used any alum in the Royal Baking Powder?

Mr. Hoagland—No, sir.

Reporter—But I find that it is used by others. What is it used for?

Mr. Hoagland—I presume because it is cheaper than cream of tartar, which it replaces.

Reporter—You would therefore obtain a larger profit by using alum than by using cream of tartar?

Mr. Hoagland—Yes, for a time such substitution would more than double our profits.

Reporter—Why, then, do you not use it?

Mr. Hoagland—For two reasons; first, the authorities on this point are so positive and conclusive that the continued use of alum in this way is dangerous to health that we could not conscientiously use it; if others choose to take risks on the public health we shall not follow them, preferring to continue the use of pure grape cream of tartar, which is demonstrated to be wholesome; second, our experience during twenty years has satisfied us that that which is best for the public is best for us. We cannot afford to peril the reputation of the Royal Baking Powder.

Other interviews were had, all to the same general effect, namely, that alum is used by many manufacturers to cheapen their powder, and enable them to undersell their competitors. Many of them are probably ignorant of the evil effects of alum on the system, while others are indifferent so long as they make money, and no one can be said to have dropped dead from taking their powder.

By this exposure of the injurious effects of alum in baking powder, the public must not not be frightened from using baking powders when properly made.

In the report of Prof. Elwyn Waller, Assistant Health Inspector of New York Board of Health, on Baking Powder in 1872, the public are recommended to purchase one of the well known brands of baking powder, in preference to purchasing the cream of tartar separately, as this substance was found in all cases to be adulterated with sulphate of lime, commonly called terra alba, and to such an extent that in most cases the cream of tartar was really terra alba, to which a small quantity of cream of tartar had been added. The inspector further states that when the mixture is made on a large scale in a factory, and the baking powder put up in packages ready for use, the manufacturer experiences no difficulty, in the first place, of securing good materials free from adulteration, and secondly, in mixing these materials in the proper proportions.

Dr. Mott, the Government chemist, in his review on the subject in the Scientific American, makes special mention of having analyzed the Royal Baking Powder, and found it composed of wholesome materials. He also advises the public to avoid purchasing baking powders as sold loose or in bulk, as he found by analysis of many samples that the worst adulterations are practised in this form—the label and trade mark of a well known and responsible manufacturer, he adds is the best protection the public can have.

Rev. Reuben Nelson, D.D.

It is with the profoundest sorrow that we chronicle the death of this distinguished Christian minister. He has for many years been a prominent and honored man in the counsels of the Methodist Episcopal Church. At the time of his death he was one of our Publishers in charge of the Methodist Book Concern at New York, and was Treasurer of the Missionary Society of the same church. From the New York Advocate of Feb. 20, we learn the particulars of his illness. He was stricken down with paralysis on Saturday evening, Feb. 15th. He had been confined to his residence (Union Square and Seventeenth street) for a couple of weeks with malarial fever of the typhoid type. When first taken ill, symptoms of paralysis were manifested, but these yielded to thorough treatment by his physician, Dr. H. L. Richardson, of West Washington Place, as did also the malarial fever. On Saturday he was apparently better, so much so that his friends who called upon him expressed their hearty congratulations upon the prospect of his early return to his official work. His associate, Mr. Phillips, left him at about 5 o'clock, after a lengthy and most pleasant interview. At about 7 o'clock, however, Dr. Nelson, while walking across the floor of his room was suddenly prostrated with paralysis, the stroke being so severe as to completely paralyze his left side, and render him immediately unconscious. No one was with him at the moment except Mrs. Nelson. His physician was immediately sent for, and on his arrival pronounced his condition such as to leave very slight hope of his recovery. A little later there were indications of returning consciousness, as he recognized not only Mrs. Nelson, but also the voices of his physician and the assistant editor of The Christian Advocate, who were with him. Mr. Phillips, who had been informed by telegram, arrived at about midnight, by which time the coma had become so intensified as to render Dr. Nelson entirely unconscious. This condition continued during the night and throughout Sunday. At about 11 o'clock on Sunday Dr. Austin Flint, of the Medical College, was called in by Dr. Richardson as consulting physician; and at the close of the examination, both concurred in the opinion that Dr. Nelson's recovery could no longer be hoped for. Early in the day Dr. Fowler, Mr. J. B. Cornell, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Stout, Gen. and Mrs. Fisk, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Coe, and many others called, all feeling the most intense interest in the condition of their suffering friend, and all desiring to express the heartiest sympathy with Mrs. Nelson who, with the tenderest affection, and yet with characteristic self-possession and heroic fortitude, was watching over the now rapidly waning life of her honored husband.

At the date of this writing, Monday evening, Dr. Nelson's general condition is unchanged, except that the coma has become more complete. Mr. Phillips, who has remained with him nearly all the time since his first arrival, reports him as apparently suffering little pain. His daughter, Mrs. Bennett, of Wilkesbarre, with her husband and other family friends arrived on Monday morning.

On Monday his symptoms were less alarming, and he was conscious at times and took a little nourishment, and on Tuesday morning the favorable symptoms continued.

This is our last information until we read the telegram in the morning papers of last Friday that Dr. Nelson was dead.

Dr. Nelson entered the traveling ministry in 1838, and a few years was in the front rank of the Wyoming Conference in the State of New York. For more than twenty years he was principal of the Wyoming Conference Seminary. This institution, under his administration, rose to first rank. His work included not only instruction, but financial management; and it was in these respects that his most eminent qualities developed. For five consecutive quadrennials he represented his annual conference in the General Conference. In 1872 Dr. Nelson was elected to the Book Agency with Mr. J. M. Phillips. At that time the financial troubles of our Book Concern had greatly agitated the Church, and made the work of the new publishers exceedingly delicate and difficult. But Dr. Nelson was equal to the emergency, and in spite of the necessary [illegible] of the Concern and [illegible] of the times [illegible] of our great [illegible] House,—the [illegible] two—have steadily [illegible]

Duties of Higher towards Lower Races in a Mixed Community.

In the Princeton Review for November, 1878, is a very remarkable article with the above heading, by Canon George Rawlinson, of the University of Oxford. The writer starts out with a discussion of the original unity or non unity of the race, giving the arguments on both sides, but deciding in favor of the unity of the race. The settlement of this question is fundamental to the discussion of his chief position. He then proceeds to consider the duties of man to man, which are "determined by either the dictates of enlightened self-interest or by the requirements of benevolence, or else by some reasonable balance and adjustment of the two." Self-interest has very commonly led superior races in mixed communities to reduce inferior ones to the condition of slaves. The evils and dangers of slavery are briefly shown. Some have thought, however, that, slavery being abandoned, the well-being of the superior portion of the community requires the getting rid of the obnoxious element by quiet, gradual extinction. But a community should be able to find a use for all its members, and not look forward with complacency and hope to the extinction of the several races composing it. Besides, this is very difficult to secure. Mr. Rawlinson says that if the Indians are disappearing it is not by the process of natural decay. It is disappearing mainly through absorption. The idea of getting rid of the Chinese by prohibiting immigration, or of the colored race by transplanting them to Africa, is impracticable, and if practicable, the true interest of the States would not be promoted by either measure. So far as the colored race is in question "for good or for evil," it will remain a crux for politicians to deal with, a problem for philosophers to discuss, a difficulty for practical persons to make the best of. What is that "best"? This enquiry Mr. Rawlinson proceeds to answer by advocating amalgamation as the true remedy, and ultimate absorption of the black race into the white as the end to be desired and aimed at. His first ground in support of this proposition is that the mixed races of mankind are superior to the pure one. As example he cites the two most important nations of the earliest ages—the Egyptians and Babylonians. He claims the same fact for the Greeks and Romans. Not one of the five great European nations are pure. They are the results of mixtures more or less extensive. In reference to the negro in this country, he points to the quadroon as of splendid physique and of fair average mental power. When the grade of quinteroon is reached, the negro type has disappeared altogether. If the present black population of America intermarried freely with the whites, the grade of quinteroon would be reached generally within a century. He asks, is there any evidence from history that the negro can be absorbed and assimilated, and that the result is advantageous, or not disadvantageous, to the absorbing community. He acknowledges there is not much evidence either in this country or in Hayti where the colored race, suddenly freed from restraint, let passion rather than reason guide them, and massacred or expelled their white oppressors. But he again refers to Egypt, where a white Caucasian race of incomers did not disdain to mix its blood with the native Nigritic element, and the result was a type of man of fair general physique, with a capacity of skull not much below that of the modern European and with great mental ability. The Pyramids, the rock tombs of Thebes and Memphis, the temples of Luxor and Karnac, exist to show what a hybrid nation, half white, half negro, could effect in architecture. In another Eastern country where white blood preponderated, a Nigritic race, "black-skinned and wholly haired," has been gradually absorbed and assimilated, so that now no trace of it is left. The "black-faced" Colchians are lost in the modern inhabitants of Imeritia, who are a fine people "of European features and form," noted for the beauty of their women, which is said to "exceed that of the Circassians." In America the absorption of four millions by thirty-six million might be expected to result similarly in the disappearance of the lower type altogether. It would cease to exist as a separate stock. Thus, too, all grievances which at present divide and estrange the black population from the white, splitting up the American people into two antagonistic nationalities, between which there may be an armed truce, but never any real hearty agreement, would cease. The negro difficulty would be gotten rid of, and the equality and brotherhood which are now preached by all, but practiced by few, would bring the present jarring elements into a really accordant and united whole.

Our object has been merely to give a bird's-eye view of the line of thought pursued by the author. The remedy proposed would certainly remove certain difficulties and troubles, but the remedy is not likely to be adopted unless there is a revolution little short of a miracle. Meanwhile, there are many duties of higher towards lower races which should receive faithful attention.

Record of Church Extension Work for 1878.

Rev. Dr. Kynett, Correspondent Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, has favored us with advanced sheets of his annual report. We cannot place before our readers in better shape the years work than the Doctor has himself. So we quote directly from his report. He says:

"The year 1878 has been the hardest we have had since our Church Extension work was fairly inaugurated. This has risen out of two causes, both of which proceed from the 'hard times' which, with all the evils that have had come out of them, we fully believe have passed their culmination in 1878.

The first of these causes is our diminished receipts. We have had nearly $30,000 less coming into our treasury than in 1877. True this falling off is not largely on account of collections, or other sources of revenue on which we rely for some good degree of regularity; and it does not therefore evidence a less degree of interest in this work by the Church generally. It is confined chiefly to bequests, amounts received subject to annuity, and return of loans. But the fact remains that we have had so much less for use in aiding churches that have appealed to us in time of need.

The second cause of our trouble has been the greater number, and greater urgency of the calls for aid. Many churches have for years past been struggling with debts, and have made temporary arrangements to meet the urgent demands of creditors, seeking, in a variety of ways to tide their affairs over into better times. But the times have grown harder, and the demands of creditors more urgent, and by closing of factories in some places, and failures of crops in others, and unusually large number have reached a crisis in their affairs in which they must have help or lose the results of all their toil and sacrifice.

Then there has been a marked increase in the demand for help in the newer States and Territories, arising out of the increase of immigration from the older to the newer parts of the country.

The Railway World, a good authority in such matters, tells us that:

"The quantity of new lands taken up in the West, North-west and South-west during 1878, is estimated at from 15,000,000 to 18,000,000 acres; and the number of inhabitants represented by this movement is reported to be at least 600,000, of whom nearly nine-tenths were formerly citizens of New England, the Middle States, and other States east of the Mississippi.

The lowest estimate of the immigration into Texas is 200,000, but the authorities of that State claim a much larger number. Kansas gained about 125,000 new inhabitants; Nebraska, nearly 100,000; Minnesota, 50,000; Dakota, about 100,000, and large additions were also made to the population of other Western States and Territories.

While the immigration of last year was considerably larger than in previous years, a movement of very considerable magnitude has been progressing ever since 1873; and some authorities estimate the population transferred during the last five years, from the crowded towns, cities, and older agricultural districts of the United States to comparatively new States and Territories at about 1,500,000, or half as many citizens as the thirteen original colonies contained at the time of their revolt against Great Britain, after a century and a half of immigration and settlement.

The present population of Dakotah, many portions of which had never ever been explored at the beginning of the present decade, has recently been reported by her Governor to be 150,000, or about as many people as Pennsylvania contained in 1776.

The growth of other new districts has been scarcely less marvellous. It is claimed that Kansas last year produced a larger wheat crop than any other State. Colorado is advancing rapidly, especially in the development of her railway and mining interests. Minnesota, known best fifteen years ago, as the scene of frightful Indian massacres, is now rapidly gaining a prominent rank in wealth and productiveness. Nebraska has attracted many new settlers, and a large proportion of them have prospered in their new home. And there is probably no recent year in which Texas did not attract a larger immigration than any other State."

This has given rise to many new Church enterprises, and the Macedonian cry has come from the long extended line from the Rio Grande on the south, to the Red River of the north.

It has been a matter of exceeding regret that we have not been able to respond promptly and generously to all those needy and worthy cases. Our cause has suffered, and these important interests have suffered, and the general Church has, in many cases, suffered irreparable loss from our inability to meet these just demands.

We have this helped year 264 churches but we ought to have aided, at the very least, 100 more. Our reports show that we close the year with 51 applications on file, and our treasury overdrawn by grants already made. To meet these calls, made as the Discipline provides, would require nearly $50,000 more than we have received; and informal appeals from many more have been urged in correspondence that would have come in due form if we could have given them any reasonable hopes of success. We close the year with a feeling of sadness over the little we have accomplished, knowing how much we might have done if the Church had placed the means at our disposal.

The Work in North Carolina.

The late session of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, showed a fair progress in the work during the past year, having increased 619 members, but fallen off 286 probationers. The membership as it stood before the division was: probationers 1,086, members 8,762, local preachers 124. Total 9,972; three thousand of whom are white. Baptized during the year 935, number of Sabbath-schools 5,889. The collections were small, namely: For missions $99 12, Church Extension $29 49, Freedmen's Aid $20 78, Sunday-school Union $8 04, Education $9 79, Tracts $4 78.

The chief interest of the session centered in the question of dividing on the color line.

The Methodist Advocate gives this account of the action:

The matter of division came up again, and after much deliberation, the Greensboro and Eastern districts (white) were formed into a new conference called the Southern Central Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The measure met considerable opposition, and the first vote taken on Saturday, stood six for, to two against, among the white brethren, and twelve for to sixteen against, among the colored. The question was brought up again on Monday and the vote taken as follows: White seven to one; colored sixteen to none against; some asking to be excused from voting. After the result was announced, W. W. Morgan offered the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That while we wish the Church at large to know that we, as colored members of the North Carolina Conference, did not wish a separation from our white brethren, we pray that God's blessing may go with them in their work, and that our common Father may watch over and bless us all.

We think that the above is an exact statement of the case. The white brethren asked to be allowed to form a new conference, believing that they could thus accomplish more good, and the colored brethren consented to the measure with that understanding. It is due to Brothers Alston and Morgan to say, that while they declined to vote on the ground above stated, it was distinctly understood that both of them desired the conference to remain together."

Central Tennessee Conference.

Sixth street, Memphis, Bro. Tellar, pastor, is engaged in a revival work. Feb. 13, three penitents at the altar, much interest manifested. The educational interests within the Conference bounds are being carefully looked after. The Conference College at Tullahoma, is agitating the question of a new building; Dickson Academy never had a brighter prospect. The West Tennessee Seminary will be saved. Efforts are being made to raise funds to remove the indebtedness.

Spruce street, Nashville, is engaged in another revival effort. God's presence has been felt in converting power and the church greatly strengthened.

Bishop Haven preached at the Spruce Street Church on the 20th. Saturday he left for Shelbyville, and preached for Bro. Carter.

Church Extension—The Way To Do It

Dr. Kynett, Corresponding Secretary, says: "We have just received the following: "I herein send you twelve dollars for Church Extension, from Marysville Circuit, Danville District, Illinois Conference. I am glad to say that this is our full assessment, and I raised it without any trouble. Please send me receipt. Also Annual as soon as it is out.' This is signed by the pastor, Robert Stephens. That is the way. He uses the Annual, presents the cause, gets the money, and sends it to the treasury without delay, and carries his receipt to conference. Everybody do likewise."

OUR SOUTHERN METHODISM

TENNESSEE.

Rev. H. Primm, Memphis: "The Lord has blessed us at Centenary Chapel. We have had 4 conversions, 12 additions to the Church, and the work is still going on. I have a small Sunday-school, and the children are very poor and in need of books. The SOUTHWESTERN, I think, will have a good circulation in Memphis.

TEXAS.

Rev. L. Calloway, Lovelady: "We have a large and flourishing Sunday-school here, and the pupils are eager for new books."

Rev. G. W. Townsend, San Antonio: "On my last round I was taken sick and I am ill yet. Everything is in a growing condition on my circuit."

Rev. Mack Henson, Austin: "Left Victoria 1st of Feb. '79 for Austin. Had a very cold, but safe trip. My wife and children have all been sick from the trip. Arrived here on the 4th inst. Met but few smiling faces, but a good many shy and cold ones. It does appear that the establishing of a new charge here, meets with determined opposition from those so styled as leaders and officials. I don't know whether they have been rebuked or encouraged for their conduct or not. Will open the doors of Simpson's Tabernacle first Sunday next month. Have visited Peter'sville 4 miles from town. And Burtise Prairie yesterday 3½ miles. Plenty material at each point to build up flourishing Sunday-schools of this charge; there is but little of it at present. We have a Sunday-school and 35 or 40 scholars, 5 teachers and a superintendent. The superintendent and teachers are full members or probationers of the old charge. I spoke to the superintendent about joining the new charge and he said "it seemed to him like a young calf being taken from its old mother, for him to leave the old church," and this feeling is very widespread. And there are those who are assiduously at work to prevent us gaining foothold.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. M. Adams, Meridian: "Elder Dunn is in the district, and spent three days with us. He has left for Shuqulak. He visited our school and made cheering remarks to teachers and students. His advice was to push forward up the hill of science."

Rev. W. H. H. Gallion, DeKalb: "I must say if it were not for the support of white friends, I would have to leave my charge. A supper was given for church expenses, and they came forward and helped us nobly. My prayer is that the Lord will bless them for their good work."

Rev. P. Blue, Corinth: "I reached my appointment two weeks ago, and began pastoral labors for this conference year. Our first work is to build a new parsonage; this we have begun, and have a part of the lumber on the ground. The ladies organized for this work. Our first quarterly meeting was held the 15th, Elder McLachlan was on hand, full of his usual interest.

Mary Loeper, Hickory, Newton county: "I wanted to tell you how much I thank you for sending us such a good preacher. We have a nice church in this place. We bought the Hickory Academy, a comfortable nice building, have a good membership, a Sabbath-school, and a prayer meeting; and also a school here for our people. We are much pleased with your paper and will try to get it circulated, and hope to get many subscribers.

Andrew's Institute, Alabama.

Rev. Wm. P. Miller, President of the Board of Trustees of this institution, gives the following encouraging note, under date of January 27.

The Board of Trustees met at J. W. Wesson's, Saturday last, and appointed a building committee, consisting of J. W. Wesson, G. Norton, and Professor M'Clesky. Assets in the way of promissory notes for $1,700 to be made up to $2,000 by Brother Wesson, were put into the hands of said committee. The contract is to be let out right away for the stone work to be done. We have a No. 1 stone mason in our midst. The foundation is already laid and a good lot of stone quarried ready for the chisel. We are all encouraged very much. The school is flourishing also.

The Louisiana Sunday School Convention.

The first Louisiana State Sunday School Convention has just adjourned. It was in every way a success. Next week we will give a full abstract of the proceedings.

Messrs. B. F. Jacobs, of Illinois, Rev. G. A. Peltz, of New York, and assistant Editor of the Sunday School Times, Mr. Porter of Illinois, and Statistical Secretary of the National Sunday School Convention, Ralf Wells, of New York, and others were present, and gave life and point and power to the Convention by their addresses and suggestions.

Foreign Missions.

Rev. D. C. Challis and family arrived at Rustchuck January 25, quite well. Rev. S. Thomoff was to be at Constantinople on the 31st. Rev. F. W. Flocken was at Rustchuck on the 29th somewhat unwell from the Danube fever.

We have a letter from Bro. Osgood, of Africa. He is still busy in the prosecution of his work in Africa. More from him in our next.

We hear by the way of a Michigan youth from our missionary family in Breillyin, India. This youth forsook his father's house some three years ago for the sea. He shipped and had to forsake a foundering vessel at the West India Islands. Shipped again for England and a return voyage to America, left his vessel and for want of any good sense, enlisted in the British army under an assumed name; was ordered, with his regiment to India, and was quartered at Bareilly or its vicinity, was visited by sister D. W. Thomas, wife of our missionary, who induced him to sign the temperance pledge and being found an American, was invited to the home of the missionary; was converted, obtained an honorable discharge from the army, and then by the missionary put on his way home—arriving in the port of New York on the 14th inst., and immediately presented his letter at the Mission rooms, and was then put on his way to his father's home.

We believe if every pastor would press this claim home to the people affectionately, yet earnestly, and not neglect it because of a fear that it will prevent them from receiving their own salaries, our missionary collections would soon be doubled, and the pastor's claims would be met.

Rev. J. P. Larson, Presiding Elder of Carlskrona District, Sweden, writes from Stockholm, January 14, 1879: "I have visited every mission station in this district the second time. The spiritual state is very good throughout the district. The public meetings are well attended, especially on Sundays. In some places the congregations are so large that many persons must return to their homes because of there being no room. The work of God seems to prevail powerfully and with great blessing. Several have been awakened to care and to be anxious for the salvation of their souls; and they have found the peace of God through Jesus Christ our Lord, for which we feel very thankful. According to the reports of the preachers, sent to me, 99 persons have united with our church for the past quarter, and not a few have been received into full connection. In some places in the district we have to rejoice at revivals still going on. We hope a great many will be converted for the coming quarter, and still more unite with the church. In several new places where we have bright prospects for success, preachers are wanted. Many ask for such. At Norrkoping a fine chapel has been dedicated during the quarter, and two more are being built.

God has been very good to us as to our economical state. Although a very hard pecuniary embarrassment is felt here at present, in consequence of which the wages have been very much reduced, and many of our brethren have had no employment for the winter; yet, notwithstanding, we have succeeded to raise money for all our necessary expenses, and besides, to pay off some of our chapel debts. In some places in the district the economical state is pressing indeed, but with God's blessing we can clear ourselves.

The Sunday-schools are progressing, and in many places flourishing. At Karlskrona the Sunday-school is attended by four hundred children, and at the Christmas feast presents to the amount of 300 crowns were distributed to these children, who had raised that sum themselves. At Wisby the Sunday-school is attended by about 250 children, and in most places of the district the Sunday-schools are attended by more than 100 children respectfully. The Christmas feasts have been a great rejoicing to the children and a great blessing. A great many of the children are converted to God. In general they are good, and learn their lessons well. May God continue to bless our Sunday-schools.

The sewing societies are working ardently indeed, for the success of the cause of God. They contribute very much to the paying off of the chapel debts. Just before Christmas the sewing society of every place had a meeting. To the glory of God I can say that the meetings have been very good. The sums have been larger in most places than we could expect, considering these pressing times, which proves that our members are very devoted, and are forsaking all for the work.

The preachers in charge, in general, labor zealously. Since Christmas they have preached almost every evening, and at least twice every Sunday. As before mentioned, uncommonly much people are coming together in our chapels; these are indeed crowded. Our preachers are visiting from house to house also. They attend the converted in their homes striving to lead them to Christ there too. At many places we have one meeting a week to the growing in grace of the members, and the pouring out of the Holy Ghost on the children of God.

These meetings have been very great blessings, and have been conducive to the being of one heart and one soul to the members. Where this is the case we have the greatest and most continual success. At present, the prospects for success are bright. Glory to God. Pray for us.

District Work in Texas.

ANDERSON, TEXAS, Feb. 17, 1879.

MR. EDITOR: I wrote last from Hempstead, stating that I would hold my next quarterly meeting there. We had a glorious time. The Son was with us from the first to the last. I fell very much in love with the people there; they are friendly, kind and hospitable, and true to the old church. Bro. Lee has commenced improving his church: he wants to add ten feet to the length and raise the roof, adding to the heighth. He is resolved to have as nice a church at Hempstead, as he left at Bryan. He is doing all he can for the ADVOCATE. I went from Hempstead to Courtney, preached four or five times, discharged all the duties usual to a quarterly meeting. We had four or five conversions and a number united with the church. Bro. Guess, the pastor, was at his post and gave me a cordial welcome to his work. He is a sweet-spirited Christian gentleman and his people love him very much. During my stay of a week at Courtney the people endeared themselves to me by many acts of kindness. May the Lord bless them for it.

From Courtney I went to Navasota. Found Bro. McKenzie, pastor, at work. He seemed glad to see me and did all in his power to make me happy. He is a young minister, and from my acquaintance with him, I think him one of our most promising men. He seems to be a man of unbending integrity. We had a good meeting at Navasota; one convert, and the church was generally revived. They are building a fine church there, and will perhaps finish it this year. We have a good people at Navasota.

Left Navasota Friday for Anderson, ten miles from the railroad. God came here with us, and we have had a glorious time. Bro. Bookman is the pastor. He is a good man and can accomplish great good among his people. The weather being cold and churches open, he has not done much since conference; but he promises to give himself to the work now. We are not very strong, as a church, in Anderson, but the few members we have hold their heads up and say they are proud of our church and resolved to do all they can. Our people came in from the country from every direction on Sunday and we had a fine congregation. These are good people. I preach to-night eight miles in the country. Bros. McKenzie, Guess and Bookman are doing all they can for the ADVOCATE. I go from here to Millican. Pray for us. W. L. MOLDOW.

It is now pretty generally conceded that the claim of the M. E. Church, South, against the United States Government, for the use and occupation of their publishing house and fixtures, during the war will not be paid—not at present at least. We have never thought it would be paid during the life of the present generation. It will be paid after a long while, we have little doubt.—Georgia Advocate.

The Freedwomen.

WORK PROPOSED.—The purpose is to employ Christian women to visit the houses, and churches and Sunday-schools of our colored people, and to labor especially for the salvation of the souls and bodies of the colored women. Mothers' meetings, and meetings for girls and young women will be organized; also sewing-circles, where the simpler duties of household work will be taught and instructions given as to personal habits and tastes. Special efforts will everywhere be made to increase attendance upon our Sunday-schools and churches, and the New Orleans University. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in New Orleans alone fourteen churches among the colored people with a membership of over 3000. This [illegible] will be our advisers and assistants.

MISSIONARIES' HOME.—We have rented and [illegible] Second street [illegible] will reside, and where meetings can be held when ever desired.

VOLUNTARY HELPERS.—Besides those who are employed and give their whole time to the work there are many who [illegible] Sabbath; or a day or two of each week to this work of the Master. Such will please call at the Home or on Mrs. Hartzell.

OUR PRESENT MISSIONARIES.—At present the following are our missionaries: Mrs. A. M. Ryder, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, of Normal, Illinois; Miss Lizzie Thompson, of Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephens, of New Orleans.

MONEY.—No work of this kind can be carried forward without money. No debts will be made. All money given will be conscientiously applied and a published report given. We have some cards on which is printed a simple pledge to raise ten dollars in ten cent subscriptions. Send for a card and help us, or if you [illegible] you can direct.

THIS COLUMN.—This column of the Southwestern has been devoted to our work, and in it will be found the announcement of meetings, extracts from letters, notes [illegible] with the work.

He would listen to what his children read, meagre as their opportunities were, and be influenced by their reading, unconsciously sometimes. They were opening a new world to him, in their slow halting way, perhaps he understood it all the better. Be this as it may, these simple Bible truths, coming to him indirectly, were sufficient to make, of an earnest worker, an earnest Christian.

The Book Committee.

The annual meeting of the Book Committee commenced on Wednesday, the 12th inst., at 12 a. m., in New York, and held five sessions, closing Thursday night. All the members were present, including the ministerial representatives from the twelve districts which extended over the continent, and the six laymen of the Local Committee at New York and Cincinnati. The agents were in attendance, except Dr. Nelson, whose illness detained him. The editors of the Advocates were generally present, except those at New Orleans, Pittsburgh and on the Pacific coast. A resolution of sympathy with Dr. Nelson was adopted, and another of peculiar fitness, also, recording "our gratitude to God for our protection during the year, and the privilege of so meeting together at this annual gathering."

The day previous the Eastern and Western section met to look into the affairs of their respective publishing houses at New York and Cincinnati, which enabled them to prepare business for the general committee. The exhibits of both publishing houses show an increase in the book trade of many thousands of dollars. Periodical sales are less than reported last year ago. A careful estimate of outlay needed for correspondence led to a large diminution of the amount allowed, the expenses of the Depositories which are continued, and for the suspension of those that can not be made profitable.

The usual committees were appointed to estimate salaries of the bishops, editors, and agents, to estimate the conference collections for the Episcopal Fund, and to prepare the report [illegible] conferences. The various interests involved in the [illegible] ties of the Committee were carefully considered, and the outlook for future years is generally very much improved. March 2, 1879.—THE PRAYER OF THE PENITENT.

SCRIPTURE.—Ps. 51: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sins."—2.

TOPIC.—A New Heart

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

Prefatory.—The key to this. Sam. 11, 12: 1-14. That dark chapter in David's life has had the noonday light of the Scriptures thrown upon it. Its facts are as well known as his best heroisms. There is in it adultery, treachery, and murder that have no meaner parallels in all history. For a year or more God waited for David to repent. During that time his harp was mute, and the anthems of his praise ceased. The evil spirit which he had often charmed away from Saul now had possession of him. God took sterner measures to drive it away from him than he had with Saul. He sent Nathan to him with that beautiful and touching parable of the pet ewe lamb taken from poor man by a rich and powerful neighbor who spared to take of his own flocks to feed his guest. "Thou art the man" awoke the conscience of the king so that he confessed his transgressions, and was forgiven, though the consequences of his guilt still continued to sting him in after years like scorpions. With the passing away of his impenitence and rebellion, he tuned his harp once more, though at first it only breathed out penitential sighs. This Psalm shows that if he had grievously sinned, he also sincerely and deeply repented.

Petition for Mercy (1, 2).—David's prayer is that of the publican—"God be merciful to me a sinner," confessing in advance that he has done that for which mercy is needed. He does not ask it on the ground of his deserts. Arraigned before the bar of God, at the very first he throws himself upon the mercy of the Judge. He knew that he was a God whose loving kindness were very great. To forgive one of his main characteristics. He had pardoned again and again, until such evidences of his grace had become an infinite multitude. He desired to have the record of his sins erased.

Confession of Sin (3-5).—For I acknowledge. No judge can pardon a criminal so long as he pleads "Not guilty." And here David in humble confession says, "I am the man." My transgressions. Plural number, that one monstrous sin had brought into his view many other sins. My sin is ever before me. What sinner ever fairly gets rid of the annoying presence of his sin? Pleasures for a time may bid it flee, but it fills again the first unoccupied moment. Intoxication is only a temporary escape.

Against thee, thee only have I sinned. For the time being David was so impressed with the magnitude of his sin against God that he lost sight of the relations that sin bore to those whom he had wronged. Sin against God seemed comparatively so monstrous that the other appeared to be as nothing. "But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ." 1 Cor. 8: 12. "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it not unto me." And done this evil in thy sight. David had confessed his guilt, and the Judge had beheld it, therefore there was no escape from the fact that punishment was deserved.

Behold I was shapen in iniquity. He was oppressed with a sense of the entire sinfulness of his nature. He had sinned not only this once, but from the beginning. He was not a sinner by accident, but from purpose. In sin did my mother conceive me. Neither was this an accusation of his mother. For she was chaste, and his father was a good man. Like the other, this was only an acknowledgement of "the deep tap-roots of his sin." He realized, as we all ought to realize, the deep-seatedness and the exceeding sinfulness of sin.

Prayer for a new Heart (6-13).—Behold thou desirest truth in the inward parts. And in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom. He had already shown to him the corruption of his inner nature, and that is the first step towards wisdom. No man can become truly wise who has a false conception of himself. Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean. Here again is another reference to the leprous condition of sin. The leper was purified with hyssop and the blood of the Paschal lamb—after his healing. David, then, must have looked upon himself as cured of his sin, but was still desirous of having the taint of that sin removed. Wash me and I shall be whiter than snow.

Make me to hear joy and gladness, [illegible] that the way of the transgressor is hard. Hide thy face from my sins. That was the only way by which he could obtain any joy and gladness. He asked God to do for him what he could not do for himself. Blot out all mine iniquities. Create in me a clean heart. The sow that is washed will go again to her wallowing in the mire. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." Man triumphs over sin in the new birth. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." He has obtained the clean heart for which David prayed. And renew a right spirit within me. Rather "a steadfast spirit."

Cast me not away from thy presence. Here again is the suggestion of a leper, driven away from the habitations of men on account of the loathsomeness of his disease. Take not thy holy Spirit from me.

Restore unto me the joys of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit. An unwilling spirit makes hard work of anything, but especially of God's service. This part of David's prayer there are many who need to offer. Then will I teach trangessors thy ways, etc. A man in peril knows how to appreciate the peril of others. The reformed drunkard has the most intense desire to save others who are in the condition in which he has been. The sailor just rescued from the dangers of the sea gasps the name of his still unrescued comrade before he asks anything for himself. In like manner those who have been rescued from the power of sin and of death should have within them the same zeal to save others. It was David's first thought that he would seek out an audience of sinners like himself, and win them by telling of his own sad story, and of the Lord's mercy to him. And that resolve was well kept.

Zion's Herald speaks thus strongly on the late debate in Congress on the enforcement of the Constitutional Amendments:

The debate over Mr. Edmunds' resolutions affirming the constitutionality of the war amendments, and the duty of Congress to provide for their enforcement, revealed the still living and dominant presence in Congress of the very spirit that occasioned the late war. Southern senators were willing to admit the binding force of the amendments, but refused to permit Congress to secure directly the execution even of its constitutional laws; it must depend solely upon the States for this; and this simply makes us a confederacy, without a national existence worth contending for. When the fugitive slave law was to be executed at the North, if it had been dependent upon State magistracies, not a black man would have been returned; but the United States appeared here in Massachusetts in the person of its own officers, and marched Southern slaves down our streets surrounded by the National Marines. We deserve not the name of a government unless the proper federal officers can enforce, in all parts of the land, the national rights of all its citizens and defend them in their exercise.

The Democratic House of Representatives of Alabama has elected a colored clergyman for its chaplain.

The Portuguese government has ordered the Governor of Mozambique to send troops and three corvettes to Delagoa Bay, on the South African coast.

Gov. McCreary received a telegram from Jackson, Breathitt county, stating that Alfred Gambril was sentenced to imprisonment for life in the penitentiary for the murder of Judge Barnett, in November last.

The Democrats and Kearneyists in the California Constitutional Convention have refused to place in the constitution of that State a provision which declares that there is no constitutional right of secession from the Union on the part of any State.

In the Senate, February 13, Mr. Kellogg introduced a bill to secure the completion of a line of railway from San Antonio, Texas, to a point at or near Fort Clark, and thence to a point at or near El Paso, upon the Rio Grande, to be known as the Mexican and Pacific extension of the Galveston and San Antonio Railway.

The estimate of the change made in the House of Representatives after the census of 1880 gives a gain of sixty-six members on the present ratio, of which the Middle and Eastern States will have eleven, the Western States forty, and the Southern States fifteen. According to this estimate, the Western States will have a larger gain than all the others put together.

A terrible boiler explosion took place a few days since at the head of Stockton slough, on Eldorado street, Stockton, California. A crowd of 200 assembled to witness the trial of a new propeller pump, set in the slough, and run by a threshing engine. Those near were prostrated, and the body of the engineer was blown 150 feet through the crowd. The dead lay prostrate in every direction. Ten or twelve dead bodies lay in one heap at the northwest corner of the bridge; others lay strewn, dead and dying, on the street; some were blown from fifty to one hundred feet. The heads of some were blown to pieces; others were blown to the ground with such force as to break every bone in their bodies. Faces, hands and whole persons were steamed in dirt, smoke and cinders. The wounded were promptly cared for and the dead left undisturbed until the excitement had subsided, when they were removed to the coroner's office. The explosion was the result of recklessness on the part of the engineer. The steam gauge refused to work, and after the engineer had attempted to fix it and failed, he screwed down the safety valve and went on with his work. The explosion occurred about fifteen minutes afterwards. Sixteen persons were killed and twenty-six wounded—three or four fatally. Many were blown a considerable distance and escaped uninjured.

Memorial Service.

AT ASBURY CHAPEL, HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

On account of so much rainy weather before and after Christmas, memorial services of the members and friends of Asbury Chapel, who died during the late epidemic, was not held until last Sunday, the 16th inst. The church was suitably draped for the occasion, and crowded to its utmost capacity. The relatives of the deceased members and friends all being in deep mourning, and the Mutual Aid Society having lost some of its members, they turned out in their usual form, and every thing was so solemn, that it would make one think that "Friend after friend departs;

Who has not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts,
That find not here an end."

Exactly at 3 o'clock, P. M., the pastor commenced the services by reading the nineteenth Psalm, and singing the Hymn commencing "O God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come," and lead in prayer, then addressing the large audience refering to the life and deaths of the deceased. Though great excitement prevailed during the yellow fever, yet many of the members and friends died in great triumph of faith in the "Blessed Lord Jesus," and left glorious news behind for their friends to meet them in Heaven. Prof's Crane and W. W. Hooper, then delivered intelligent and stiring addresses, and Brother Anderson Burns lead in an earnest and comprehensive prayer. The services then closed, and all present were willing to say, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

New Books.

VOICES FROM BABYLON; or the RECORDS OF DANIEL, THE PROPHET. By Joseph A. Seiss, D. D., author of "A Miracle in Stone," etc. 12 mo, cloth extra, price $1.50.

A course of special lectures, recently delivered, intended to be a thorough introduction to the contents of the book of Daniel, and to review and vindicate the views of early Christians with regard to it. It embodies the results of modern explorations and criticism, and is accompanied with a critical revised translation of the entire book of the great Babylonian prophet. The miracles and predictions given in the book, the wonders of ancient empires, and the characters and doings of their principal sovereigns, are comprehensively discussed, and much recent information touching these early kingdoms has been brought to illustrate and clear up the prophet's narrations. The whole is condensed, animated, and in popular form, which cannot fail to interest and impress. The book embraces nearly 400 pages, handsomely printed. Potter & Coates, publishers, Philadelphia.

New Publications.

The American Agriculturist for March is at hand, presenting a tempting variety of agricultural matter.

Sunday-school Committees and Superintendents will find, in the Helping Hand, a new collection of Sunday school music, also adapted for the home circle and prayer meeting. Filled with contributions of good composers, it is offered as a choice collection of pure strength-giving scriptural songs. Sample copies, 35 cents, or $3.60 per dozen by mail. Geo. D. Newhall & Co., 62 West Fourth street, Cincinnati.

The National Repository for March contains two illustrated articles—the first by W. H. Larrabee, on "Cyprus," and the other by Prof. J. H. Worman on "New Amsterdam." The account of the Dutch settlements in New York and the pictures striking. Dr. Wise writes about "John Clare, the Peasant Poet," and S. G. Arnold about "Old Virginia," an article of superior merit. Mrs. Dickinson approaches the conclusion of her story, "Among the Thorns," and Miss M. E. Winslow contributes a romantic little sketch entitled "The Fatal Misteltoe." Several poems and selected articles, together with the usual "Editorial Miscellany," the editor's remarks about "France as a Mission Field," the Church will do well to consider. The Repository is published monthly at $3.00 a year, post-paid. Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Chicago or St. Louis.

Workingmen.

Before you begin your heavy spring work after a winter of relaxation, your system needs cleansing and strengthening to prevent an attack of Ague, Billious or Spring Fever, or some other Spring sickness that will unfit you for a season's work. You will save time, much sickness and great expense if you will use one bottle of Hop Bitters in your family this mouth. Don't wait. See another column.

Southwestern Christian Advocate.

1879.

Nelson & Phillips, Publishers. J. C. Hartzell, B.D., Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, NOVEMBER 1, 1878.

DEAR BROTHER:—The SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is your official church paper, and is published by order of the General Conference, at New Orleans. Besides religious news, the SOUTHWESTERN will contain articles on education, agriculture and politics. The more your people read from a good paper the more intelligent and active will they be as Christians, and the better will they support you and help in all the work of the church.

To aid you in the good work of circulating the SOUTHWESTERN we make the following most liberal propositions:

I. Two Months Free.

Every New subscriber for 1879 will receive the paper Free for the remainder of 1878. For example: If a subscriber gives you his name and two dollars November 1, 1878, he will receive the paper the two months remaining in 1878 and the whole year of 1879, making in all fourteen months for one year's subscription.

II. Cash Commissions to Agents.

All travelling Ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are our authorized agents. We pay our agents the following cash commissions:

1. We send them their own paper for one dollar a year, just half price. This is the same as paying one dollar cash on their subscription.

2. We pay twenty-five cents cash for every yearly subscriber. Whenever an agent collects two dollars for us he is authorized to keep twenty-five cents from the amount as his commission, and send us $1.75.

III. A Steel Engraving of John Wesley to Every Subscriber.

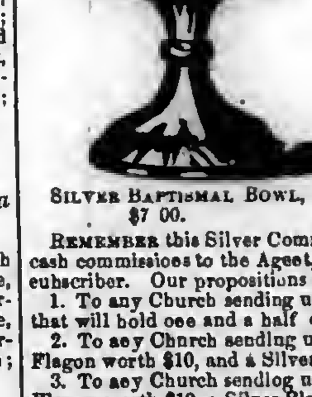
We give as a present to every yearly subscriber, a large and elegant steel engraving of John Wesley, the great founder of Methodism. This engraving retails at $1.50, but as we own the original plate and do our own publishing, we can afford to present one of these beautiful pictures to every subscriber to the SOUTHWESTERN. The best judges pronounce the portrait a life-like picture of Wesley, and the engraving is first-class. The picture is 16x20 inches in size. Remember, we give this engraving as a present to every yearly subscriber as soon as the two dollars are paid.

IV. Silver Communion Ware for the Churches.

All our Churches need Communion Service Sets and we want them to have the best. By a most fortunate combination of circumstances we are enabled to put it within the reach of almost any Church to receive as a Present some of the best triple-plated Silver Communion Ware that is made. Here are pictures of the different pieces:

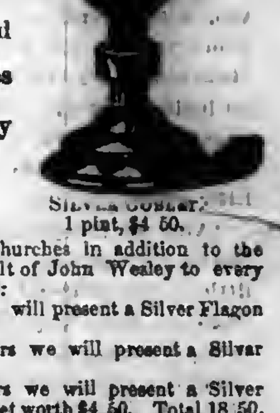
SILVER FLAGON, 1½ quarts, $10 00
" " 3 " 14 00

SILVER PLATE. 10 inches wide. $4.00



SILVER BAPTISMAL BOWL, $7 00.

These prices are the Manufacturers lowest retail prices. This silver ware is such as is used in the best Churches throughout the country



SILVER GOBLET, 1 pint, $4 50.

REMEMBER this Silver Communion ware is given to the Churches in addition to the cash commissions to the Agent, and the steel engraved portrait of John Wesley to every subscriber. Our propositions to the Churches are as follows:

1. To any Church sending us Twenty Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon that will hold one and a half quarts, and worth $10 00.

2. To any Church sending us Twenty-five Cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, and a Silver Plate worth $4. Total $14.

3. To any Church sending us Thirty-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, and a Silver Goblet worth $4 50. Total 18 50.

4. To any Church sending us Fifty cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon worth $10, a Silver Plate worth $4, a Silver Goblet worth $4 50, and a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7. Total $25 50.

5. To any Church sending us Seventy-five cash Subscribers we will present a Silver Flagon holding three quarts, worth $14, a Silver Baptismal Bowl worth $7, two Silver Goblets worth $9 and two Silver Plates worth $8. Total, $38.

☞NOTICE.—These magnificent presents are sent to the Churches complying with these terms, as soon as the money is received by us. This offer stands good for the whole year of 1879, and the present will be sent whenever, during the year, the money is received.

Our Liberal Offer.

We claim that the offers we have made on the preceding pages are very liberal. It will be noticed that we propose helping—FIRST, the preacher, who acts as our agent in getting subscribers for us; SECOND, every subscriber who takes the paper and pays for it; THIRD, the congregation where twenty or more subscribers are obtained.

FOR EXAMPLE: Suppose a pastor and his people secure twenty yearly subscribers. At two dollars apiece that would be forty dollars. As the preacher gets twenty-five cents for every subscriber, five dollars of the forty dollars will belong to him. As soon as the remaining thirty-five dollars are received by us, we will send as a present to the congregation an elegant silver flagon worth ten dollars. We will also send twenty steel engravings of John Wesley, one for each subscriber.

☞Let it be understood that EVERY YEARLY SUBSCRIBER gets a steel engraving as soon as his subscription is paid, and for every two dollars collected the pastor will get twenty-five cents. The elegant Silver Communion Ware given to the Churches is IN ADDITION to what we give the pastor and each subscriber.

Our Terms.

1. The SOUTHWESTERN costs $2 a year, cash in advance. We pay the postage.

2. Where the preacher will be personally responsible for the money, we will send the papers; but no commissions will be paid the preachers, or steel engravings sent the subscribers, or silver ware sent to the churches, until the money is received at our office.

3. Cash in advance is the best rule for all parties. We get the money and are saved embarrassment: the preacher gets his commission: the subscriber gets his steel engraving at once, and the church gets its silver communion ware for immediate use.

4. Send the money by Postoffice Order whenever possible.

BEGIN THE CANVASS AT ONCE.

We need five thousand subscribers, and if all our Agents will take hold of the canvass at once, and push it for sixty days, we shall have them.

Let the canvass begin at once. We will send you a specimen copy of the steel engraving to show the people. Take this engraving and a copy of the paper and show them to your congregation, and explain the value of the paper and our liberal offers.

Has your Church a good Set of Communion Ware? If not, you need one, and now is your chance to get one as a gift. Explain our proposition to give Silver Communion Ware, to your official board, and get the brethren to unite in helping to secure twenty or more subscribers, and secure some of our magnificent presents.

We will furnish you all the specimen copies of the SOUTHWESTERN you want, free, whenever you ask for them.

New Church Record.

We can now sell the "Record" at a price much less than we have ever been able to do. It is a large quarto, containg about 180 pages, divided into seven sections, namely:

Record of Pastors.
Record of Classes.
Record of Official Members.
Alphabetical Record of Full Members.
Record of Probationers.
Record of Baptisms.
Record of Marriages.

We are confident that this record will meet the demand long felt, namely, a cheap book, suitable for a majority of our churches. Price, $2.50.

Young Folks' Corner.

HOW WE LEARN.

Great truths are deeply bought. The common truth,
Such as men give and take from day to day,
Comes in the common walk of easy life,
Blown by the careless wind across our way.

Bought in the market at the current price,
Bred of the smile, the jest, perchance the bowl;
It tells no tale of daring or of worth,
Nor pierces even the surface of a soul.

Great truths are greatly won. Not found by chance,
Nor wafted on the breath of summer dream;
But grasped in the great struggle of the soul,
Hard buffeting with adverse wind and stream.

Not in the general mart 'mid corn and wine;
Not in the merchandise of gold and gems;
Not in the world's gay hall of midnight mirth;
Not 'mid the blaze of regal diadems;

But in the day of conflict, fear and grief,
When the strong hand of God put forth, in might,
Plows up the sub-soil of the stagnant heart,
And brings the imprisoned truth-seed to the light.

Wrung from the troubled spirit, in hard hours
Of weakness, solitude, perchance of pain,
Truth springs, like harvest from the well-plowed field,
And the soul feels it has not wept in vain.

Pave Your Way to Independence.

"Come, Charlie, I want you to drive a few nails in the shed for me," said Nettie to her brother the other day.

Charlie was splitting wood at the time, and the father overhearing the request of his daughter, said:

"Why not drive them yourself?"

"[illegible] I can't," she replied. "[illegible] McCarthy says there's no [illegible] in the book. Come here [illegible] show you how to drive the [illegible]."

With hammer in one hand and nails in the other he went into the shed, drove a few into the door, and then gave the remainder to Nettie. She found it an easy thing to drive the nails, and felt quite proud of her achievement in the mechanical art.

[illegible] having completed the work, the [illegible] said:

"[illegible] that lesson makes you [illegible]. Some of these days [illegible] you how to drive a horse, [illegible] knife, and whittle, [illegible] cutting your fingers. Don't [illegible] the doors creak on their hinges for the want of an oiled feather, or the little children's [illegible] own shoes, get hard [illegible] Winter time for want of a [illegible]."

"And as for you, boy," said his father, turning to Charlie and his little seven-year-old brother, "you ought to learn how to make a bed, sweep a room, or sew on a button. A little cooking will not hurt you. [illegible] a beefsteak and fresh fish [illegible]. I cooked in my day, and my [illegible] told me when I was a boy, [illegible] I could beat any boy making a pot of coffee. There is no telling what your lot may be, or where you will be cast some time during your life. The most helpless people I have met with were those who could do only one kind of work. All [illegible] and girls should learn [illegible] thing very well and make [illegible] dependence for a living, [illegible] so much skill as you [illegible]. It costs nothing to carry [illegible], and it enables you to [illegible] way to independence.

The Match Boy.

[illegible] in his sermon to [illegible] Westminster Abbey, [illegible] very touching little [illegible]. Not long ago, in [illegible] gentlemen were [illegible] door of a hotel one [illegible] when a little boy [illegible] blue face, his feet [illegible] with the cold, and [illegible] cover him but a [illegible] came and said [illegible] buy some matches." [illegible] any," the gentle[illegible] they are only a [illegible] little fellow [illegible] we don't [illegible] gentleman said [illegible] give ye two [illegible] the boy said at [illegible] of him, the [illegible] the story says: [illegible] then I found I [illegible] said, 'I will buy [illegible] 'Oh, do buy [illegible] please,' the [illegible] ran and, [illegible] I am very [illegible] the shilling [illegible] I waited for [illegible] Then I [illegible] my shilling: [illegible] the boy's [illegible] like to [illegible] in the [illegible] little boy [illegible] he was [illegible] smaller [illegible] and his matches and your sevenpence, and both his legs are broken, and the doctor says he'll die; and that's all.' And then, putting the fourpence on the table, the poor child broke down with great sobs. So I fed the little man, and I went with him to see Sandie. I found that the two little things lived alone, their father and mother being dead. Poor Sandie was lying on a bundle of shavings. He knew me as soon as I came in, and said, 'I got the change, sir, and was coming back, and then the horse knocked me down and both my legs were broken. And oh, Reuby! little Reuby! I am sure that I am dying and who will take care of you when I am gone! What will you do, Reuby?' Then I took his hand and said I would always take care of Reuby. He understood me, and he had just strength to look up at me as if to thank me; the light went out of his blue eyes. In a moment—

"He layed within the light of God
Like a babe upon the breast,
Where the wicked cease from troubling,
And the weary are at rest.'"

Churches and Their Sunday Schools.

The following figures, taken from the United Brethren Almanac, by Our Bible Teacher are well worth noting. Several denominations do not appear in the list, but those that do can see at a glance their position with reference to the Sabbath school:

	Members.	S. S Teachers and Scholars.
Methodist Episcopal	1,697,126	843,920
Regular Baptist (North and South)	1,946,161	1,706,557
M. E. Church South	731,039	396,456
Presbyterian (North)	557,674	581,606
Protestant Episcopal	268,584	271,816
African M. E.	352,917	108,538
African M. E. Zion	204,000	118,000
United Brethren	152,231	177,317
Reformed (German)	148,493	100,000
Methodist Protestant	115,644	105,000
Presbyterian (South)	113,550	66,624
Evangelical Association	106,261	125,629
Cumberland Presbyterian	100,000	55,000
Reformed (Dutch)	79,280	77,309

Only five in the above list have a greater membership in the Sunday-school than in the church. In several the church membership is nearly double that of the Sabbath-school. The list is a test of faith in child training and conversion. If "coming church," as we believe, is to be the one who to-day bestows the most care upon the children, there are some demonstrations that need to be more active in that direction.

Relative Illiteracy of the Races.

The Charlotte (N. C.) Observer says:

Congressman Cain, of South Carolina, made a speech in the House of Representatives, presenting tables and figures showing the number of white and colored people in the different States of the Union who can neither read nor write. The speech presents some interesting statements, whether reliable or not we have no means of knowing, and as a comparative statement, it is worthy some attention. The table shows that there are in the State of North Carolina, for instance 11,419 colored persons who cannot read, against 53,868 whites in a similarly unfortunate state of ignorance; in the same State there are of colored people who cannot write, 230,606, while of whites there are 166,397.

The general result of the Congressman's figuring is that throughout the South, relative population of whites and blacks everywhere considered, there are more whites than blacks who cannot read, and more blacks than whites who cannot write.

Every girl who passes through the Boston schools now receives three years' instruction in various kinds of needlework, and is capable of being an expert seamstress. It is said that the benefits resulting from this instruction are seen in the improved appearance of the children's clothing in the schools, and are felt in thousands of homes.

Lost Friends.

NOTE.—We receive many letters asking for information about lost friends. All such letters will be published in this column. We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notices. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN.—I desire information concerning Frank Pelam, or any of his heirs. He lived at New Orleans before the war and I heard he moved to Knoxville, Tenn. If you can learn any thing of him, please publish it in the SOUTHWESTERN.

THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S
Celebrated American
WORM SPECIFIC OR VERMIFUGE.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eye-lid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,
DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE
will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY
in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant.

The genuine DR. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrapper.

DR. C. McLANE'S
LIVER PILLS
are not recommended as a remedy "for all the ills that flesh is heir to," but in affections of the liver, and in all Bilious Complaints, Dyspepsia and Sick Headache, or diseases of that character, they stand without a rival.

Lectures on Preaching
Delivered before the Theological Students of Yale College.
By Rev. Matthew Simpson, D.D., LL.D.
(One of the Bishops of the M. E. Church.)
Cloth, 12mo. Price..............$1.50

These admirable Lectures embrace the following topics, delivered in the order here stated:
Lecture I. The Nature and Work of the Christian Ministry.
Lecture II. The Call to the Ministry.
Lecture III. The Preacher Personally.
Lecture IV. Indirect Preparation for the Pulpit.
Lecture V. The Preparation of a Sermon.
Lecture VI. The Delivery of a Sermon.
Lecture VII. Ministerial Power.
Lecture VIII. The Influence of the Pastorate on the Pulpit.
Lecture IX. Collateral and Miscellaneous Work.
Lecture X. Is the Modern Pulpit a Failure?

It is needless to say that these topics are treated in a masterly manner—clearly, forcibly, practically; as becomes both the gravity and importance of the subjects discussed, and the reputation of their author as a "workman who needeth not to be ashamed." No minister should be without them, as none can carefully and thoughtfully read them without profit. In them there is nothing showy, but they present the ripe fruit of the matured thought of a long period of ministerial usefulness and oversight. They are weighty, well-considered teachings.

This book will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Address,

The New Hymnal.

The Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences at their late sessions, made it the duty of every preacher having charge of a station or circuit to see that their pulpits were supplied with a New Hymnal, and all were to use their influence in having the people supply themselves with Hymnals and to use them in the public congregation and in social meetings.

We are now prepared to supply the following styles of the Hymnal at the prices named. Our terms are cash before sending, or we will send by express C. O. D. Specimen copies sent by mail on receipt of price.

ANTI-FAT

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week. In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN'S drug store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from 192 pounds to 162 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, SMITH, DOOLITTLE & SMITH, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks, and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N. Y., write: "To THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen,—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp.

WOMAN

By an immense practice at the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, having treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman, I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and positive remedy for these diseases.

To designate this natural specific, I have named it
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon personal observation. I have, while witnessing its positive results in the special diseases incident to the organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. On its merits, as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. (For conditions, see pamphlet wrapping bottle.) The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhœa, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing-down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, and Female Weakness. I do not extol this medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.

Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, a book of over 900 pages, sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.

Favorite Prescription sold by Druggists.

Dr. J. M. Howe's
Inhaling Tube!
—AND—
COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have abounded faith in its philosophy. n3 79 tf.

DUTY.

Oh, ask not thou, how shall I bear
The burden of to-morrow?
Sufficient for the day is care,
Its evil and its sorrow.

A Life of Pleasure.

What harm can there be in a life of pleasure? This question implies the affirmative that there is no harm in a life devoted to pleasure. We say a life devoted to pleasure; a life in which pleasure is the great aim and purpose. Pleasure, of course, assumes various forms, or, rather, gratifies itself in various objects. It is not necessary to mention those gross things in which men indulge—such as the drunkard and libertine seek. There are pleasures that make great demands upon our exertions, and in that respect bear a great resemblance to work. The strain may be on the bodily powers, as in hunting, or in what are termed athletic sports, or the demand may be on the mental powers, as in games of skill, and in the pursuits of science, learning, art. There are the amusements in which the exhilaration of spirits, the friendly encounter, the brisk laughter, and other gaieties while away time. There is the pleasure intimately associated with the "fashionable world," or "society," as it is affectedly called, just as if none but themselves could know by experience the meaning of that word; as if the meeting of the intelligent and the cultivated, the converse of the loving, the good and the useful were undeserving the name of society. Let us not be misunderstood. We are not condemning pleasure. Pleasure has its place in every human life just as truly as work and religion. But God's word speaks of those who are pre-eminently "lovers of pleasure" more than lovers of God. These are the votaries of pleasure, and make this a substitute for real life. Did God endow us with faculties that ally us with the wisest of our race, that we might live the life of a butterfly or a kitten? Or supposing our pleasures to be of the more intellectual sort, did He intend that we should forfeit those higher enjoyments which spring from the moral and spiritual nature by which we are more especially allied to Himself?

A life of pleasure, moreover, is a selfish life. Pleasure is self-pleasing. It is not meant that there is no pleasure in life of an opposite character. But where pleasure is the habitual object of pursuit, there must be selfishness. This is no untrue theory. Mr. Gladstone, speaking of the world of fashion—the pleasure-seeking world — lately said, that of all the measures passed, within his memory, for the amelioration of the sufferings of the wronged and oppressed; the abolition of the slave trade, and the extinction of slavery itself, and several others, there was not one which had received the support of the West End, that is, the fashionable part of London: nay, they and everyone met with the most passionate opposition from that quarter. A tendency of a life of pleasure is to dry up the fountain of human sympathy. So true is it, that "she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." Shall we dwell upon the temptations to which a life of pleasure exposes its devotees? The pleasures may often be harmless in themselves, but they are often associated with what is evil. Their tendency is to augment the love of pleasure for its own sake. They thus leave the mind unprotected against the solicitations of pleasures which are not innocent. The theatre is not an evil in itself, or abstractly considered. But going to the theatre has, nevertheless, often been among the first steps which led a young man to moral and social ruin. When pleasure becomes the characteristic of a life, that life is forfeit to all the nobler purposes of existence.

A life of pleasure obviously unfits men for another world. We shall never be ready for heaven if we seldom think seriously about it. We drown away our thoughts from that world. Men are loth to leave pleasures which they love, for those for which they have no desire, even when there is not the more terrible distress of an uneasy conscience, accusing them of a wasted existence, a voice which says: "But know thou that for all these things God will bring thee unto judgment."

The Louisiana State Sunday School Convention.

The first State Sunday-School Convention in Louisiana has been held and was a success. Thanks to the following gentlemen who compose the officers and Executive Committee of the New Orleans Sunday School Association L. H. Gardner, Frank N. Butler, Jos. H. Spearing, W. R. Lyman, C. Blackwood, C. H. Shute, T. I. Bartlette, W. H. Foster, Rev. Jacob Braun, Rev. W. S. Alexander, G. W. Cable, Dr. J. S. Copes, and R. H. Browne. The gentlemen called the Convention, made its programme and gave direction to every session. They were profoundly impressed with the importance of their work and did it well. The attendance of delegates was not large from the country. In the published call for the Convention it was stated that "each evangelical school in the State is entitled to and urged to send two delegates." All the denominations of the State were represented, and all delegates present from schools among the colored people were admitted and took part in the proceedings.

The presence of Messrs. B. F. Jacobs and E. Payson Porter, of Illinois, Ralph Wells, of New York, and Geo. A. Petz, associate editor of the S. S. Times, added very much to the interest and enthusiasm of the meetings. Their addresses were just such as were needful, and we heard only words of commendation for these brethren. The full account of this convention, soon to be published, will give a verbatim report of all they said, and as they discussed the most approved modern methods of Sunday-school work, the report will be of great value. The addresses of the home speakers were all good, and some were excellent.

Perhaps the chief good result of the convention was the organization of a permanent State Sunday-school Association. This was done with enthusiasm, and all the denominations of the State given representation among the Vice Presidents, and on the State Executive Committee. Special pains were taken during the convention to announce the purpose of taking hold at once, and strongly, of Sunday-school work among the colored people of this State. Three colored ministerial brethren were placed on the State Executive Committee.

This convention marks a new and important era in the efforts for united Christian work in Louisiana. We have no doubt but that the blessing of God will follow it.

Facts.

The Brazilian Subsidy Bill, by which a line of mail steamships between New Orleans and Rio Janeiro, and intermediate ports was to be established, has been defeated in the Democratic House of Representatives, in spite of the efforts of several leading Republicans in that body to pass it. It had passed the Republican Senate in spite of Democratic opposition through the influence of Blaine, Conkling, and others. The President was ready to sign the bill, had it passed. It will be remembered that the giving of $5,500,000 to insure the deepening of the mouth of the Mississippi by the Eads jetties, was a Republican measure; also that the action on the Hawaiin treaty, which was adverse to the trade of New Orleans, was the result of Democratic votes in Congress.

One would think that such papable illustrations as these would serve to soften the bitterness which exists in this region against the leaders of the Republican party. We do not now recall a single instance of substantial aid given the South by Congress except through the means of the management and votes of Republicans. The Republican party of the nation is far from perfect, but it represents the brains and conscience of the great majority of this nation, and the sooner the people of New Orleans and the whole South recognise that fact the better for them.

Moulding the Minds of Children

The State Board of Education, and the Board of School Commissioners, Charleston, South Carolina, having adopted a series of readers and copy books, published by a Charleston house, the News and Courier finds occasion to say:

The events of the last twenty years, as viewed from a Southern or Northern standpoint, even where the same facts are acknowledged, have necessarily a different coloring and teach a different lesson. The war of arms was but the war of ideas between the two sections. Our armies were surrendered, and if Northern writers continue to hold possession of our schools, our opinions will, in course of time, be surrendered also. This would be an offence against posterity, and it is therefore a matter of rejoicing when we see Southern writers and Southern publishers securing control of the books which are to mould the minds of our children. Not that inferior books should be adopted, either because they are written or published at the South, but when Southern books, in all the qualities that make good books, are equal to Northern books of the same kind, and the only difference is in the sentiment and mode of thought, then by all means the preference should be given to Southern books.

The Anti-Chinese Bill

The country was surprised by the passage of a bill to restrict Chinese immigration, by both houses of Congress. It required years of diplomacy to open the ports of China to foreign commerce, and Christian missionaries. In 1868 the Burlingame treaty was adopted, containing the clause:

"The United States of America and the Emperor of China cordially recognize the inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance, and also the mutual advantage of the free migration and emigration of their citizens and subjects respectively, from one country to the other, for purposes of curiosity, trade, or as permanent residents."

The House of Representatives was the scene of an interesting debate, out of which a few main points are gathered. It was declared we should fear immigration because the Chinese Empire contained 300,000,000, the passage to San Francisco cost only $40, and 150,000 had already arrived. This is replied to by the assertion that Chinese will not go where there is no market for labor, and the danger to China from the immigration of Americans is quite as great. It was urged that Chinese were pagans; yet we have Jews with us, and even tolerate infidels. It was claimed the Chinese do not assimilate with our people, but remain a distinct people; the same is applicable to Jews, yet they are good citizens. It was by no means proven that the immigrants were of the lowest classes, as contended. As to their social habits, the fact that they are employed in every part of the Pacific coast as domestic servants, was sufficient answer. Prison statistics do not show them to be a thieving class.

The bill was opposed by the New York Chamber of Commerce, which denounced it as establishing a bad precedent; as a political concession to the lawless spirit of a single State, under whose laws the Chinese have enjoyed neither peace nor safety; tending to degrade our national character in the sight of all other nations; calculated to imperil the lives and teachings of Christian missionaries; exposing merchants to the consequences of its public dishonesty; and presenting hasty congressional action in contrast with "the more cautious and dignified wisdom of a heathen empire," which might result in the discontinuance of steam communication across the Pacific Ocean.

There was not a single argument brought forward to sustain the unrepublican and dishonorable feature of the bill, worthy of serious attention. The opposition to Chinese springs from demagogues like Dennis Kearney, and the men who prefer to follow crowds, than adhere to convictions of justice and right. President Hayes, by his veto, has saved the national honor, and checked a dangerous precedent in the way of class, or race legislation. It is the brightest act of his administration.

From New Orleans to the Pacific.

United States Senator Kellogg has introduced a bill in Congress to aid the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railroad from the last named place, its present terminus, to El Paso on the Rio Grande there to connect with the Southern Pacific Railroad, now building eastward from Fort Yoma. The distance from San Antonio to El Paso is about six hundred miles. The bill provides that the Government shall advance $10,000 a mile to help build this road, and this money is to be paid back in military and postal transportation.

When Senator Kellogg introduced the bill he had read two important letters,—one from the well known capitalists of this city Mr. Charles A. Whitney and the other from T. W. Pierce, of Boston, and President of the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railroad. Mr. Whitney said in his letter that Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company of which he is President, owned eighty miles from New Orleans to Morgan City, and had sixty-three miles graded beyond that on which ties and metal was being placed, and that contracts had been entered into by which the remaining distance of about one hundred miles to Sabine on the Texas border would be finished within eighteen months. At the Sabine, connection would be made with the Houston and New Orleans Road, now completed, making another hundred miles. From Houston to San Antonio, ten hundred miles further west, is the road over which Mr. Pierce presides, and which is a first class road. Thus within eighteen months—according to these gentlemen—there will be a Railroad running directly west from New Orleans toward the Pacific.

Senator Kellogg's bill proposes to help build six hundred miles further west, to El Paso, and there meet the Southern Pacific and thus make a direct, continuous line of railroad from New Orleans to San Diego, on the Pacific coast. It will be remembered that the Texas Pacific—Thomas Scott's road—now running from Marshall to Forth Worth, aims to connect with the Southern Pacific at El Paso.

Whether there is any prospect of Senator Kellogg's bill passing or not, we cannot tell; but certainly he has done well in introducing it; and, with such powerful corporations as those represented by Messrs. Whitney and Pierce, and the outside capital they can command whenever it is needed, we would not be surprised to see this movement grow and succeed.

Rev. Dr. Nelson's Funeral.

The funeral of Dr. Nelson, at St. Paul's Church, in Fourth Avenue, was a sadly memorable occasion. The employees of the Book Concern, upwards of three hundred in number, filled the galleries. A large representation of Methodist preachers in New York and vicinity, occupied reserved seats in the body-pews. Seldom is such chastened, mournful music heard as stole down the aisles of the church when the casket was borne forward, preceded by the Bishops and the Missionary Committee. Dr. Tiffany, the pastor of the church, read the opening selections from the Ritual, and gave out a hymn. Dr. Cyrus D. Foss, of Wesleyan University, made the opening prayer, a strong and touching petition. Dr. Hurst, of Drew Seminary, read Psalm xc. Dr. Reid announced another hymn, after which Bishop Harris read a careful sketch of the history of the deceased. Dr. Curry read the usual selection from 1 Corinthians. Bishop Simpson delivered the address. He referred to the fact that a great number of business men in these days die suddenly. He named three qualities as characteristic of Dr. Nelson: energy, purity of character, methodicalness. Rev. Dr. Fowler, of the New York Advocate, made the closing prayer.

M. D. B.

Great Neck, L. I., February 25th, 1879.

Murfreesboro District, Tenn.

I am near the close of the first round. The Murfreesboro District has fourteen appointments, and only three of them lying on the railroad. To about two thirds of them I can be accomodated by the turnpike, leaving one-third in a mountainous country almost impassable this winter for the mud. The Lord has blessed me to fill all my appointments thus far. Last Saturday and Sunday I held the quarterly meetings at McMinnville and McMinville Circuit about five miles distant, at Pleasant Hill. I and Bro. Brooks walked it from McMinnville and held the Conference; came back to McMinville at night and held the Conference there, and rode out on Sunday and forded Barrenfork river, and came very near swimming our horses. This is my first visit to Pleasant Hill church. I find it will be a splendid country church when finished. The Church Extension Society donated us twenty-five dollars. Many thanks to Dr. Kynett and all those who are connected with the Church Extension Society. I think they never have invested twenty-five dollars more profitably.

I think we will be able to raise all our assessments for benevolent purposes, though some of my preachers have been compelled to engage in some secular pursuits for a living. Owing to the cold weather our congregations have been very small and our collections very scanty, but the people say that as soon as they can get to work and earn a little more than a living, they will give more to the Lord. If we could get a little more missionary money and hold our conference a little earlier in the fall, we would be able to advance the work a little farther before cold weather. The preachers would, at least, become acquainted with their circuits and stations before the cold weather which has a great deal to do with our work in this country. I do not want to burden the paper this time.

Many thanks to Gen. Thomas, of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, for reduced rates; to Mr. Joseph W. Ewing, president of the Nashville and Shelbyville turnpike; to Mr. J. W. Sparks, of the Woodbury and McMinnville turnpike; to Wm. Walters, of the Lebanon and Sparta road; to Mr. Shaver; to the Lebanon and Chestnut Mound road for passes over their roads.

B. B. MANSON, P. E.

The Potter Committee declares that Tilden and Hendricks were the popular choice for President and Vice President, and that the Louisiana electoral certificates were forged, either by Gov. Kellogg, or his secretary, Conquest Clarke. Butler will make a separate, and all the Republicans will unite on a minority report.

The Dr. Harter Medicine Co., St. Louis, advertise in to-day's paper. They are vouched for as reliable by New Orleans firms.

Holly Springs District Conference, Miss.

The District Conference of the Holly Springs District convened at Winona, Miss., February 24th, 1879. Considering the distance that many had to go, the attendance was very good. The most perfect harmony and brotherly love characterized the sessions. The brethren seemed lothe to part. The business was carefully attended to and thoroughly discussed. Rev. J. G. Johnson, the Presiding Elder, won the highest praise and admiration.

The religious condition of the district was reported not discouraging, and the financial condition promises better than last year. It was also revealed that our people are beginning to read a great deal more periodical literature and more than ever before, especially the SOTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The ministers are doing their utmost to put a SOUTHWESTERN in every Methodist family in their charge. Conference voted to organize a committee in each pastoral charge respectfully on sanitary regulation and relief. Should another epidemic break out this year as did last we may help each other. A resolution also prevailed and was unanimously adopted by a rising vote calling a preachers' meeting of the Mississippi Annual Conference to convene at Jackson, November 6th, 1879. The entire resolution setting for the object of the meeting will be sent to the SOUTHEWSTERN for publication in due time. Conference did not fail to pass resolutions for our beloved Shaw University and its efficient teachers, but by the help of our Divine Master we are going to give her some money this year and send students there. At the close of the meeting the brethren felt that our meeting had been very important and highly satisfactory. The Secretary was requested to furnish a synopsis of the proceedings for the SOUTHWESTERN for publication. The next district conference will be held at Grenada.

Letter from Vicksburg.

VICKSBURG, MISS., Feb. 26th, 1879.

Dear Editor: I would have written long since, but sickness prevented it. Our brother, Rev. John J. Shumpert, died Feb. 24, 1879, at 11:30 a. m. We asked him of his future prospect, and he replied encouragingly. As I failed to hear anything from his brother at Aberdeen, I went before my people and said, "Let us put him away like a Christian minister," and in two hours we were prepared to give him a decent burial. Between four and five hundred met us at the church, and after the ceremony the hearse drove off with a train of carriages following. I conducted the ceremonies all the way through. Bro. Shumpert said he wanted to die in the field of the Lord, and therefore he would not leave Vicksburg until the Lord carried him. To-day we have every reason to believe that he is with John Wesley in glory. He has fought the good fight and kept the faith and is now offered and received. Glory to God for such faith.

D. D. GOODWIN.

Letter From Calvert.

DEAR EDITOR: I have sent from here twenty-five subscribers, which entitles this church to a silver flagon, plate and goblet. I received the beautiful portrait of John Wesley, which I have placed in a handsome frame and hung immediately over the pulpit. The church is graced thereby with the presence of the great founder of Methodism. The picture, I am satisfied, has created a new impetus in Methodism among the people of Calvert. I am confident our church to-day is the greatest bulwark against Romanism, and will save the world to Christ and to God. She is doing all she can to help the negro forward.

J. W. ROBINSON.

India Conference Notes.

Rev. V. E. Cunningham of India, under date of Jan, 17th, informs us of the close of the 15th session of their Conference, Jan 15th. Bishop Bowman presided with a kindness that won our hearts, and with a promptness that dispatched business. His presence, counsel, addresses and sermons have been of great benefit to us. We only regret as we do on the occasion of every visit of our Bishop, the necessity which compels so hasty an examination of our work. The Conference was one of great spiritual refreshing. Four young men as Probationers. One native member withdrew. Brother C. W. Judd, on account of Mrs. C. W. Judd's failing health, and Bro. H. Jackson at his own request were granted a supernumerary relation.

Rev. D. W. Thomas writes: The presence of our dear Bishop Bowman among us, has been very refreshing and profitable. I think he is favorably impressed with our work.

Rev. P. M. Book succeeds Bro. Judd as Presiding Elder of Kumaon District.

OUR SOUTHERN METHODISM

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. L. R. Brown, Kosciusko: "My people like the paper and love the church."

Rev. B. L. Nevils, Egypt: "I am on my work; I found it greatly disorganized. We aim to finish Mt. Zion church. The people seem to be of good hope."

Rev. A. Handy, Canton: "I have not been able to reach my work on account of the illness of my wife, but on the 24th of January, at half past eight at night, she bid this world adieu and joined the holy company in glory, where I hope to meet her again.

Rev. Wm. Payne, Byhalia: "I have about 22 miles to travel over my circuit, and have no horse. The following persons have contributed to purchase one for me: Geo. Wyne 50 cents; Geo. Smith, 25 cents; Samuel Brady, 25; Henderson Blackman, 30; Kate Lowsrs, 50; M. Brook, 25; Jane Webb, 25; Isabolla Adambry, $50; Abram Pierson, $25; Abner Webb, $25; Edmond Flower, 25; C. H. Hunby, $1 25; Ella Anderson, 25; Lizzie House, 25."

TEXAS.

Rev. W. Wesley, Marshall: "I have received five into full memship, and several are at the altar praying for a deliverance from sin."

Rev. S. Smith, Alleyton; "We had our quarterly conference. The people were pleased with the elder and his sermon. We hope to have our house furnished before the close of the year."

Rev. W. H. Davis, Nockenut: "We have a nice church here, built last year, and four acres of land belonging to it; also we have lumber on the ground for another church building, which we will start in a week or so. So pray for us."

Rev. L. P. Cushman, Houston: "Have been to most of the points on the district and thus far am well pleased and thankful that my steps were ever directed this way. We have a pleasant home in Houston, on San Felipe street, and you shall be welcome after you have sent me the SOUTHWESTERN."

Rev. P. Wilson, Marlin, and Big Creek: "I have been 12 years in Texas, and am now building the fifth church, that one at Marlin. The membership is 51, and they do all they can. Big Creek church numbers 150, with a good Sunday-school. My health is poor. I have lost one of my lungs, but I intend to keep on to the end."

Rev. C. Young, La Grange: "The times are hard, but my church is prosperous. We have finished our new building, and received 26 members—7 on trial. The Sunday-school is under a good superintendent, Mr. Shermack. Rev. S. Gates held his quarterly meeting here Feb. 8; after the elder's visit the church seemed revived.

LOUISIANA.

Charles W. Cromwell, who was shot December 9th, 1778, was a member of Simpson Chapel, and Rev. Wm. Forest preached the funeral sermon.

Rev. James Hayward of Franklin, La., has been visiting his friends in this city since Conference and has preached at several of the city churches. He returns home to-day.

Rev. Prince King, the new pastor, at Mt. Zion, New Orleans, begins the year's work with a good outlook. On Sunday night eighty-nine took the Lord's supper. Prof. A. A. Johnson was present and assisted.

Rev. M. Dale, Wesley Chapel, administered the sacrament to 313 persons on the 5th. Members of various denominations were present, and the occasion is described as one of great fervor and Christian rejoicing.

City mission work has of late years occupied the attention of the Church—our own branch and others—to a rapidly growing extent. The late monthly meeting of the New York City Church Extension and Missionary Society disclosed a most healthy and cheering advancement in the temporal and spiritual interests of the work in their hands. Rev. A. Fentinan, a Wesleyan missionary, says: "A little while ago, in Calcutta, a native, a Christian merchant, was deeply interested in a community of 'outcasts,' and he made an offer of £60 a year to any native Christian who would go and live among these people and teach them the word of life. The offer had no sooner been made than a candidate for the office appeared. Who was he? As humble and devoted and consistent a Christian as you ever met. He was a professor in a missionary college, an M. A. and L. L. B. of the Calcutta University, and drawing a salary of £900 a year! Such was the candidate for this office of £60 a year! If self-denial and an earnest love for souls be marks of true Christianity, then I say you have them in the case of that native Christian minister and merchant. They were both converts of the institution founded by the late venerable, but now sainted Dr. Duff."

Foreign Missions.

Superintendent Maclay, of Japan, under date of January 29th, writes: "We are now busy negotiating for the erection of the building for the training school. We want to have it completed by the time of our next annual meeting, and we very greatly desire that the Principal of the school may be with us at the same time so that we may be able to initiate this important enterprise of our mission in the presence of all its members who will then be in attendance on the annual meeting. Please do all you can to help us in this matter. Our annual meeting commences the first week in July. If possible, secure in some way, for the Principal of the school, a supply of school appliances, such as maps, charts, telescopes, and other scientific instruments. They will be invaluable to us, and cannot be obtained here. The Hivosaki school, as you probably know, has engaged as the teacher in English, Mr Robert F. Kerr of Indiana, at a salary of $1,300 a year. He is probably now on his way out to us. He is a Methodist, and very highly recommended. All well, and prospects bright. We expect a prosperous year."

Rev. V. C. Hart writes, Dec. 30, 1878: "You will be gratified to hear that Bro. Stritmatter is able to study and translate, and has preached for the past two Sabbaths. His voice is weak, and will not allow him to exert himself much. All the rest of the mission are in excellent health. Though few in numbers, by God's help we will fight, and will not give up an inch of the ground we have conquered, but press on till victory is won."

At the monthly meeting of the Missionary Board Bishop Harris presided. Dr. Buckley led the devotional services, tenderly referring to Dr. Nelson's condition. Members present, Drs. Wise, Tuttle, Crawford, Curry, Vail, Sanford, Van Horne, Newman, Buckley, Tiffany, Saxe, Messrs. Falconer, Taft, Forester, French, Odell, Archer, Stephenson, Reynolds, Fisk, Stout, Barker, Phillips, Skidmore, Cornell, Slayback. The debt of the Treasury was on January $182,87,6; Secretary Reed reported the the critical condition of Treasurer Nelson who had been smitten with paralysis. A committe was appointed to wait on the family to express the sympathy of the Board in their affliction.

Aid was extended to several domestic missions which were in extremely trying circumstances. Measures were adopted looking to the improvement of our mission in Italy. Action was taken to further aid Bro. Osgood, of Bopora, Africa. The executive committee by their chairman reported the readiness of the editors of the Church papers to publish missionary matter furnished by the Board.

The self-support of Foreign missions is finding favor with the brethren. The Hinghua district has paid a small per cent. on the support of its preachers, besides paying entirely a comfortable support to the presiding elder with his wife and five children. Besides this, $30,000 cash was freely contributed to aid their brethren on Lamyit island to rebuild their chapel, which was destroyed by a torrent of water suddenly rushing down the hillside after a violent rain storm, this with their other aid toward chapel building and repairs throughout the district amounted to $260 00 cash. They also paid in full their apportionment of $61.00 cash missionary money. We now have over thirty regular preaching places in the Hinghua prefecture, all of which are free of rent. In some instances the mission aided the local societies in securing permanent places of worship, while in most cases they have been secured by native Christians themselves.

Rev. S. L. Baldwin writes: In the matter of self-support, two districts were reported as fully supporting their presiding elders, and two were put on the five years' list, the half from the Missionary Society to be diminished one-fifth each year, and to cease at the end of five years. Two circuits were reported self-supporting; two were placed on the one year list; two on the two years' list; two on the four years' list; and fourteen on the five years' list.

On the Hok Chiang District one circuit is self-supporting during the coming year, and support a missionary to an adjacent village; two are to be aided one year longer, one three years, two four years, and one five years longer. This includes all but two circuits in the district as at present arranged.

David Corbin has formally withdrawn his contest for the South Carolina Senatorship, owing to the adverse vote of the Senate on taking up his case.

The Freedwomen.

WORK PROPOSED.—The purpose is to employ Christian women to visit the homes, and churches and Sunday-schools of our colored people, and to labor especially for the salvation of the souls and bodies of the colored women. Mothers' meetings, and meetings for girls and young women will be organized; also sewing-circles, where the simpler duties of household work will be taught and instructions given as to personal habits and tastes. Special efforts will everywhere be made to increase attendance upon our Sunday-schools and churches, and the New Orleans University. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in New Orleans alone fourteen churches among the colored people with a membership of over 3000. This membership represents a population of over 10,000. Our work will be at first in connection with these churches, whose pastors will be our advisers and assistants.

MISSIONARIES' HOME.—We have rented and furnished a house, No. 316½ Second street, where our missionaries will reside, and where meetings can be held when ever desired.

VOLUNTARY HELPERS.—Besides those who are employed and give their whole time to the work, there are many who would be glad to give a part of the Sabbath; or a day or two of each week to this work of the Master. Such will please call at the Home or on Mrs. Hartzell.

OUR PRESENT MISSIONARIES.—At present the following are our missionaries; Mrs. A. M. Ryder, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, of Normal, Illinois; Miss Lizzie Thompson, of Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephens, of New Orleans.

MONEY.—No work of this kind can be carried forward without money. No debts will be made. All money given will be conscientiously applied, and a published report given. We have some cards on which is printed a simple pledge to raise ten dollars in ten cent subscriptions. Send for a card and he'p us, or if you prefer it send us what you can direct.

THIS COLUMN.—This column of the SOUTHWESTERN has been devoted to our work, and in it will be found the announcements of meetings, extracts from letters, notes of progress [illegible] connected with the work, etc.

PRAY FOR US.—This work is as much missionary work as that done in Africa, in India or Mexico.

school and a temperance society in a small way. How that has prospered wo have not learned; but that minister is having delirium tremens. He was not a Methodist minister.

NELLIE GREEN'S APRON.—"Teacher, I want an apron just like that, with ruffles all around, my ma can flote." "How much do you want it Katie; enough to try hard to to make one?" The teacher looked at one of the most unpromising pupils in her class. The slender hands were always soiled, the ill made, often ragged garments, never clean. The thread she used was very dirty, her stitches piled one upon another, or very far apart. Again and again she had been told, and shown, with very little effect.

This wish came like an inspiration to the somewhat disheartened teacher, who with a somewhat doubtful feeling of her promise, as she glanced at the bare feet, and thought of more pressing needs, said almost eagerly, "Katie, if you will never come to sewing school again with dirty face and hands, and will be careful and industrious enough, to learn to make an apron nicely yourself, you shall have one quite as nice as Nellie Green's." "With ruffles all round?". "Yes."

The neglected child, whose time was nearly all spent on the street, while her mother was away at work, stole admiring glances at Nellie's neat attire and noted her quiet and respectful manners.

Nellie had been placed in the same class with Katie, when she entered the school, but had been promoted from class to class, until she she could almost work a button hole. She had been punctual in attendence, while Katie was frequently absent, always late. The neat calico dress and snowy apron were nearly all Nellie's own work.

"Spose I can do it teacher?" "I think you can do it, but you must try very hard, and not miss one day." "I'll try." Katie's headbent over her soiled work a moment, then she compared it with the work of the next little girl; the result was not favorable.

"If you come next time with clean face and hands, you shall have a piece of work, and we will begin again," said the teacher encouragingly. Katie's efforts at keeping clean, were somewhat imperfect ones at first, but she had her model before her, a direct object in view, and kind words only, from the teacher. Kind words were not too plentiful in her life.

Somebody cared for her, and little by little gaining patience as well as skill, she won the ruffled apron.—Then there were other prizes to win.

Katie has been promoted from class to class; she can make button holes herself now, and during the hours once spent so idly, she earns enough to clothe herself, besides helping to make her home more comfortable for the tired mother when her work is done.

March 9, 1879.—THE JOY OF FORGIVENESS
Scripture, Ps. 32: 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Blessed is be whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered."—I

TOPIC.—Trusting in the Lord.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

Prefactory.—This is a Psalm of instruction from David's own inward experience. With the exception of the first of all, this is the first Psalm that begins with a beatitude.

There are four states of blessedness enumerated. 1. Whose transgression is forgiven. 2. Whose sin is covered. 3. Unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity. 4. In whose spirit is no guile.

His sufferings did not commence when the prophet Nathan came to him with the parable of the ewe lamb. His sin was before him. He was all the while upon the rack. My bones waxed old through my roaring all the day long. The misery of a sin-tortured soul is often hidden away under an exterior of enjoyment. In his case, while outwardly he kept silent, yet inwardly he was roaring like a wild beast with pain. For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me. God's hand is very helpful when it uplifts, but it is awful when it presses down. Better a world on the shoulder, like Atlas, than God's hand on the heart, like David. My moisture is turned into the drought of summer. During the fierce tropical heat and the rainless days of summer, where this was written, the leaves curl and become crisp from the heart and lack of moisture. And such a state represented to him the condition of his soul during the time of his unconfessed guilt. Overhead was the fierce heart of God's wrath, and the fountain of his joys was entirely dried up. I acknowledged my sin unto thee. The only way to relieve an ulcer is to have it lanced. The only wey to get rid of the pain of sin is to confess it. Mine iniquity have I not hid. When the patient comes to the physian for cure, he is a very foolish man indeed if he hides any of his symptoms from him. I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the Lord. He is the one to whom confession should first be made. David said to him, "Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight." And thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. He found the way back to God so much easier than he expected! The main difficulty lay in making up his mind to confess. And God forgave not only the sin itself, but the iniquity of it—the hypocrisy which had given to it a deeper dye.

Trusting in Trouble (6, 7).—For this shall every one that is godly pray unto thee. 1. His case was of such a sort that he had no doubt that it would encourage any one who should ever hear of it. 2. That is godly. That is, inclined towards God—taking God as their pattern. In a time when thou mayest be found. David's forgiveness, however, was not to encourage any one to put off the day of salvation, but to make good use of it while it lasted. Surely in the floods of great waters, etc., represent the power which would carry one away to distruction.

Thou art my hiding place. What a difference it makes in one's feelings toward God whether we are reconciled to him or not! To the unforgiven man he is a merciless judge—to the forgiven saint he is a place of refuge.

Thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance. And this is the same man whose bones waxed old through his roaring all the day long! He speaks of his sorrows as past. of his present as assured, of his future as joyful.

Trusting for Guidance (8–11).—I will instruct thee and teach thee. God promises both to be our instructor and our guide. David could have done comparatively little, and especially could he hardly say, "I will guide thee with mine eye." Hengstenberg translated it, "I will counsel thee with mine eyes." The alertly faithful servant needs not much more than to watch the eyes of his master. From their silent speech instantly he can gather whether he is doing right or wrong, and a glance tells him what he should do. So ought we to study the face of our Master. Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding. The brutes have not understanding enough to be guided by Jehoveh. They do not worship God. To be under his direction is manly—not to be influenced by him is brutish. Whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle lest they come near unto thee. Those who will not be guided by the eye must be made to submit by the less gentle. David had been rebellious once, and had learned the pains of bit and bridle. God prefers to guide [illegible] with his eyes alone, but for the obstinate, more forcible means are their only hope of salvation.

The Psalm closes with a contrast [illegible] David eyes delights to draw. [illegible] sorrows shall be to the wicked. [illegible] he that trusteth in the Lord, [illegible] shall compass him about.

New Publications.

From the Blymer Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, we have received the twentieth annual edition of their Sorgo Hand Book, a treatise on the Chinese and African sugar canes, varieties, culture and manufacture.

The Catholic Presbyterian is the name of a new monthly magazine, being published in London and New York. It is an international, ecclesiastical and religious journal, devoted especially to the interests of Presbyterianism throughout the world. Among its contributors are many of the best writers of Europe and America. Price $3 a year: single numbers 25 cents.

We acknowledge the receipt from the publishers, D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, of the January, February and March numbers of the Wide-Awake. This beautiful illustrated magazine for young folks is one of the best and cheapest in the land. The subscription price is only $2 per year. Single numbers may be had at news stands for 20 cents each. The number for March has poems, stories, a piece of music, and illustrations to attract the juveniles. "Don Quixote, Jr.," being the adventures of Miltiades Peterkin Paul, is one of the jolly serials of 1879.

The Sunday-School Blackboard. Designed to illustrate the Lesson of the International Series for 1879. An admirably arranged "Blackboard," issued weekly, 32x48 inches in size; the ground black, the illustration white, printed with sufficient clearness as to be distinctly seen from all parts of the largest Sunday-School room. The price is exceedingly low, only Three Dollars a Year, or One Dollar per Quarter. Sample copies Ten cents. W. F. SCHNEIDER, publisher, Cleveland, Ohio.

The National Sunday School Teacher for March is at hand. The article on "The Demon of Irrelevancy," by Mary E. C. Wyeth, is spicy; that by Julia E. Sargent on "Savings and Spendings," contains some things for Sunday-school superintendents to think of, and "What shall we Do with Him," by Rev. E. A. Raud, discourses of the relation of the pastor to the Sabbath-school. This is one of its best numbers. The Departments are just what is needed and the expositions are clear, exceedingly interesting. The Scholar's Weekly, and The Little Folks for the youngsters, are admirable in their sphere. Chicago; Adams, Blackmer, & Lyon Publishing Co.

The Living Age for the week ending Feb. 8th and 15th respectively, have the following noteworthy articles: The Migration of Centres of Industrial Energy, Fortnightly Review; Novel-Reading, by Anthony Trollope, Nineteenth Century; Journalist and Magazine Writers, Blackwood; Count Ferson, Temple Bar; Among the Burmese, Fraser; Statesmen in Caricature, Spectator; Atheism and the Church, Contemporary Review; The Scientific Frontier, Fortnightly Review; Sceptical Patronage of the Pope, Spectator; A Farmhouse Dirge, by Alfred Austin, Contemporary Review; Trafalgar, by F. T. Palgrave, Macmillan; together with "Sir Gibbie," by George MacDonald, and "The Bride's Pass," by Sarah Tytle, etc., To subscribers for 1879, the publishers present six numbers of 1878, containing the first parts of MacDonald's "Sir Gibbie." For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four pages each, (or 3,000 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low. For $10,50 the publishers offers to send any American $4 monthly or weekly, with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston. publishers.

The March number of Haus und Herd, our German monthly, has made its appearance. The table of contents shows a great variety of articles, many of them very readable, and the selection will satisfy any reasonable expectations. Accompanying the steel engraving, "Lucerne in Switzerland," we find a description of this to American travelers well known beautiful city. The illustrated articles are as follows: "Westminster Palace, London," "The land of the Pharaohs," "Glaciers and Ice mountains," and "Lithuanian Turf diggers." Among the other articles that deserve special mention are, "The Power of Habit;" "An Hour with an Old Chinese Author," by Rev. F. Ohlinger, one of our missionaries in Foochow;" and "The Church the Depository of the Truth," by the Editor. The poem, "Greetings from Katie," is one of the most beautiful productions of its kind we have ever read, and and speaks highly for the author, Rev. G. Weiler. The Sunday-school and Editorial Departments are, as usual, fully and ably supplied.

A Sick Senator.

The excessive corpulency of a certain United States Senator has long been the butt of editorial wit and epicy bon mots from the pens of Washington correspondents. Few persons have suspected that his obesity was a disease, and liable to prove fatal. Yet this is the sad fact Excessive fatness is not only a disease in itself, but one liable to generate other and more serious ones. Chemistry has at last reveal a safe, sure, and reliable remedy for this abnormal condition of the system in Allan's Anti-Fat. Distinguished chemists have pronounced it not only harmless but very beneficial to the system, remedying the diseased condition. Sold by druggists.

Compound Oxygen.

Convalescents from Acute diseases who get so far on the returning way to health, and no farther will find in "Compound Oxygen" an agent that will, in most cases, tide them over this critical period, and bear them back to full health again. Thousands of those, who are drifting towards fatal maladies, might be restored to health by its use. If you belong to this unhappy class of persons, make yourself acquanted with the action and results of the new "Compound Oxygen Treatment." All information sent free. Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1112 Girard Street, Phila., Pa.

Workingmen.

Before you begin your heavy spring work after a winter of realxation, your system needs cleansing and strengthening to prevent an attack of Ague, Billious or Spring Fever, or some other Spring sickness that will unfit you for a season's work. You will save time, much sickness and great expense if you will use one bottle of Hop Bitters in your family this month. Don't wait. See another column.

Dr. Harter's IRON TONIC

Is a Preparation of IRON and CALISAYA BARK, in combination with the Phosphates.

Endorsed by the Medical Profession, and recommended by them for Dyspepsia, General Debility, Female Diseases, Want of Vitality, &c.

Manufactured by the Dr. Harter Medicine Co., No. 213 N. Main Street, St. Louis.

The following is one of the very many testimonials we are receiving daily:

Gentlemen:—Some three months ago I began the use of DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC, upon the advice of many friends who knew its virtues. I was suffering from general debility to such an extent that my labor was exceedingly burdensome to me. A vacation of a month did not give me much relief, but on the contrary, was followed by increased prostration and sinking chills. At this time I began the use of your IRON TONIC, from which I realized almost immediate and wonderful results. The old energy returned and I found that my natural force was not permanently abated. I have used three bottles of the TONIC. Since using it I have done twice the labor that I ever did in the same time during my illness, and with double the ease. With the tranquil nerve and vigor of body, has come also a clearness of thought never before enjoyed. If the TONIC has not done the work, I know not what. I give it the credit. Most gratefully yours,

THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

Diseases of the pulmonary organs are so prevalent and fatal, that a safe and reliable remedy for them is invaluable to every community. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results, which enables physicians as well as invalids to use it with confidence. It is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that science has produced. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt and certain relief, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it without difficulty. In the treatment of ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household, for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

The marvellous cures which AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has effected all over the world are a sufficient guaranty that it will continue to produce the best results. An impartial trial will convince the most sceptical of its wonderful curative powers, as well as of its superiority over all other preparations for pulmonary complaints.

Eminent physicians in all parts of the country, knowing its composition, recommend AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL to invalids, and prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proved its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

NEVER FAIL.

Keep pushing; 'tis wiser
[illegible]
And [illegible], and sighing
And waiting the tide.
In life's earnest battle
They only prevail
Who daily march onward,
And never say fail!

With an eye ever open,
A tongue that's not dumb,
And a heart that will never
To sorrow succumb—
You'll battle and conquer,
Though thousands assail;
How strong and how mighty
Who never say fail!

The spirit of angels
[illegible], I know,
As higher and higher
[illegible] they go.
[illegible] on bright pinions
From heaven they sail,
To cheer and encourage
Who never say fail!

In life's rosy morning,
In manhood's firm pride,
Let this be the motto
Your footsteps to guide;
In storm and in sunshine,
Whatever assail,
We'll onward and conquer,
And never say fail!

Strive.

[illegible] striving is not so much the [illegible] of power as the exer[illegible] care and vigilance. The [illegible] may put forth or call forth power in driving through [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] skill, watchfulness, [illegible] forth our own efforts [illegible] salvation is [illegible] by main strength. [illegible] One of the [illegible] to strive against [illegible] our own unaided [illegible] efforts. [illegible] to drive through [illegible] it is a nice point [illegible] it is a nice [illegible] with our [illegible] a nice point to [illegible] of the horse you [illegible] when you know [illegible] your [illegible] you have no property [illegible] from execution, [illegible] when you make [illegible] to your creditors, to [illegible] all your [illegible] of them [illegible] a nice point [illegible] left avoided at the same time. The eye and the muscle must co-work. We must not run well merely for a season and then succumb to hindrances. "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

5. Successful striving implies timely effort. "When once the master of the house is risen up and hath shut too the door," it is too late to begin to strive. We have a great work to perform and a short time to perform it in. The effort should be the more earnest, in view of the uncertainty of the time allotted to it. We may be cut off before the work is commenced. A languid, lukewarm effort may be broken off with the thunder of judgment. Death may come to find the house half finished the foundation laid, the walls up, but the building uncovered, to stand only as a monument of our folly, and to crumble to its original elements.—Holston Methodist.

Lost Friends.

NOTE.—We receive many letters asking for information about lost friends. All such letters will be published in this column. We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN. All others will please enclose fifty cents to pay for publishing the notices. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.

MINTER CITY LEFLORE COUNTY, Miss.,
February 15th 1879.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN, I wish to make inquiries through the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE, of my brother Ephraim Patison. He was owned by Mr. John M. Bell before the war. A citizen of New Orleans my brother Ephraim was known as a cook. That is what he was following the last time I heard from him He had a wife and two or three children the last time I heard any thing of him, which was about 8 years ago.

Yours Truly,
EDMOND PATISON.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN.—I desire information concerning my mother. Her name is Harriett Spencer. When I left her she lived on the eastern shore of Maryland. I have a brother, George Spencer, and a sister, Charlotte Spencer. My name is Elizabeth Spencer; I married a Mr. Jones, and was brought to Texas before the war by John Spencer. I will be thankful for any information concerning my relatives.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN.—I wish to get some information of my mother, Fannie [illegible], formerly belonged to Peter Maish, near Clinton, Jones County, Georgia. I was sold in Clinton to James Satterwhite, who lived in Elbert Co., moved from there to Mississippi, and afterward to Texas. I have been in Texas 25 years. I had an elder brother, Isaac, and sisters, Mary and Lucinda.

"Men may think and talk as they please," writes Bishop J. Weaver, "but of this I am satisfied, nothing will do the Church so much good as the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Cold abstract reasoning will do some good; but it will never unite divided hearts in the work of the church. Jesus is the great centre. As we draw nigh to Him, we draw nigh to each other. All are one in Christ. I know of no other way to lead people away from the follies of this world except to lead them nearer to Christ; when he becomes all in all to a soul, there is but little desire for the follies and amusements of this world."

Benson's Capcine Porus Plaster.
FOR WOMEN and CHILDREN.
Females suffering from pain and weaknesses will derive great comfort and strength from the use of Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster. Where children are affected with whooping cough, ordinary coughs or colds or weak lungs it is the one and only treatment they should receive. This article contains new medical elements such as is found in no other remedy in the same form. It is far superior to common porous plasters, liniments, electrical appliances and other external remedies. It relieves pain at once, strengthens and cures where other plasters will not even relieve. For Lame and Weak Back, Rheumatism, Kidney disease and all local aches and pains it is also the best known remedy. Ask for Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster and take no other. Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 cents.

45 Years Before the Public.
THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S
CELEBRATED
LIVER PILLS,
FOR THE CURE OF
Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

Lectures on Preaching

Delivered before the Theological Students of Yale College.

By Rev. Matthew Simpson, D.D., LL.D.

(One of the Bishops of the M. E. Church.)

Cloth, 12mo. Price.................$1.50

These admirable Lectures embrace the following topics delivered in the order here stated:

Lecture I. The Nature and Work of the Christian Ministry.
Lecture II. The Call to the Ministry.
Lecture III. The Preacher Personally.
Lecture IV. Indirect Preparation for the Pulpit.
Lecture V. The Preparation of a Sermon.
Lecture VI. The Delivery of a Sermon.
Lecture VII. Ministerial Power.
Lecture VIII. The Influence of the Pastorate on the Pulpit.
Lecture IX. Collateral and Miscellaneous Work.
Lecture X "Is the Modern Pulpit a Failure?

It is needless to say that those topics are treated in a masterly manner—clearly, forcibly, practically; as becomes both the gravity and importance of the subjects discussed, and the reputation of their author as a "workman who needeth not to be ashamed." No minister should be without them, as none can carefully and thoughtfully read them without profit. In them there is nothing showy, but they present the ripe fruit of the matured thought of a long period of ministerial usefulness and oversight. They are weighty, well-considered teachings.

And other chronic ailments.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONY.

[Extract from the Baltimore "American," December 21, 1878.]

"The Pulvermacher Electric Belt is recommended to general use for the following reasons: First, for its wonderful properties for the cure of diseases of the kidneys, stomach, liver and blood; secondly, for its extreme simplicity, and the fact of its being applied outside, precludes all possibility of any injury being done to the patient, as an external remedy is universally acknowledged to be safe. Another advantage is the facility with which the progress of the disease and cure can be watched, and if the Belt be not quite in the right place, it can be very easily readjusted so as to cover the parts affected. The Pulvermacher Electric Belt, and its perfection, has been hailed with delight, not only by the sufferers who have regained health, enjoyment, and a new lease of life through its beneficent qualities, but by the medical profession, who very frequently prescribe its use to their patients."

PULVERMACHER'S ELECTRIC BELTS AND BANDS

are indorsed and approved by the most eminent medical and scientific authorities in the world, by the Faculties of France, England, Austria, Prussia, Belgium, and America, and by well-known writers, who refer to the extraordinary cures effected by Pulvermacher's Electric Belts and Bands, in upwards of one hundred medical and philosophical works.

CATARRH
Is a terrible disease. Its fearful effects are corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, deafness, loss of voice, loss of smell, disgusting odors, nasal deformities, and finally consumption. Thousands, not knowing the great danger in neglecting this disease, die with consumption. In a few years or months it may rapidly develop, and quick consumption announces it is too late.
CONSUMPTION The terror of humanity that yearly carries thousands to an untimely grave, not sparing the young, the talented, nor the beautiful.
ASTHMA which makes life so miserable its victims almost wish for death.
Ministers' Sore Throat, Catarrhal Deafness, and BRONCHITIS the advance guard heralding the near approach of consumption.—For these and all Pulmonary Diseases, Dr. M. W. Case's Treatment by the use of his
CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANTS IS PLEASANT, THOROUGH, AND SUCCESSFUL. SATISFACTION always GUARANTEED.
Balsams and cordials of the most healing and soothing properties are so combined with Pine Tree Tar that the mere breathing vaporizes them into a dense smoke. This is inhaled—taken right to the diseased parts. No heat, no hot water, simply inhaling or breathing it, and you feel its healing power at once. As the oils and balsams condense on the air passages and lungs, their capacity is wonderfully enlarged and the hollow chest soon becomes rounded and full.
HOME TREATMENT sent to any part of the United States or Canada, to be returned if not satisfactory.
To consumptives beyond the possibility of cure the Inhalants always give great relief, and often cure cases considered hopeless. CATARRH is readily cured by breathing the vapor and forcing it into the diseased cavities of the head and out of the nose, and is the only method by which this terrible and almost universal disease can be permanently cured. For terms, call or write.

Dr. J. M. Howe's Inhaling Tube!
—AND—
COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.
Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.
The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church, Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:
It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.
Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.
The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:
I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.
From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday School Publications of the Church.
I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
[illegible] Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery [illegible] Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. [illegible] are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine.
Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, [illegible] Goitre or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.
If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.
In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. Sold by druggists.
R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Prop'r, World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets
SIZE OF PELLETS.
THE "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC.
No use of taking the large, repulsive, nauseous pills, composed of cheap, crude, and bulky ingredients. These Pellets are scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them. They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For Jaundice, Headache, Constipation, Impure Blood, Pain in the Shoulders, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations from the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious attacks, Pain in region of Kidneys, Internal Fever, Bloated feeling about Stomach, Rush of Blood to Head, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Purgative Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may be said that their action upon the animal economy is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative impress. Age does not impair the properties of these Pellets. They are sugar-coated and inclosed in glass bottles, their virtues being thereby preserved unimpaired for any length of time, in any climate, so that they are always fresh and reliable. This is not the case with pills put up in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes. For all diseases where a Laxative, Alterative, or Purgative, is indicated, these little Pellets will give the most perfect satisfaction. Sold by druggists.

Twelve Years in Atlanta.

A Memorial Sermon on the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, preached on the occasion of opening Marietta-street Church, free from debt, February 16, 1879.

BY BISHOP HAVEN.

"And Joshua set up twelve stones in the midst of Jordan, [illegible] and there they are to this day."—Joshua iv. 9.

"And the walls of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb."—Revelation xxi. 14.

"For He is our peace who hath made both one and hath broken down the middle wall of partition [illegible] having abolished in his flesh the [illegible] for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace."—Eph. ii. 14, 15.

Twelve is one of the sacred numbers. Three, four, seven, twelve rank their fellow numerals in the [illegible] nomenclature. Three is the most sacred, and is used, chiefly, if not exclusively in reference to God and divine things; four, it is [illegible] of God and man. The temple [illegible] four square, the tab[illegible] was carefully fashioned on [illegible] her [illegible] scholars [illegible] of this fact. Seven [illegible] the combination of [illegible] and divine. They are [illegible] unit. They represent [illegible] in God. [illegible] fanciful, rather [illegible] without in[illegible] on this oc[illegible] twelve [illegible] as a memorial [illegible] the New [illegible] tribes and [illegible] of God in man [illegible] of man with [illegible] Twelve [illegible] which [illegible] tribes and divine relation [illegible] the help of the [illegible] to erect [illegible] of memorial [illegible] also of [illegible] stones are [illegible] of its own sub[illegible] structure [illegible] of memorial which the children shall see and of which they shall inquire of their fathers, as to their significance, and be strengthened in their patriotism. This allegory, for as such the Scriptures employ it, teaches us, that the church must both be of the right material and on the right basis. Otherwise it can never be strongly put together or permanently abide in its place.

This brings the Bed-rock before us, Christ the Mediator between God and man. Christ, breaking down the middle wall of partition between them, Christ reconciling each to each, Christ making in Himself of twain one new man, thus and thus only making peace. On this Rock doth He build His church. Of this Rock doth He build it. It is of Him and in Him and on Him, who is over all, God blessed forever.

The church of Christ must partake not only of His nature but of His work. It, too, must be a mediator, a reconciler not between God and man, but between man and man, a breaker down of the middle wall of partition between them, so making peace. Its every member if a living stone, chosen of God and precious, must be himself compacted of the double elements wrought out by the atonement, must himself be a sinner saved by grace, a humanity transformed by the divinity imparted unto him, without losing his humanity, a manufactured stone, made in Christ the mediator, and made after Christ the mediator, a created stone, new created and far more durable than the natural rock out of which he was taken.

This individual Christ stone, which every true Christian is, must be fitted to every other like living stone. Thus grows up the holy temple in the Lord. The church is therefore the antetype of the New Jerusalem. Those walls of rarest stone, most beauteous to behold, are made of the same substance as the petty gems picked up among coarser rocks or picked out of them by chisel and powder, with cost and difficulty. These finger points and sometimes only needle points in these costly gems are enlarged into immense rocks, all afire with light. Twelve only of them are placed in those celestial walls. This makes them of great size and thickness. It is easy enough to conceive of this, if you can conceive of the needle point gem. If the onyx, emerald, topaz, diamond, can be made at all, it can be made of any size.

"In creation the only hard thing's to begin."

So the church which this represents, it it is Christ show forth but one soul that is, like the opal or ruby or jasper, it can show forth myriads. If it can have these souls in their gifts and nature as are the precious stones, it can have them built up in all their rich diversity but common Christhood in the holy temple, the holy city of God.

The diverse gems may mean separate church organizations, thus built into one spiritual building; the church diverse yet united, burning here with the blaze of the ruby, shining there with the whiteness of the diamond, tinted with shooting splendors of the opal, glowing in the living grace of the emerald, as the very body of heaven for clearness, in the lapis lazuli, a score of church organizations. Yet all one rock, even Christ Jesus.

Such has been its history. One Church alone has assumed to be the and the only church. Yet that has had to allow a great diversity inside its formal unity, and by its brotherhoods allow opportunity for each nature to follow its affiliations, so that one can be a Benedictine, one a Carmelite, one a Jesuit, one a Franciscan, but all be in that church. The churches of Protestantism grant the same privileges to their members, and recognize the same practical and an equally efficient bond of unity in their mutual help and recognition. For whatever efforts some of these bodies make to assume a separate and superior position, they utterly fail in the stress that comes upon them and all to maintain that independence. They fly to the common fold, arrange themselves under the common flag, when the foe is in the field. They are not then Protestant Episcopalians, Lutherans, Baptists, Church of England, Presbyterians, but Protestants. They come together peaceably in their frequent associations. They are evangelical as against heterodoxy, Protestant as against Rome. "One [illegible] Church," as the oldest [illegible] creed read, and as ours [illegible] to-day, of twelve manner of stones, mayhap, but one city of God.

This diversity may be in the [illegible] church. The very smallest [illegible] of God's saints may ex[illegible] the twelve manner of [illegible] church of twelve [illegible] sapphire, jasper, [illegible] topaz, ruby, [illegible] company [illegible] twelve [illegible] reveal these personalities in the highest degree. These are the twelve precious stones, living stones, which made the original church, which are duplicated in every succeeding church, which are multiplied into every organization of churches, which are repeated innumerably in the generations of believers. Peter's leadership, too brusque at times, Thomas' obstinate questionings, slow but sure, Nathaniel's simplicity, pellucidness of faith, James' straightforward business integrity, sturdiness and steadiness, John's depth of love, unfathomable, and height of fervor alike unfathomable, Matthew's calm, strong spirit, thus and on to Paul's daring, even to questioning Peter's rights to be the chief member, his zeal and ability outrunning the rest, though last, perhaps, to enter the group, how oft, has every little body of disciples revealed these apostolic traits? And then the women supplementing as of old the brethren, and transcending them often in faith and works, now, as at the first, make up the "double cherry, seeming parted but yet a union in partition" out of which every church is built up into a holy temple in the Lord.

CHRIST THE MEDIATOR AND THE CHURCH THROUGH CHRIST.

These stones of the House of the Lord are, as we have said, not natural but gracious, not born but made, born and reborn, made anew, made alive, made in Christ, and of Christ and to Christ. He has broken down the middle wall of partition between them. He has re-arranged them around the divine center. He has taken the uncrystallized lime and made it heavenly marble, changed the red earth, the first Adam, into a ruby, the second Adam, the charcoal, cheapest of natural substances, into the diamond, most brilliant and most costly of gems. His mediatorial power works this mighty spiritual change. He is the God-man, the Go-between, the Day's-man, the One and the only One that can lay His hand on both; who being in form of God and thinking it no robbery of God to be equal with God, has passed down and through all created ranks of moral intelligencies to the lowest in that order, identified himself with their nature, suffered in their stead, died for them, rose, ascended, and sitteth at the right hand of God to intercede for them, to identify himself with them soul and body for ever.

This Being, the only One in the universe, the only One that can be in the universe, this God-man and Man-God, has changed our every nature that accepts his regeneration into His nature, not into the purely divine but the Christ, the God-man divine. Thus he brings God and man together in Himself. Thus He breaks down the middle wall of partition our sin and his sinlessness had created; a double-faced, double-structured wall, one side sin, one side holiness, one side offense against God, one side justice, demanding punishment for the offense, one side hatred of God, one side Law of God, each harder than adamant, each higher than the heavens, each deeper than the hells.

To dig up and level down, and make to disappear this middle wall of a barrier between us and God, dissolving it as the Scriptures accurately read, this is the work exclusively of the Lord Jesus. This can only be His work.

Thus He makes both one, God and the sinning man. Thus He dissolves the holiness and sin, the justice and offense, the hatred of man and law of God in one alembic,—His blood, and cements them together in a new structural, crystalline mass, in Him and Him only,—a Christ-man, a man-Christ, a Christian.

Thence comes forth His church, out of Him, like unto Him, one with Him as He is one with the Father. Thence it multiplies and replenishes the earth, produces its kind in all the ages and the nations.

This work of Christ is, therefore, the work of His church. The true church is and must be a Reconciler, a Mediator. Its mission is to effect society as Christ has effected it, to break down its middle walls of partition, to bring its discordant and even hostile elements together, to melt its hatred into love, to make of twain and of many one new man, thus making universal, human, heavenly peace.

The world everywhere out of Christ is full of the opposites of peace. These very letters of Paul describe accurately the natural state of the world. It works the works of the flesh among which are "hatred, variance, wrath, strife, seditions, envyings, murders and such like," while those of the spirit, brought in by the Lord Jesus are their direct opposites, "love, peace, long sufferings, gentleness, goodness, against which there is no law." That Law that rose so terribly a mid wall, a barrier higher than heaven, deeper than hell, has gone, because the sinner is transformed into a saint. The murders, seditions, heresies, have disappeared in love, obedience, faith. Law has moved farther on. It does not separate between them and God, it separates between them and sin. They obey his will and know it not.

[illegible]

[illegible] the church of living stones, [illegible] in Christ, reconciling the world unto Him. This is its mission. To take the sinful man and make him a saint-man, to melt the proud, rebellious heart and make it a heart of flesh, of love, of Christ; to transform society in its laws, customs, habits, opinions, prejudices, and indispositions, which is often its worst sin, into the society of heaven with the laws, customs, habits, opinions and energy of the celestial estates; to make, as is our daily prayer, the will of God to be done on the earth, as it is among and by the angels in heaven.

The church has then a two-fold object—to renew the individual man after the likeness and the power of God, and to renew the face and soul of society after the same likeness and image. It cannot be and continue the church of Christ, unless it works both these works. It cannot be a teacher of morality without regeneration, nor can it be a successful teacher of regeneration, without also securing morality within and without its pale. It is never born if it have not regenerating grace, converting and renewing the believing soul, on his believing. It cannot be a church without this vitality, nor can it continue one, unless it moves out on society with like regenerative effect. It must protest against sin in high places and low, it must preach righteousness in great things and small. It must obey the Holy Ghost as He speaks through James, or it can never abide in the Holy Ghost as He speaks through John.

This Memorial Hour permits us to speak, nay requires us to speak of our church. Is it the true Church of Jesus Christ? I do not say a church. For no church can be a church and not the church. There is only one church. That, whatever its name or history, wherever scattered among nominal churches, is the church that is reconciled to God by the blood of Christ, and is reconciling the world to itself and to Christ by its preaching and practice through the same blood to Christ. There may be many branches of the same tree, but it is one tree. There may be many branches of the church, but there is but one church, and can be but one. All once real branches that have ceased to have the life of Christ flowing through them, grow dry and are cut off by His hand, if not by their own. All that have His life blood flowing through them are pruned by His hand. "I am the vine," ye different churches of my name, "ye are the branches. My Father is the pruner of these branches. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit He taketh away. Every branch that beareth fruit He purgeth it, cutteth it very closely, that it may bring forth more." Every true church must be a growing church in purity, in power, in effect on the community where it grows. It must show its right to be by these affecting society. It must leaven the lump, or it is not itself of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Shall we test this branch by these tests? The Lord help us to endure His purging hand, that we may bear more and more perfect fruit to his glory, and the advancement of His kingdom, and the completion of His triumph among the souls and the society of men.

ENTRANCE INTO ATLANTA.

Twelve years ago last November the Methodist Episcopal Church entered Atlanta. It came as an organization. As Bancroft happily says of John and Charles Wesley's first visit to Georgia, so may it be said of this last coming in of the church of John Wesley:

"Wesley was the sower, who comes after the clouds have been lifted and the floods have subsided, and scatters his seed in the serene hour of peace."*

*Bancroft's History of the U. S., vol II, p. 368.

The war cloud had hardly rolled away from this high city before this cloud of mercy overshadowed it. The war drums had hardly ceased to throb and the war flags to wave and the war step to beat and the war guns to utter their deadly thunders, ere the church of the Lord Christ entered with her white banner of mediation and peace, her priests bearing her ark, her bow of promise spanning the heavens, her mission of love and good will speaking from her eye and lip and hand.

She bore no murderous weapon, no murderous spirit. It was love unfeigned, love for all the brethren—love pure, perfect, of Christ and in Christ. There had been a great war. The very city which she entered had had only one rival as a center of bloody combats, and that was her accepted capital. Around neither the desired capital, Richmond, nor the real one, Washington, arose so many fortifications as about this city. From every hill and vantage top sprang the red mounds betokening the red blood that flowed around them. Lines of rifle pits connected these forts and encompassed the city in their embracing arms. The walls of many a store and dwelling stood forth in their charred nakedness. The stir of the new life was disclosed, at the center alone, where block after block of massive proportions, far more majestic than had been built or even dreamed before, was springing from the ashes. The stir of the new life was in the desolate mass, the stir of a new, national, a new social, a new Christian life. It was meet that the church which represented the new Christian life should appear upon the scene. It did appear.

Bishop Clark, of revered memory, came over the perilous path, for it was still a perilous path, just two years to a month after the strong men had yielded to the stronger, not because the stronger had more men, as one untruly says, but because God had determined to destroy the system that strengthened the strong ones to fight. He had decreed its overthrow, and they were compelled to hear His Spirit saying unto them, "Who art thou that fightest against God?"

This bishop called together the ministerial brethren who desired to enter his church at a house still standing on the City Hall square. The names of the brethren were these: Chalfant, Yarbrough, J. H. Caldwell, Murphy, Pretyman, Walters, Brewer, Spitman, Parker, C. W. Caldwell and Powell. Brothers Dorman, Tally, McGee, McCutcheon, Standing, Fowler and others joined that year.

Only three or four of these brethren were from the North. All the rest were native Georgians and Alabamians. They had been silent during the armed struggle, or possibly been compelled in some instances to serve in the army of the rebellion. But compelled or willing, they threw down these weapons of their rebellion, accepted the result as of God, renewed their allegiance, if it had been broken, to their country, and naturally desired to renew their allegiance, which had also been broken off to their church. With scarcely an exception, they have remained true to their vows made in that conference to this hour. But few have fallen asleep. The most remain to this day.

With the native brethren came also the missionary sent forth to those concerning whom the war had been waged, who had sat in the darkness of a dreadful bondage, lo! these centuries, upon whom the light of faith alone had been allowed to arise, not of morality, for that had been forbidden, had been impossible even if not forbidden in their enslaved estate; not of intelligence, for that was a crime of crimes. The Russian slave could hold high office under the crown. The patriarchal slave could be the head steward of his master. The Greek and Roman slave could be the finest writer of his time, and be crowned with the laurel prize of victory. The Venetian slave could become the greatest general of the State; but the American slave could only obtain the slightest rudiments of education surreptitiously. Hardly one in ten thousand learned even the alphabet. Not one even in ten thousand would have been allowed to exercise his gifts in trade, politics, poetry or war, as were his namesakes in Rome and Russia and Venice, as are his namesakes to-day in Turkey and Egypt.

Upon these bondmen had a strange light arose. The teacher and preacher came to them that asked not for them and were found of them that sought them not. The stately buildings which are the chief intellectual ornament of the city were uprising, and the churches that are now thronged with worshippers were being built. Rev. Mr. Chalfant was the pioneer in the work, the first born among many brethren. He still lives to enjoy the fruits of these labors and to acknowledge the goodness of God in granting this exalted privilege. This was in November 1867.

Let us look at it to-day. Twelve years are a short period in the beginning of the life of man, less for a state, least of all for the church. The city has grown. Has the church kept pace with it? In one view of the case it has more than kept pace. The very journal of this city every Sabbath morning contains notices of six Methodist Episcopal Churches; four besides our own. The First M. E. Church one of them calls itself. The days of the prophet, in one sense, are fulfilled, when seven women shall lay hold of one man, and say, "Let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach." It only needs three more to completely verify that prophecy. It shows at least that they esteem our name an honor, if it does not that they reckon their own a reproach. The very post of honor that belongs to Loyd street, the First Methodist Episcopal Church, unless the society moving hither claims it as their's, is thus absorbed by a sister body. One of these churches I notice has to-day announced its real title. It is the exception that proves the rule. Truly the leaven has worked. Before the war no such designation as that would have appeared in the journals of this city or the South. They are now found in Augusta, Memphis, and probably elsewhere. They may soon be everywhere. Let us accept the omen gladly, as an assurance that this nominal oneness prefigures and foreruns only by a little the actual oneness which it thus formally declares to exist.

Dropping for the present to those who do not drop their surname, but retain it as the man of the prophet would have been expected to do, the other parties giving up theirs for his, we find our own church finely and handsomely established.

From that old dwelling and from the poor back chapel where we gathered the next year for our second conference session, we have grown to six churches, two of them among the neatest and most central of any in the city. We have four modest chapels within or close to the city, and other places of worship that may ultimate in chapels. We have a flourishing school, second to none in the State for thoroughness or numbers, and second only to one because of lack of accomodations. We have a tract of land that will be occupied soon, I trust, by the first of many buildings that shall adorn it, and give our church an educational rank of the first order with all departments in full operation.

OUR WORK IN THE STATES OF GEORGIA AND ALABAMA.

But on this occasion we may properly look about us well upon Atlanta. This city is a center with a large radius. The Conference, which was first organized as a Mission Conference in 1866 and regularly in 1867, comprised two States, and what are now four Conferences. It numbered then in this State and Alabama nearly seven thousand members (6,705) and three thousand probationers (2,929). The next year it grew to almost eleven thousand members (10,896) and over four thousand probationers (4,216). Such rapid growth was caused by the coming into it of great numbers of those in the State who had always sympathized with it, but had been prevented before the war from indulging their sympathies. That influx was hardly maintained at that ratio. It was from the church and not the world that they came. The church contended against their coming; threw obstacles in the way and otherwise stayed slightly the current setting so strongly in this direction. Still, our increase has been marked, wholesome, steady.

In 1879, I have not the figures. For 1878, of twelve years after the Mission Conference was held, we had in the same territory nearly forty thousand members, including probationers, (38,532). The number of churches had increased from sixty-nine to four hundred and nineteen, or over six fold. Their value had grown from $32,180 to $173,445, being little over five fold.

Our Sunday-schools had increased from 106 to 344, but the scholars had only increased from about eleven thousand (10,855) to over sixteen th[ousand] (16,331). Our Sunday-schools ha[ve] thus made the least increase of any department, though they are now beginning to feel the impulse of steady supervision and will show, we trust, a large improvement in the decade to come.

Very marked is the advance in our benevolent contributions, from a little over fifty dollars ($51.35) to nearly eight hundred dollars ($790.67), an increase of over fifteen-fold.

These facts should be taken with others yet more noticeable. When the Georgia and Alabama Conference was organized fifteen members composed it. Over twenty were added that year. They started out less than forty members in these two commonwealths. Only one or two went back. The most are faithful to this day. That forty had become, a year ago, nearly one hundred and eighty (178); probably to-day is over two hundred.

From these facts one can readily draw some conclusions. If the church planted twelve years ago amid the hot ashes of civil war, like vines on lava at the base of Vesuvius, hardly yet cool enough to break up into gardens, has grown, amid every sort of opposition and obloquy, from every section of society, from the colored churches no less than their opposites, from politicians and the press, to a ministry of nearly two hundred and a membership of nearly forty thousand; has erected over four hundred churches, and put into them a money value of one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars; what may we not expect when the next memorial of this sort occurs? When twelve years more have passed, and in 1890, we hold a thanksgiving over our work in this central South, we shall find that we have made such a mark that every eye can see us, and there will be none to ask, "Why are you here?" If we increase at the present ratio we shall have over five hundred ministers and a hundred thousand members. There will be not less than that in the gatherings on that distant day.

IN THE SOUTH.

But in looking at twelve years of our church in Atlanta, we can properly glance a little farther round the circle of which this is the centre. Atlanta is a city set on a hill. It not only cannot be hid, it giveth light to all this section. From it can be seen the whole field occupied by us within the last twelve years. That was a field then shut out from our entrance. Even in 1866, one year before this Conference was held, it was dangerous to go farther South than Chattanooga. That fall I visited that city. I was warned in Louisville not to go to Nashville. The day before the train had been robbed. But the fact that it had been robbed the day before made it more probable that we could pass safely that day. I went, though I took the precaution, which I had not done in any foreign land, to put watch and wallet in the boot. Locomotives lay off the track broken up, and the whole country was burned over by the desolation of war. At Chattanooga we were forbidden to go farther, or even to go North by way of Virginia, as the land was full of violence. The waters of the flood had not yet dried up. They were going forward and backward continually. No dove of peace could find rest. Hardly could the croaking raven enjoy the scene.

Into that chaos of conflicting light and dark the church came, bearing its message of grace—came to make all one, to break down the middle wall of partition, so making peace. It was organized at that time over nearly all the South; from Virginia round about unto Texas the work of renewal went forward. In every Atlantic, Central and Mississippi State the church marched with the cross of Christ on its banner, the love of Christ in its heart. Some fancy it came for bitterness and strife. Never was a greater mistake. It never entertained that feeling for a moment; never in the height of the war, never when it was weeping over its slain sons and with its weeping daughters. Never. It saw that the dreadful demon of slavery in coming by the order of the Lord God from the national body, was rending and tearing it and leaving it as one dead, but it felt no more anger at that prostrate and torn body than the poor father at the base of the Mount of Transfiguration felt anger toward his son who wallowed on the ground, and lay foaming and fainting under the lacerations of the departing demon. How greatly ye err, my dear brothers, in fancying your Northern brothers had hearts of hate toward you! How little ye know the tenderness of that heart! How often would it have gathered ye into its bosom, but ye would not! It looked impartially on all. It loved the poor serf rising from the marl of centuries of contempt, prejudice and oppression. It loved no less him whom the law had pronounced owner and master. All were melted together in its warm affection. How throbbed the loving heart of Lincoln toward all! How beat the great heart of Governor Andrew! How have I seen that most brilliant of war Governors melt with yearning toward all the South. "Go," said he to me, as he gave me a commission in 1865 to visit this very State, "go thither and do all you can for the renewal of that land. Tell them we will send money and men to help them get on their feet once more."

What the statesman felt, the church man felt still more. The whole church yearned over its wanderers. Especially did the Methodist Episcopal Church yearn over those of her own name and origin, toward whom she felt a mother's love, and who in many ways show even now that they felt that name to be their own. She would have clasped them all in her warm embrace. She came to her own to thus embrace them; but her own received her not. Still as many as received her, to them, in Christ, gave she power to become the sons of God. She clung to them. She covered all the South with her conferences and circuits. Not a single State that went openly into the war, was she in, between 1844 and 1864, except a fragment of Virginia, Missouri, Arkansas and Texas, and out of the last was she driven in the person of her chief minister, and hung [illegible] person of her beloved presid[ing] elder. The border she had partly [illegible] ed—its eastern edge [illegible] so. But below that lip of the [illegible] she had not sailed. Now all [illegible] Every State, within two years after the battle flags are furled, sees her sowing, as Wesley in Georgia "after the clouds had been lifted up and the floods had subsided, scattering the seed in the serene hour of peace." Alas, that her approaches were not more kindly met. Else to-day had all Methodism here been in one fold, and all middle walls of partition disappeared forever. But she stayed not. When reviled, she reviled not again; when she suffered, she threatened not. She pursued the Gospel tenor of her way, built up her schools, her churches, her conferences, and advanced the cause of perfect human brotherhood by loving preaching, and faithful service. What is the result in these twelve years? Of conferences not in existence in the South from 1844 to 1864, she has now sixteen. I do not include in these the Washington, Lexington, Kentucky, Missouri, St. Louis, Baltimore, or Wilmington, since these lie in whole or in part in free or border territory, though all of them, except the Baltimore and Wilmington, and perhaps the Kentucky, have been practically developed since and because of the war. If they are included we have twenty conferences in this territory, all opened since 1864, all operating chiefly, and except four exclusively in this territory. These twenty conferences cover every State in this part of the Union, and include some three hundred thousand members; have not less than two thousand ministers, while their property in schools, churches, and parsonages, runs up to over three millions. Not a dollar of this was taken from those who held the land. It has been developed by our own people, and paid largely out of their own simple earnings.

If out of nothing God has created such a church in this dozen years, what may we not expect and hope for the future? If we trust in Him, He will make our light to shine as the noonday.

OUR WORK AS A MEDIATOR.

But we have dwelt on this book of Numbers too long, though it is as agreeable to Methodists as it was to the Israelites. Let us look deeper. Mere numerical progress is no proof of real, or healthy growth. The growth of tumor or cancer is terrible. Every enlargement sends increasing agony into every loving heart. One can increase in knowledge and sorrow, in wealth and misery, in bulk and not in blessing. We did not come simply to multiply conferences and members, to swell statistics and reputation. What did we come for? As a mediator, a reconciler, that for which Christ came down to earth, that for which he ascended up into heaven.

What is the reconciliation we seek as a Church?

BETWEEN MAN AND GOD.

First and foremost, that of the soul with its Maker. Without that, all other reconciliation is null; nothing all other cannot exist. We must have Jesus break down, loosen, (the very word), dissolve this high barrier between us and God, or we can never dissolve it between us and our brethren. We seek that. We ask that the Lord Jesus be formed within every soul, that it be fashioned completely after His power and image. We seek the sanctification of all, the renewed spreading of Scriptural holiness over this land. We do this not to the godly, but the ungodly, to sinners, not to saints, to the world lying in wickedness, not to those lying in His arms. This is the will of the church. This it struggles for, and under God will and does possess. For this we thread these forests, wade these rivers, are parched with the heats, wet with the dews, endure hunger and cold, and pain and penury.

This, too, the church has rejoiced to witness. It has seen the glory of the Lord shining over its tabernacle. It has heard the song of rejoicing from new born souls. It has built itself up in companies of fifties and hundreds to an exceeding great army. It will not disperse this army, but enlarge it, until it fills, by the help of God, the whole land. Thus it will seek to make perfect and perpetual peace between man and God.

BETWEEN CITIZEN AND COUNTRY.

But it has also other missions, lower, though not low. It seeks to make peace between the citizen and the nation. The long strife that culminated in the fields of Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Atlanta and Richmond had bred in many a heart a feeling of aversion to his own country. He began to call that his country which was not his country, and to cease to love and cherish his own flag and nation. He shut up the broad patriotism of his fathers into the narrow limits of a petty State. The grandeur of the Jeffersonian feeling, [illegible] swelled into those thrilling words "The United States are and of right ought to be free and independent," was crushed under the fearful pressure of State rights until the United States ceased to be loved or honored. Its magnificent flag, that only needs the white cross among its stars to make it the perfect banner of the ages, became an object of dislike, of abhorrence. They cried out, "Aye, tear the tattered ensign down!" They trampled it under their embittered feet. They fought it steadily on bloodiest fields. They were its bitterest foes.

How shall this middle wall of partition be broken down? Not by the church as such. No church can be exclusively or primarily a political body. The Roman Catholic idea in its original conception is correct. The church is above the state and separate from the state. She directs the state, not that her. But she does not direct it visibly. She does not appoint its governors, make or execute its laws. She only stands behind and gives it stability and general godly and heavenward direction.

No State can live that is not supported by its church. The gravest problem before the French Republic is the church. If that were for for it, nothing could prevail against it. "Gambetta told me," said Mr. Sumner to me, "that the Republic was sure, but the church." "Aye, there's the rub!" "But the church." That against it, all its efforts will go for naught. Napoleon the Fourth may come within two years, ere he is twenty-five years old, unless the church adopts the Republic. The effort of Pere Hyacinthe to establish the old Gallic Catholic church independent of Rome, if it should succeed, may save the Republic. If not, it sinks into the arms of Priest and Emperor.

Even so must all our churches be filled with patriotic ardor for the nation, or the nation can not live. The church in the North stood by the President, Congress and the army. It filled the soldiers with sacred fire. Its sanitary and Christian commissions fed and nursed them, and gave them a yet loftier frame of patriotism. The church in the South was equally faithful to its ideas and men. These ideas have gone. Only one flag remains. Only one nationality. Every youth should drill only under the national flag. Every company should parade only when this banner flies at the front. Our young men should look up in love and reverence to that flag for which they ought, if need be, to gladly lay down their lives. Let us feed the old flame! Our church is faithful to that duty. It obeys the injunction of Christ, "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's." It follows the command of Peter, "Fear God, honor the King." It rejoices in a land that was planted in freedom, that has enacted freedom, that has maintained its original [illegible] expanded it from an Atlantic front, which was all it [illegible] days of its creation as a [illegible] until it has spread across the con[illegible]

Our New Book Agent.

The vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Reuben Nelson, D. D., one of our Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been filled by Rev. Sanford Hunt, D.D. Instead, therefore, of reading Nelson & Phillips, our friends will read Phillips & Hunt. Dr. Hunt was elected by the Book Committee and six (a majority) of the Bishops at a called meeting held March 3d, 1879.

We formed the acquaintance of Dr. Sanford Hunt during the session of the General Conference at Baltimore in 1876, and were at that time very favorably impressed with his candor and ability as an advisor in church matters. He will be cordially welcomed to his new and important work by the whole church.

The New York Advocate gives the following appreciative notice of Dr. Hunt:

Dr. Hunt is a man in the prime of his manhood, with a good, compact physical organism. As one looks at him he seems about five feet eight inches in height, weighing about 190 pounds, with florid complexion and reposeful bearing. He impresses one as a calm, dignified, self-reposeful man, who will never lag or flag, and who cannot be easily hurried, flurried or frightened. Intellectually, he is abreast of this age. He graduated at Allegheny College in 1847, in his twenty-third year. He has been a student and man of affairs. His student life is manifested in the books he has given to the public, namely: "Hand-Book for Trustees;" and his last work of considerable size and dignity, involving extended research, is "Laws Relating to Religious Corporations." These indicate the Churchly character of his mind.

He joined the Genesee Conference in 1847, and has devoted himself to the work of the Church with steady and unresting energy ever since. He early took high rank as a preacher, commanding first-class appointments in his Conference. He has served three pastoral terms in the city of Buffalo. He has served the Church as presiding elder for the last seven years. He is called from the presiding eldership of the Buffalo District to this responsible office. He was a member of the General Conference of 1868 and 1876. By this last body he was made a member of the Book Committee which has brought him into close relations with our publishing interests. It is worthy of note by our Church, that he is now elected to the Book Agency by the men who have met with him for three years in the supervision of these very interests.

He comes to weighty responsibilities. He is to share with Mr. Phillips in managing the publishing interests of our Church. True, our Book Concern might cease to exist without putting a period to Methodism; but the Concern forms a sort of corporate body for the Church, that makes our connectional bond much more than a shadow. It gives our literature the advantage of supervision by General Conference authority. It has become so vitally connected with the convictions and thought of our people, that its prosperity is watched with prayerful interest.

As it is true that the good cause never lacks defenders, so it is also true that these places of responsibility and care never lack men who are willing to undertake the burdens. [illegible] may make the thoughtless regard this post as a haven of ease, yet there are cares and duties and responsibilities and annoyances in full proportion to its dignities and privileges. Dr. Hunt, in entering upon the work, needs not only the good wishes, but also the prayers, of the Church, that the honor conferred upon him by the Church may be ratified by the King.

Is Work the Great Business of Life.

The answer to this question will [illegible] upon what we mean by [illegible]. Employment of some kind is [illegible] required of every man. [illegible] the individual [illegible]. The Bible says, [illegible] work. Be [illegible]. A life of [illegible] from being [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] produces [illegible] such evil. But [illegible] the [illegible] value of work [illegible] as it is a [illegible] which there [illegible] with the [illegible]

Look around you in business circles and see how business absorbs the man's whole time and powers to the exclusion of all else! See the laboring man whose incessant toil from morning to night and from the week's beginning to its close leaves him no time for anything higher and nobler! Did that God who has required us to labor ever intend that any human being should be so occupied as to be little else than a beast of burden or a mere man of business? Did He make us with our great endowments of intellect and heart and spirit, and with our solemn relations to man and Himself and immortality that we might spend our lives in a practical denial of them all? So far as these great ends are concerned the hardest worker and the busiest man may be the greatest idlers and triflers that walk the surface of this earth. Thought, time, energy all spent in a continuous struggle for that which is to perish in the using, while that which belongs to our higher nature, which qualifies us for oneness with God in all that is truly noble and fits us for His presence and companionship is all sunk in the grovelling matters of a transient life.

Our Lord gives the true key to human life when, as a mere child, he asked that deep meaning question "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Amidst all the occupations of life that business is first in order and in importance. "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness" is only another way of putting the same subject. Other labor is purified, sweetened, made lighter and ennobled as the Father's business receives chief attention. The only "Gospel of labor" is labor pervaded by the spirit of the Gospel which subordinates everything else to that one thing of "glorifying and enjoying God forever." In this sense and in no other, is labor the great business of life.

The City.

General Cyrus Bussey who has been in Washington for some weeks has returned home.

Administrator Houston has instructed inspectors to be vigilant in the detection and prevention of the throwing of garbage into the public streets.

On Saturday last Governor Nicholls appointed George Nicholson, of the Picayune, State Printer. The Picayune is therefore, the official journal of the State. The Democrat by election of the council is still the official journal of the city.

The New Orleans University has just closed a successful term. One hundred and forty students were enrolled. The theological department under Prof. Johnson is doing well. President Bean spends this week on the Bayou Teche.

The Canal street, City Park and Lake Railroad, was purchased at Sheriff's sale by Messrs. M. Schwartz & Bros., of Magazine street, and they intend to put it in thorough order. An extension from Spanish Fort to the Old Lake end will probably be made.

The widow of Ex-Gov. Sam Bard will deliver a lecture in Grunewald Hall, Tuesday evening, March 18. Subject—"Contest; or Time on Review." Admission 50 cents. Gov. Bard died during the fever epidemic in Baton Rouge, and left his family in impoverished circumstances. We hope the lecture will be well attended.

The wife of Rev. Scott Chinn, one of the oldest and most respected ministers of the Louisiana Conference fell asleep in Jesus in this city last week. She was buried from Union Chapel on last Thursday. Fully twelve hundred people followed her remains to the cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Vance assisted by Rev. W. Forest and Rev. Emperor Williams. Short memorial addresses were delivered by Rev. J. Braun, Rev. M. Dale, Rev. A. Ross, and the editor of Southwestern. An obituary notice will appear hereafter. The deceased was seventy years old, and had been in the church for more than fifty years.

Sunday School Requisites.

BY PROF. A. A. JOHNSON.

The Sunday-school is the right arm of the Church; the nursery and the training school of Christians. It is the object of the Sunday-school to reach out and grasp the children and youth of our land, and bring them within the pales of the Church, and under the influence of Gospel truths. And rising paramount above everything else, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ is to be inculcated and instilled into the hearts of the children before they become hardened and calloused by sin.

In this nineteenth century, when there are such grand advances all along the lines of civilization, it becomes "the workers in the Master's vineyard" to ask: How can our Sabbath schools be made more effective? What are the requisites of the successful Sunday-school?

Let us seek an answer to these questions.

The first requisite of a successful Sabbath-school is religious, pious teachers. Teachers who know what the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is by experience; and who know and appreciate the power of the Holy Spirit in all religious work. This is evident from the object of the Sunday-school. It is to instruct the children in the blessed Gospel of Jesus Christ, to present him as a personal Savior, and the Redeemer of the world. How can a man teach that which he does not know? A man must be a master in any science before he is competent to teach that science. And so an unconverted person is not fit to teach the Gospel of Christ. Such a teacher may do surface work, may do geographical and historical teaching; but cannot go down into the deep spiritual things of God's word, and bring out the precious spiritual truths and apply them to the hearts of the children. To do efficient work teachers must be religious; and not only religious, but devotedly pious.

The second requisite of a successful Sunday-school is Uniformity of Lessons, every class studying and every teacher teaching the same lesson. Hap-hazard teaching does not amount to anything, because there are no lasting results. Besides uniformity of lessons enables the superintendent or pastor to give a brief and pointed review of the lesson, and this is necessary in order to fasten the central truths and facts of the lesson upon the minds of the children.

For uniformity of lesson our Berean system of Lesson Leaf surpasses all others; for they are printed, and within the comprehension of all. The Berean Series of Lesson Leaves are arranged in order:

1. To promote independent labor on the part of teachers and scholars.
2. To give partial aid to the teacher without doing everything for him.
3. To enlist home help in Sunday-school study.
4. To uphold Jesus Christ as the central theme of every lesson in both the Old and New Testaments.
5. To encourage daily study of the Scripture.

And because of this wise arrangement they are essentials in a well conducted Sunday-school. And all our best and most successful schools use them.

In addition to uniformity of lesson, much depends upon the review of the lesson. This review should be terse, pointed, and in a style that gains the attention of the children and leaves impressions on their minds. A very successful way of doing this is by object-teaching, using the blackboard exercises in our Sunday-school journals. Take some crayon, of assorted colors, and with a little time and labor this may be successfully done, and will greatly aid in reviewing the lesson. Therefore a blackboard is one of the requisites of a successful Sunday-school.

Again in this day of books, papers, and cheap literature, the children will have something to read. They will read novels, and all kinds of pernicious literature if not supplied with the pure and refining. It is within the province of the Sunday-school to supply the children with religious literature and meet this demand of the age. Therefore, religious papers for children, cards, mottoes, and books are requisites of a successful and growing school. They are necessary requisites because they supplement the teachers' work, and lead the thoughts of the child out in the direction of the Sabbath lesson, and toward Gospel truths. Besides they fascinate and interest the children, and make their attendance more regular.

Childhood is full of joy. And children's hearts are full of melody; and they delight in singing, especially if they are able to join in the songs and choruses. Their faces glow with animation and interest as they sing praises unto God. Therefore good music, lively and appropriate singing are requisites of the interesting and growing school.

And last but not least in the catalogue of Sunday-school requisites is the live superintendent. And by word the live I do not mean one of those iratable, stormy, rattling fellows, whose manner and voice make the children all fear him; but I mean a man who is awakened to the necessities and interests of the children, whose bearing among them is replete with love and fatherly kindness. A man who loves children, and knows how to make the children love him. A man whose heart is in his work.

Aside from these natural qualifications, no man is fit for superintendent who is not deeply pious, and a fervent Christian. His work demands this of him. And if he is an earnest Christian he has but one end in view,—the conversion and salvation of the children. His whole object should be to make out of the children devoted Christians, and earnest workers for the Master.

An army with an inefficient and ignorant general is almost useless in defending the country. Defeat is inevitable on every hand. But let the general be efficient and alive to his duty and responsibility, and the army becomes a power, sending terror through the enemies ranks. The same is true in regard to the superintendent. Let him be efficient and he is a power in the church, leading the school right on to victory, and bringing scores of his children yearly to Christ. Let us have live, active, pious, zealous men for superintendents, and our schools will grow in interest, and increase in power and efficiency.

In conclusion, let all of our Sunday-schools be thus organized and equiped with these requisites. And, then, if superintendents and teachers will go bravely forward in this grand work of child-culture, success will crown every effort, and the youth of our land will be saved from lives of dissipation and vice.

Central Tennessee College.

MEHARRY MEDICAL COMMENCEMENT.

The third annual commencement of the Meharry Medical School of the Central Tennessee College, took place on Friday evening Feb. 21st. Several young men constituted the graduating class, having finished their course of study and attainded an excellent per centage in their examinations. J. F. McKinley delivered the first address. His thesis was on "The Nervous System, its Structure and Diseases." The address proved that the speaker had throughly investigated his theme, and was able to express his thought concisely and elegantly. James P. Andrews spoke on "The Duties of the Physcian," in a manner creditable to his views, of the profession on which he was about to enter. Should he follow his own teaching, he promises to attain eminence in his profession. Dr. N. G. Tucker one of the faculty of the school, and president of the Board of Aldermen of Nashville, addressed the class, urging continued study in the line of their profession. He as a physician and belonging to the other race, assured them they would receive professional recognition by the white doctors when ever they merited it. There is no caste in professional life. As a proof of this he referred to the reception of Dr. J. S. Bass a graduate of this school, at Murfreesboro on his return from Chattanooga, where he had labored faithfully and successfully among the yellow fever sufferers last summer, when some of the leading citizens with the Mayor of the city, and a large concourse of people, white and colored, met him at the depot and escorted him to the court house where he was commended and welcomed by the Mayor and others. Also Dr. L. D. Key another graduate who remained at his post near Memphis, and did good work among the plague stricken in his field of practice.

Bishop G. Haven, President of the college Board of Trustees, then spoke of the change in the theory and practice of Medicine in the past twenty-five years. Formerly the theory seemed to be that calomel and bleeing were the most efficacious remedies. He had a vivid remembrance of nauseating doses, oil, senna, salts. Now how changed. The doctors, like some preachers, administer their remedies sugarcoated. He spoke of the recognition that had been awarded to the graduates of this school, by the profession and generally and urged them to merit it by fidelity to their studies. He assured them that others of their race had acquired honorable recognition in the several professions, and they had it in their power to do likewise. No insurmountable barrier to eminence in their profession, lay in the color of the skin.

The President of the college conferred the degree of M. D on the class with a few pertinent remarks on the relation of success to the professional and moral reputation they should win for themselves. The exercises were interspersed with most excellent music, vocal and instrumental. This medical department seems to meet a felt want of the colored people. There were twenty-one enrolled in the department this year and the prospects are excellent for a large increase next session, which begins on the first Monday of October next. The graduates of this department have met a cordial reception from the people where they have settled, and a friendly recognition from the white members of the profession. Over two hundred and sixty students have been enrolled in the various departments of the College this school year, and this number will be increased before the close of of the year. The close of the present session is on the 16th of May, instead of the 23d as heretofore published, and on the 19th the Teacher's Institute will be held to continue four weeks. J. BRADEN.

Central Tennessee Conference.

Our hearts were made sad last week on account of the death of Rev. J. W. Hart, of our Conference. He died as he lived. Our loss is his gain. He was buried at Hart's Chapel.

Bro. Stricklin reports five conversions at his quarterly meeting and several additions to the church. Bro. Davis, also reports conversions and accessions on his work. He has secured a deed to church property, which was heretofore doubtful; also a deed to another piece of ground, and is arranging to build a church.

Dickson station, under the labors of Rev. J. L. Chandler, is on the increase. They make an "addition" 60x20 feet, two stories, for school purposes. Bro. Houston is wide awake, building up his school.

Hollow Rock Seminary has been saved to the Church. Sisters Cole and Register and Bros. Bennett loaning the money. Let all the friends remit to Rev. J. E. Cole, Huntingdon, Tennessee, a small sum to pay off these parties. This school must continue. May God help the Trustees in their work.

Rev. J. R. Kirkpatrick is in charge of Spruce Street Church, of Nashville, Tenn., in the absence of the Pastor, who is North in the interest of the church.

Rev. F. A. Mason, former P. E. of McMinnville District, has forwarded $40 to the Trustees of the Coldwell Camp Ground to be used in making improvements

The revival in the Spruce Street M. E. Church, Nashville, continues.

Letter from Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, LA., March 4, 1879.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN: As secretary of the M. E. Church here under the pastoral care of our beloved brother, Rev. J. F. Marshall, I represent the wishes of the people of our church here by making or using the expression that our present pastor is loved, and that we are greatly pleased with him, When I arose before him and the congregotion and welcomed him back to our midst to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, my words met the approbation of the whole congregation and all wore well pleased and encouraged me to make known their wishes, and I take the liberty of having it recorded

We are now preparing for a fair to pay a little debt contracted last year in painting, repairing and putting a belfry on our church. We now have as nice a church as any congregation of the size. We have seasons of rejoicing in the name of the Master. The SOUTHWESTERN is read with great interest: we wish you more subscribers. Pray for us as we do for you and the conversion of souls. We expect if God spares us to give the enemy another fight this conference year.

Yours in the Lord, H. J. W.

Stop and Think.

Some people have the wrong idea, and many of my race are made to believe that the churches among the colored people in the M. E. Church are gathering the colored people to get money for the help of people in the North. This assertion is not true. Our people are poor and have little or nothing to give. See what the church is doing for the colored people! Look at the mission money sent down South by the church to help the colored and white people respect one another as men and women. The church is sending its men, its money, its books and its papers down South to help all the people in saving themselves. Our church is a church for the world. Where would be our schools and colleges for colored people if it were not for the church that comes and throws her arms around the poor and needy of our race? Colored people, think!

OUR SOUTHERN METHODISM

LOUISIANA.

Rev. J. T. Marshall, Alexandria "Have made a good a good beginning for the year. The work of the church goes well.

Rev. S. E. H. Morant, of Shreveport, who has been visiting friends in this city since conference, left for home last week. He goes to begin the third year of his pastorate of St. Paul's M. E. Church in that city.

W. H. Thomas, Rosedale: "I have organized the Sabbath-school as a missionary one. Rev. T. G. Montgomery, superintendent; W. H. Thomas, secretary; Miss Elizabeth Montgomery, Priscilla Robinson, R. P. Young, Wm. Page, teachers. Number enrolled 57, average attendance 30.

TENNESSEE.

Rev. H. Primm, Memphis: "Please don't stop the papers, for they help my preaching."

Rev. J. C. Brown, Nashville, "Our revival is going on. We have about 35 at the anxious seat, and have had seven converts already. We are looking for a glorious time. Pray for us."

Rev. J. Braden: "At Lebanon, Rev. James Pickett, pastor, over forty conversions and additions to the M. E. Church. The protracted meeting still going on with many seeking at altar."

Rev. C. L. Seward, New Middleton: "I commenced my revival at McCurrow's Bend, Sunday evening! 8 mourners at night, and 1 convert. We expect to carry the meeting on this week, and prospects are good for a great awakening. Pray for us up in these hills, that we may run the devil out."

TEXAS.

Rev. J. Prince, Spring Hill: "My camp meeting will begin July 24. Friends will be carefully provided for."

Rev. John Jackson, Jefferson: "I have had much trouble, but a lot was bought, and we will soon commence building."

Rev. P. Johnson, Oakland: "The elder met us Feb. 15 and 16. We had a grand time; 58 gathered around the communion table."

Rev. Edward Lee, Hempstead: "Converts this year 25; baptised 11; there are many at the altar asking the prayers of the church.

Rev. V. M. Cole: "When I came, after diligent inquiry and a call of the roll only 14 responded. But we are going to start a protracted meeting and hope for accessions."

Rev. S. Gates, Austin: "Bro. Mack Henson is at his post working with zeal and faith. Bro. D. Gregory has a good congregation, and is moving onward. He expects to start a protracted meeting. The conference school at Austin for preachers will be supported; a good many are attending it now."

W. H. Jackson, San Felipe: "The first quarterly conference on the 15th and 16th, was presided over by Bro. Edward Lee, presiding elder W. L. Molloy being delayed. The Lord's supper was partaken of by 119; 8 children baptized; 5 probationers joined. The estimating committee placed the preachers' salary at $350, presiding elders' $60. The conference closed with a love feast, and all business happily transacted. Bro. Lee is regarded as a strong minister."

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. John Gaston, Handsboro: "I have received 15 members since I came here, and the Sunday-school is getting along finely."

Rev. J. Shumpert, Aberdeen, Miss: "Elder D. McLachlan was with us Feb. 23 and 24. Monday quarterly conference met. The church is looking up, and the people are in good cheer."

Rev. J. M. Nevils, Ripley: "Our people are very poor, but all want the paper. The children looked bright and happy in our Sunday-school last Sunday. We brought out John Wesley's picture, and talked about it. In the afternoon 3 were received in the church: Miss H. Young, L. Bishop and S. Harris, together with Mr. E. Watson on probation."

J. A. Griffin, West Point: "Our pastor, Rev. W. Jones, arrived here Feb. 2, and the church received him thankfully. He is doing very well. The elder held the first quartely conference, March 2 and 3. He preached at night; Rev. A. W. Wright at 3 p. m. The Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition."

Jacob Hammell and wife, of Cincinnati, have discovered themselves to be the heirs of $20,000,000. Mrs. Hammell is granddaughter of Capt. Weis, of the British navy, who died in 1804. She is seventy-three years old, and her husband is sixty.

It is stated that Archbishop Purcell's indebtedness will reach six million dollars, and his assets will not exceed one per cent of that debt.

The Freedwomen.

WORK PROPOSED.—The purpose is to employ Christian women to visit the houses, and churches and Sunday-schools of our colored people, and in labor especially for the salvation of the souls and bodies of the colored women. Mothers' meetings, and meetings for girls and young women will be organized; also sewing-circles, where the simpler duties of household work will be taught and instructions given as to personal habits and tastes. Special efforts will everywhere be made to increase attendance upon our Sunday-schools and churches, and the New Orleans University. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in New Orleans alone fourteen churches among the colored people with a membership of over 3000. This membership represents a population of over 10,000. Our work will be at first in connection with these churches, whose pastors will be our advisers and assistants.

MISSIONARIES' HOME.—We have rented and furnished a house, No. 316½ Second street, where our missionaries will reside, and where meetings can be held when ever desired.

VOLUNTARY HELPERS.—Besides those who are employed and give their whole time to the work there are many who would be glad to give a part of the Sabbath; or a day or two of each week to this work of the Master. Such will please call at the Home or on Mrs. Hartzell.

OUR PRESENT MISSIONARIES.—At present the following are our missionaries: Mrs. A. M. Ryder, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, of Normal, Illinois; Miss Lizzie Thompson, of Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephens, of New Orleans.

MONEY.—No work of this kind can be carried forward without money. No debts will be made. All money given will be conscientiously applied, and a published report given. We have some cards on which is printed a simple pledge to raise ten dollars in ten cent subscriptions. Send for a card and help us, or if you prefer it send us what you can direct.

THIS COLUMN.—This column of the SOUTHWESTERN has been devoted to our work, and in it will be found the announcements of meetings, extracts from letters, notes of progress, incidents connected with the work, etc.

PRAY FOR US.—This work is as much missionary work as that done in Africa, in India or Mexico.

Address all letters to

Mrs. J. C. HARTZELL,

"on high," which is the best means of detaching them from all that is earthly and debasing.

It is by the assimilation, rather than by subjugation of the human will to the Divine, that man is really lifted towards God; and in proportion as this assimilation has been affected, does it manifest itself in the life and conduct; so that even the lowliest actions become holy ministrations, in a temple consecrated by the felt presence of the Divinity. Such was the life of the Savior; toward that standard it is for the Christian disciple to aspire."

HOLD STILL.

FROM THE GERMAN OF JULIUS STURM.

Pain's furnace heat within me quivers,
God's breath upon the flame doth blow,
And all my heart in anguish shivers,
And trembles at the fiery glow;
And yet I whisper—"As God will;"
And in his hottest fire hold still.

He comes and lays my heart all heated,
On the hard anvil, minded so,
Into His own fair shape to beat it,
With His great hammar blow on blow;
And yet I whisper—"As God will;"
And at His heaviest blows hold still.

He takes my softened heart and beats it,
The sparks fly off at every blow,
He turns it o'er and o'er, and heats it,
And lets it cool and makes it glow,
And yet I whisper—"As God will,"
And in His mighty hand hold still.

Why should I murmur? for the sorrow
Thus only longer lived would be;
Its end may come, and will to-morrow,
When God has done His work in me,
So I say trusting—"As God will"
And trusting to the end, hold still.

He kindles for my profit purely,
Affliction's glowing, fiery brand,
And all His heaviest blows are surely,
Inflicted by a master hand;
So I say praying—"As God will;"
And hope in Him and suffer still.

"A sincere and unrelaxing activity for the happiness of others." In that one maxim is concentrated whatever is noble in morality, sublime in religion, or unanswerable in truth."

March 16, 1879—DELIGHT IN GOD'S HOUSE.
SCRIPTURE.—Ps. 84: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Blessed are they that dwell in thy house; they will be still praising thee."—4.

TOPIC.—Love for the Sanctuary.

[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

Introductory.—Nothing really is known concerning the author or the date when the Psalm was written. With no feeling of certainty about it, and with some considerable wavering toward an earlier date, we have been inclined to locate it at about the time of the building of the second temple. Ezra well might have penned it, when once more a temple of Jehovah raised its fair front on Mount Moriah, a sign of the presence of God and an invitation to worship him.

Dwelling in God's House.(1-4).—V. 1. How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts. The Psalmist was unable to put into words the depth of his affection for the house of God, and from his simple exclamation we get an idea of that which he could not express in other speech. The temple was dear to him because it represented a happy communion with God—because he felt that "this is none but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven."

O Lord of hosts. His affection for the Lord seeks to lay hold upon every title belonging to him. In this short Psalm he addressed him as "Jehovah," as "the living God," "Jehovah of hosts," "King," "God," "Jehovah God of hosts," "God of Jacob," "shield," "sun," "my God,"

V. 2. My soul longeth. What a love the Psalmist must have had for the temple! For it, as some one says, he had "a heavenly lovesickness." In such matters, better the right sort of heart than the very best of clocks. The first will always bring one into the house of God in due season, while the latter may point to the time for going in vain. For the courts of the Lord. They were consecrated to the Lord. There more especially he had manifested himself to his worshiper. My heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God. When the lower [illegible] come completely under the domination of the higher, then even the flesh will cry out with the soul for the living God.

V. 3. Yea the sparrow hath found a house and the swallow a nest, etc. The fact seems to be well established that small birds lived undisturbed about the temple.

V. 4. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house. The Psalmist thought, to speak in modern phrase, [illegible] very ushers, and those [illegible] the church, and took [illegible] were blessed. They will [illegible] Still praising; [illegible] they will be catching [illegible] of the glory of [illegible] they serve. The [illegible] which they continu[illegible] of God's favor keep [illegible] constant state of adora[illegible]

[illegible] (5-8).—[illegible] Israelite was [illegible] to pre[illegible] Temple [illegible]

thus coming up to its feasts and to its worship

V. 5. Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee. Those who have tried it know it to be so. Blessed indeed is the man whose strength is in God! Such a man is a man of power. He has God on his side. In whose heart are the ways of them They loved even the very roads by which they had to climb in order to reach their place of worship. They had often traveled them with songs in their hearts.

V. 6. Who, passing through the valley of Baca, make it a well. Bearing in mind that the words have reference to a sterile valley, the spiritual counterpart of which is a valley of suffering and of tears, to those who cross it, and the meaning becomes tolerably plain. The rain also filleth the pools. There are plenty of places for those going up to Zion to quench their thirst. They turn a wilderness into springs and suffering into joy. Faith brings water out of the sands and showers from the heaven.

V. 7. They go from strength to strength. The Christian does not become exhausted with his journey. There are places of refreshment in it by which he becomes stronger and stronger. With every succeeding day he is more and more fitted for each day's travel. He is more able to resist the devil and to overcome temptations. Every one in Zion appeared before God. None perish by the way. None are wholly overcome by temptations. None are cut off by their spiritual enemies. At the last they stand in the presence of him whose face they set out to seek.

V. 8. O Lord God of hosts hear my prayer; give ear O God of Jacob. The appellation here given to God expresses the Psalmist's sense of his divine majesty; the second that of his divine relationship.

Under God's Protection (9-12).—V. 9. Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed. Doubtless the petitioner referred to himself when he asked the Lord to look upon the face of his anointed.

V. 10. For a day in thy court is better than a thousand. Better than a thousand elsewhere of course is meant. If it is pleasant to be near an earthly king, conscious of his approval, it is still more delightful to be in the courts of the King of kings, with his approving smile upon us. I would rather be a doorkeeper. He would rather be least in the church than greatest in the world. Than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. Rich and handsome pavillions are here meant.

V. 11. The Lord God is a sun and shield. As the sun he is the central fact in our spiritual universe. From him we derive all our life and our light. As a sun he shows us the path in which we should walk—as a shield he protects us from the dangers of the way. He is the source of all good—a defense from all evil. The Lord will give grace and glory. Grace suficent for our time of need—glory when all trials shall cease. No good thing will he withold from them that walk uprightly.

V. 12. O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee. No man can obtain this beatitude who does not learn to trust. He is blessed because he dwells in God's house, because he is sustained by divine strength, is under God's protection, and is the recipient of his constant care.

Letter from Palestine.

PALESTINE, TEXAS, Feb. 25, 1879.

DEAR EDITOR: I reached my work Jan. 7th, finding seven members at Palestine and 45 at Piney Grove. Rev. F. C. Moore held his first quarter here on the 28th. I was called home by a sad dispatch to witness the funeral of one of the most interesting men at Millican. He was a white man who had lived and died a sincere friend of the colored people in every true respect. He was a father to me and many others in times of trouble. He was an early settler of Texas, known far and near. All the colored men who knew William Dunlap, deplore his loss, and hope to meet him in heaven.

Yours truly, PETER MORGAN.

Marriages.

At the bride's residence, Granada Miss., Jan. 8, 1879, by Rev. D. A. Williams, Mr. J. H. Johnson and Mrs. Ardeler Ratcliff, both of Granada.

At the residence of the bride's mother, Granada, Feb. 20, by Rev. D. A. Williams, Mr. Joseph Tribble and Miss Laura Graham, both of Granada.

[illegible] Pendergrast, a prominent witness before the Teller committee, was convicted of libel before Judge [illegible], at King's Tree, S. C., and sentenced to two year's hard labor in the penitentiary, or pay a fine of $500 and costs of suit.

Deaths.

Jane Johnson, a devoted Christian and a member of the M. E. Church, died on the 19th.

D. GREGORY, P. E.

Austin, Texas.

David Green, a local preacher, died 7 miles from Aberdeen, Miss., Jan. 27. He was well thought of by the people, and left a wife and seven children.

Alex Mitchell died Feb. 22. He had professed religion on the 13th and made his peace with God.

J. J. SHUMPERT.

Aberdeen, March 1.

George Henry Easom, died on the 22 of February in St. John the Bapist parish, La. He was a member of the Methodist Church, and born in Maryland.

In Grenada, Feb. 12 Sister Tamer Smith. She was a good faithful member of the M. E Church.

February 25, at the residence of her daughter, Sister Siuie Gary, fell asleep in death. She was a faithful member of the M. E. Church. D. A. WILLIAMS.

The following are resolutions of Cedar Grove Lodge No. 13 F. and A. M., adopted on the death of Bro. James Wells:

Whereas, It has pleased the Almighty to take from our midst our beloved Bro. James Wells in the prime of life to the most worshipful Grand Lodge not erected by man but eternal in the heavens.

And Whereas, Our heartfelt gratitude is due to the Divine Being who holds in his hands the destinies of our craft.

And Whereas, The intimate relations long held, and the good and faithful duties discharged during the hours of labor by the deceased, Bro. James Wells, with the brethren of the Lodge, render it proper that we should place upon record our appreciation of his services as a Master Mason, and his merits during the hours of labor in the craft.

Therefore be it Resolved, that we deplore the loss of Bro. James Wells, with deep feelings of regret, softened only by the confident hope that his spirit is with those who having fought the good fight in this subordinate Lodge, are enjoying perfect happiness with those who dwell in the most worshipful Grand Lodge Eternal in the heavens.

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved relatives our sincere condolence and our earnest sympathy in this their affliction at the loss of one who was a good citizen, a devoted Mason, and an upright man.

Resolved, That the brethren of the Lodge wear the usual badge of mourning on their left breast, and that the station he hung in mourning, and the hall be draped with black for thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of the above resolutions be signed by the Master, and certified by the Secretary, and be transmitted to the relatives of the deceased.

Resolved, That a copy be forwarded to the Helly Springs Reporter for publication, and the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE.

New Books.

ELEMENTS OF GENERAL AND CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY. By L. T. Townsend, D.D. New York: Phillips & Hunt.

This is a valuable little book costing but 40 cents, in which in a brief compass the general principles of Theology are set forth. A good book for ministers and Sunday school teachers, as well as for all who want to have in mind for constant use a brief but comprehensive outline of Theology.

LECTURES ON PREACHING.—Delivered before the Theological Department of Yale College. By Bishop Mathew Simpson, D.D., L.L.D., a Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church. New York: Phillips & Hunt. Price $1 50.

Bishop Simpson has for several years been recognized as one of the great preachers of the world. His long experience as a successful preacher of the Gospel, and his great ability as a pulpit orator, qualified him to do eminently well this work. Every preacher should have this book and read and study these lectures. They are scholarly and practical.

LIFE OF RICHARD FULLER, D.D. By J. H. Cuthbert, D.D. New York: Sheldon & Co. New Orleans: Eyrich.

Dr. Fuller was a prominent Baptist clergyman, born in Beaufort, S. C., 1804, and died October 1866. This book gives the story of an earnest successful pastor and preacher. He was for fifteen years pastor in Beaufort and twenty-nine years in Baltimore. He was a slave owner before the war but preached and labored with great success among the colored people. He was a very successful pastor, believed thoroughly in the doctrines of his church, and for many years held a commanding position among the chief men of his denomination.

WHAT SHALL I READ? New York: Phillips & Hunt. Price 75 cents.

Speaking of this book the New York Tribune says: "In this brief volume by a Christian mother, whose name is not given, the young reader is taken by the hand and led by pleasant ways through the walks of literature. It presents a variety of instructive hints in regard to the choice of books and the mode of using them to the best advantage, together with many uncritical, but not in the main unintelligent, remarks concerning the character and position of different authors. Though written with immediate reference to the children of religious families, and possibly to the pupils in Sunday-schools, the work is not exclusive in its scope, narrow in spirit, or too didactic in method. The general ideas of the writer on the subject of profitable, or, as she calls it, "renumerative," reading are excellent, assisting the inexperienced novice to find the honey there is in books without imbibing the poison. The execution of the work as a whole betray a familiar knowledge of current literature, and a highly creditable degree of painstaking and attention to small details."

Indigestion.

The main cause of nervousness is indigestion, and that is caused by weakness of the stomach. No one can have sound nerves and good health without using Hop Bitters to strengthen the stomach, purify the blood, and to keep the kidneys active, to carry off all the poisonous and waste matter of the system. See other column.

Compound Oxygen.

In Consumption, the "Compound Oxygen Treatment" has been remarkably successful. How few ever recover entirely from Pneumonia, and all for the want of a revitalizing agent such as "Compound Oxygen" will certainly furnish. Thousands might, by its use, be saved annually from the grasp of that great destroyer, Consumption. Some of the most brilliant cures which have already been made by this new Treatment have been in Consumption. The amplest information will be found in our Treatise on "Compound Oxygen." It is sent free. Address Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1112 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Advice to Consumptives.

The celebrated physician, Dr. Paul Memeyer, gives the following valuable suggestions to persons suffering from lung affections: "The patient must with scrupulous conscientiousness insist upon breathing fresh, pure air, and must remember that the air of closed rooms is always more or less bad. * * * No man, however uncleanly, would drink muddy, dirty water. A party which occupies a room for hours, breathing the same air, might be compared to a party of bathers drinking the water in which they bathe. The patient must keep the window of his bedroom open. Night air is fresh air without daylight. In close, crowded rooms, the patient suffering from lung complaint breathes consumptively." By taking these precautions and using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets, fully one-half of the cases of lung complaints would be cured in six months. For cough and irritation of the lungs do not always indicate the presence of consumption although it may result in that disease, and if consumption has already become deeply seated in the system, this is the most efficient course of treatment that can be pursued outside of any institution that provides special facilities for the treatment of this disease. Dr. Pierce's celebrated Invalids' Hotel is such an institution. Send stamp for descriptive pamphlet containing also a complete treatise upon consumption, explaining its causes, nature, and the best methods of treating it, together with valuable hints concerning diet, clothing, exercise, etc., for consumptives. Address Faculty of Invalids' and Tourists' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Harter's IRON TONIC

Is a Preparation of IRON and CALISAYA BARK, in combination with the Phosphates,
Endorsed by the Medical Profession, and recommended by them for Dyspepsia, General Debility, Female Diseases, Want of Vitality, &c., &c.
Manufactured by the Dr. Harter Medicine Co., No. 213 N. Main Street, St. Louis.
The following is one of the very many testimonials we are receiving daily:
Gentlemen:—Some three months ago I began the use of DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC, upon the advice of many friends who knew its virtues. I was suffering from general debility to such an extent that my labor was exceedingly burdensome to me. A vacation of a month did not give me much relief, but on the contrary, was followed by increased prostration and sinking chills. At this time I began the use of your IRON TONIC, from which I realized almost immediate and wonderful results. The old energy returned and I found that my natural force was not permanently abated. I have used three bottles of the TONIC. Since using it I have done twice the labor that I ever did in the same time during my illness, and with double the ease. With the tranquil nerve and vigor of body, has come also a clearness of thought never before enjoyed. If the TONIC has not done the work, I know not what. I give it the credit. Most gratefully yours,

Lectures on Preaching

Delivered before the Theological Students of Yale College.

By Rev. Matthew Simpson, D.D., LL.D.

(One of the Bishops of the M. E. Church.)

Cloth, 12mo. Price $1.50

These admirable Lectures embrace the following topics, delivered in the order here stated:

Lecture I. The Nature and Work of the Christian Ministry.
Lecture II. The Call to the Ministry.
Lecture III. The Preacher Personally.
Lecture IV. Indirect Preparation for the Pulpit.
Lecture V. The Preparation of a Sermon.
Lecture VI. The Delivery of a Sermon.
Lecture VII. Ministerial Power.
Lecture VIII. The Influence of the Pastorate on the Pulpit.
Lecture IX. Collateral and Miscellaneous Work.
Lecture X. Is the Modern Pulpit a Failure?

It is needless to say that these topics are treated in a masterly manner—clearly, forcibly, practically; as becomes both the gravity and importance of the subjects discussed, and the reputation of their author as a "workmen who needeth not to be ashamed." No minister should be without them, as none can carefully and thoughtfully read them without profit. In them there is nothing showy, but they present the ripe fruit of the matured thought of a long period of ministerial usefulness and oversight. They are weighty, well-considered teachings.

This book will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Address, tinent and boasts another water front of like magnificence and promise.

To break down this middle wall of partition, to bring to an end this enmity, so making peace, has been no low or unworthy motive of our church in this part of the Union. We rejoice that she has done so much to effect this necessary result; that she enrolls on her books so many ardent lovers of the flag of their country; that she is moving quietly but steadily forward, until every heart here, old and young, shall thrill with like ardor, and be ready to sacrifice itself, if need be, on the altar of this faith. Then, and then only, will there be peace.

BETWEEN MAN AND MAN.

But lastly, the church seeks in the Southern work to break down the [illegible] wall of partition between the [illegible] races of men. Twice [illegible] have I seen in our morning daily charges that we are fostering enmity and strife between the races. In neither case, I am glad to say, was it the voice of the paper itself. It only permitted two other papers to use its columns. One of them attacked by name the distinguished brother whom the General Conference elected to represent the church on the same field it is itself upon—the press. To say he is seeking to stir up strife between the races, even though it comes from so respectable an organ as the Raleigh Christian Advocate, is to utterly misconceive and misstate his work and words. The other statement was from a Northern sheet that never yet advocated a principle in politics or a truth in religion. It is a soldier of fortune whose hand or pen is against every good cause [illegible]. It bitterly opposed the [illegible] men of Massachusetts—[illegible], Wilson and Andrew, and [illegible] principles by whose advocacy [illegible] immortal fame. It will not be allowed to govern us as we move forth under the call of the [illegible] Master for the subjugation of [illegible] world unto Christ. It is not [illegible] have spoken that we [illegible]. It is that this sentiment [illegible] gets possession of the [illegible], to its own detriment, [illegible] the injury of the cause of [illegible] of the very objects of the [illegible] Church, given it by Christ [illegible] by His apostles, is [illegible] the human race. [illegible] to the most preju[illegible] then on the face of [illegible] and the most justly so: [illegible] Jesus there is neither [illegible] Jew, circumcision nor [illegible], male nor female, [illegible] Scythian, bond nor free." [illegible] us calmly look this fact a little farther in the face. There is no denying that there exists, South and North, a seemingly deep repugnance on the part of the children of Japhet to those of Ham. Even those of Shem are not always loved, as the hostility to Chinamen, and, as it was revealed at Saratoga, to Jews, too plainly show. There is even more of this so-called race antagonism at the North than at the South. The more intimate social relations, continued here for many generations, have bred a more agreeable feeling. There is no prejudice here against race as such, against but any sort of recognition of equality or fraternity of race. What has our church to do with this? Certainly not to feed the antagonism. It is the mission of the church, as I have said, to break down in Christ all antagonisms between man and man, as it is that of Christ to break down all antagonisms between man and God.

It is here to speak to man as man—not as American, African, European or Asiatic; to urge him to receive Christ Jesus our Lord and walk in Him, to love each other better than himself, to love his neighbor as himself. This is the whole of its mission. It aims at no political end as such. It is not here as a partisan or reformer; not as a prohibitionist or abolitionist, or any other more offensive title. It is here as it is everywhere, as the true church has always been, to preach and exhibit love to God, love to our fellow man.

In carrying forward this duty it meets here a high mountain wall. That high wall it is forbidden to regard. If Christ had feared or regarded the middle wall of partition between us and God, He had not dissolved it and swept it away forever. So the Church does not worship any middle wall of partition between the children of men. It preaches the unity of God, the unity of man. It deals impartially with every man. It does not discriminate, and cultivate that which is of sin and must flee before the true light. The Church cannot cultivate caste in India; no more can it in America. But it cannot force Brahmin and Pariah to associate together in India; no more can it those of like degree in America. It can only require that they be no more Brahmins and Pariahs, but brethren in the Lord, of one flesh as of one faith. It can give each that grace through Christ that they shall of themselves flow together delightedly, and their hearts at once be enlarged. This is true Christianity. This it is her mission to lovingly secure. She grieves at the height of this great mountain, and cries out in prophetic faith, "Who art thou, O high mountain? Before Zerubbabel, before our Lord, thou shalt become a plain." As the fortifications around the old cities of Europe, that kept the outside people from the citizens, have been levelled so that flowers, promenades and festal bowers, frequented by all the population indiscriminately, now grow where these bastions frowned, so will all these old walls of hate and prejudice disappear, and gardens and pleasant walks "most beauteous to behold" appear in their place, thronged with all the lovers of the Lord walking lovingly together.

To bring about this divine purpose, our church is laboring for the salvation of men. She comes impartially to all. She believes in Jefferson's Declaration. She believes in the Sermon on the Mount. She asks all who thirst to come and partake of the waters of life freely. While she does not compel even natural relations, she does not promote [illegible] unchristian relations. She asks here, and everywhere else, that justice be done between man and man, that the poor and de[illegible] be not oppressed while the rich or fortunately tinted be let free. I saw an old lady, as I will call her, for thus she looked, scrubbing among the stones on our [illegible] this [illegible]. She appeared too weak to even rise and stand, much less to swing the mallet that pounded the stone. I asked her keeper, a gentlemanly man, what was her punishment? "Twelve months." Her offense? "Stealing four or five chickens." Would she have been punished that way if wholly instead of half way white? He [illegible] with a tone of pity in his voice, "She says she did not steal them." Perhaps the thief told on her and got off himself. Two younger women were breaking stone. That punishment is not always confined to one class, but surely it is not becoming them in the city. The many gentlemen and ladies who ride by these prisoners, note this fact. Those from the North or from Europe, are surprised that such a cosmopolitan city as this should allow such sights to appear. England does not put her female prisoners on the highway, nor New [illegible], nor New York, nor [illegible]. We ought to make them [illegible] within doors, [illegible] and [illegible] the more highly respect [illegible]. [illegible] should punishments be [illegible] out partially. Some boys, [illegible] a little playful and [illegible] so, were [illegible] by the police. One [illegible] upon a horse stand[illegible] [illegible]

It will also demand that there shall be no sinful relations more social than Christian. It will demand that there shall be no infringement of personal right by reason of prejudice. Equal rights is God's law between man and man. It should be none the less the law of His church. Against all such iniquity our church will lift up its voice like a trumpet. It will be as faithful here as in Ohio, now as in the days of John Wesley, in showing the house of Israel its transgressions and the house of Jacob its sins. May the Lord strengthen its arm!

Nowhere is it more faithful in this preaching than in New England to-day. It is not political in any party sense, but it does demand of prates, justice and right. It preaches a religion that is moral and ethical, that uproots sin, establishes righteousness. So will it here. By this preaching it will conquer and prosper. By this will it bring all men unto itself and unto the Lord. By this will it melt all barriers and make all souls one in the Lord. By this will it drive out the dreadful curse of drinking, so universal and so ruinous, and all other social sins. By this will it create a holy people, zealous of good works. By this will it conquer.

OUR FUTURE.

Let us, then, my beloved brethren, reverently set up these sacred stones. Let us rejoicingly say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us. Let us live at peace with all men. Let us seek to bring all to the knowledge and love of Jesus Christ. Let us, as a church, walk soberly and righteously, opposing every wicked work and word. Let us see to it that we are spotless and without offense among a wicked and perverse generation, before whom we shine by Christ dwelling in us, as lights in the world. Keep the church close to Him. Oppose beginnings of evil. Let no profane person, nor winebibber or seller, nor theatre frequenter, nor ball room seeker, dwell in our courts. That word is set before us here, as it was at our beginning, to show forth the true Church, in its purity and power, for the illumination and regeneration of all churches and all the world. Let us seek to bring souls to Christ, to bring Christ into society, to break down all false and wicked customs and opinions, and to hasten forward the glorious hour when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. And if you and I see it not, others who stand here when the next twelfth year appears, will rejoice at the wide unfolding and upward growing power of the church, here, as elsewhere, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible to her enemies as an army with cannons.

Then will they see the nation disenthralled, regenerated, united in love and harmony. Then will these stones we now set up bring to remembrance your services and sacrifices, and they shall gather about them as the children of Israel in the days of their victory did about those set up at the beginning of their national history, and ascribe honor to their fathers for their faith and faithfulness.

Then shall ye be polished stones, built up into the temple of your God, the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Then shall your church be one of the great instruments of bringing in the millennial glory. And when this city grows, as it will, to one hundred thousand, and perhaps a million of souls, your labors in laying the holy foundations will not be forgotten. This metropolis full of churches of your own creation, as well as those that shall then be with you in name and love, full of energy, full of wealth and culture, loyal to its country and its God, a light to all the land and to all lands, shall acknowledge its indebtedness to your humble, honest, earnest faithfulness, and shall rise up and call you blessed.

Is Catarrh a Curable Disease?

The question has been settled by Dr. M. W. Case, a highly educated physician of many years' experience in treating Catarrh and diseases of the throat and lungs. He has designed ingenious and scientific apparatus by which remedies in the form of vapor or smoke are carried directly to the seat of Catarrh, Consumption, Broncitis, etc., and into the blood through the lungs, with perfect ease and as little trouble as it is to breathe the air that surrounds us. The result of this treatment is an astonishing success. His Carbolate of Tar Inhalants have been endorsed by leading physicians, and their speedy cures in seemingly hopeless cases commend them to thousands who have tried other remedies in vain. The Doctor stands high as an honorable and successfull physician in his specialities of Catarrh and Consumption. All suffering with these diseases may with full confidence write to the Doctor at S. W. cor. Tenth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

Factory Facts.

Close confinement, careful attention to all factory work, gives the operatives pallid faces, poor appetite, languid, miserable feelings, poor blood, inactive liver, kidneys and urinary troubles, and all the physicians and medicine in the world cannot help them unless they get out doors or use Hop Bitters, made of the purest and best remedies, and especially for such cases, having abundance of health, sunshine and rosy cheeks in them. None need suffer if they will use them freely. They cost but a trifle. See another column.

CURE FOR HICCOUGH.—A correspondent sends us the following: Take a lump of loaf sugar, put in the mouth and crush it without letting it dissolve, then swallow it. It will cure hiccough in one minute.

THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S
Celebrated American
WORM SPECIFIC OR VERMIFUGE.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eye-lid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,
DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant.

The genuine DR. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrapper.

DR. C. McLANE'S
LIVER PILLS
are not recommended as a remedy "for all the ills that flesh is heir to," but in affections of the liver, and in all Bilious Complaints, Dyspepsia and Sick Headache, or diseases of that character, they stand without a rival.

AGUE AND FEVER.

No better cathartic can be used preparatory to, or after taking Quinine.
As a simple purgative they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.
Each box has a red wax seal on the lid with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.
Each wrapper bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS.
Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

CATARRH
is a terrible disease. Its fearful effects are corruption running down the throat, weak eyes, deafness, loss of voice, loss of smell, disgusting odors, nasal deformities, and finally consumption. Thousands, not knowing the great danger in neglecting this disease, die with consumption. In a few years or months it may rapidly develop, and quick consumption announce it is too late.
CONSUMPTION the terror of humanity that yearly carries thousands to an untimely grave, not sparing the young, the talented, nor the beautiful.
ASTHMA which makes life so miserable its victims almost wish for death.
Minister's Sore Throat, Catarrhal Deafness, and BRONCHITIS the advance guard heralding the near approach of consumption.—For these and all Pulmonary Diseases, Dr. M. W. Case's Treatment by the use of his
CARBOLATE of TAR INHALANTS IS PLEASANT, THOROUGH, AND SUCCESSFUL. SATISFACTION always GUARANTEED.
Balsams and cordials of the most healing and soothing properties are so combined with Pine Tree Tar that the mere breathing vaporizes them into a dense smoke. This is inhaled—taken right to the diseased parts. No heat, no hot water, simply inhaling or breathing it, and you feel its healing power at once. As the oils and balsams condense on the air passages and lungs, their capacity is wonderfully enlarged and the hollow chest soon becomes rounded and full.
HOME TREATMENT sent to any part of the United States or Canada, to be returned if not satisfactory.
To consumptives beyond the possibility of cure the Inhalants always give great relief, and often cure cases considered hopeless. CATARRH is readily cured by breathing the vapor and forcing it into the diseased cavities of the head and out of the nose, and it is the only method by which this terrible and almost universal disease can be permanently cured. Inhaling Tube!
—AND—
COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.
Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.
The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:
It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.
Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.
The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:
I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.
From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday-school Publications of the Church.
I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n8 79 1f.

ANTI-FAT

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week. In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN's drug store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from 210 pounds to 192 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, Smith, Doolittle & Smith, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N. Y., write: "To THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen,—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp.

WOMAN
By an immense practice at the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, having treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman, I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and positive remedy for these diseases.
To designate this natural specific, I have named it
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon personal observation. I have, while witnessing its positive results in the special diseases incident to the organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. [illegible] as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy [illegible] of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly, [illegible] my reputation as a physician; [illegible] that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. [illegible] conditions, see pamphlet wrapping bottle.
The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhœa, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing Down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, and Female Weakness. I do not extol this medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not harm in any state or condition.
Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, a book of over 900 pages, sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.
Favorite Prescription sold by Druggists.

1:20, the argument of creatures in favor of God. It was one of the Bishop's best efforts. The argument was a cross-fire on much of the Godless service of our day, showing its falsity by the overwhelming evidence on the other side.

Dr. Foss, of the Wesleyan University, gave another able discourse in the evening on the wonderfulness of the Bible (Ps. 119-120). In a compact, neat way he exhibited the divinity of the Bible by its unity in manifoldness. The large audience was held in wrapt attention for an hour and a half. The day, on the whole, was a great success, and the new church will be a reinforcement to the Methodism of the city.

Next to piety church enterprise, especially in cities, is the secret of success. To worship in the barn when we must, is a virtue; to remain in the barn when God opens something better to us is to cherish the spirit of parsimony, or cowardice or shiftlessness, which is sure to dwarf and ruin the church.

French Protestantism.

BY W. F. MALLALIEU, D.D.

The wonderful thing about French Protestantism is that it should have any existence at all. When we remember the persecutions of the bloody past from the days of Simon Mountfort down to Richelieu, it is utterly surprising that the last trace of anti-papal Christianity had not disappeared in France.

There is not a country of Christendom that has not received more or less of the expatriated sons and daughters of France who, though loving their native land with devoted and patriotic affection, have yet loved Christ and his cause far better, and rather than deny him they have sacrificed all of earth that was dear to them, and have become exiles and wanderers upon the face of the earth.

They have not only thus been scattered to the ends of the earth but unnumbered thousands have enriched with their blood the soil of their native land, and yet for hundreds of years of persecution the arts and malice and power of popery have alike failed to exterminate the heroic race of French Protestants. They have never become extinct in that country. Somewhere in the sequestered mountain villages, in far away sea-side hamlets, the old faith has been held and transmitted from generation to generation. Thus it came to pass that when the power of despotism was broken in the wild storms of the first revolution, it was found that the old faith, like buried seed, was ready to spring up and bear fruit as in former ages.

There has been a constant growth of the Protestantism of France all through the various changes which have come upon the country for the [illegible] years. Since the revocation of the Edict of Nantes there [illegible] never been a day when there [illegible] such abundant promise of real [illegible] as there is at present. [illegible] undoubtedly more Protestants in France to-day than at [illegible] within two hundred years. [illegible] fact that the Republic is favorable to Protestant[illegible]

[illegible] be that the Protestants of [illegible] will need to go to [illegible] learn how to reach and evangelize the masses of the common people. [illegible] All the independent [illegible] the last five years has wrought such won[illegible] has showed how men [illegible] brought under the influence [illegible] and yet it is nothing more nor less than the old pioneer Methodist way of taking the gospel to the people. They will not come for it. It must be taken to them. A hundred years of Methodism has proved that when it is fully offered they will accept it, and be saved.

Another noticeable development of France Protestantism is in its utilization of the press. More than a million and a half copies of the Bible or parts of the Bible were distributed at the recent Exposition. There is an increasing Protestant literature in France, consisting in part of works translated from other languages, but mostly made up of the writings of French Protestants. These works contain the real marrow of the gospel, and they must do good wherever they are read. Then there is to be a daily paper issued in the interest of Protestantism in April next. It already has a subscribed capital of more than $50,000, and a prospect of even greater financial strength. In a recent meeting of the stockholders it was proposed to call the new paper The Anti-Clerical. But that was thought by some to be too aggressive, and so the name finally adopted was The Reformer, with the clause "An Anti-Clerical and Republican Journal," added to the name to explain the animus of the sheet. It shows the tendency of the parties interested when we know that the man who proposed the name of "Anti-Clerical" has been made editor-in-chief, at least for the present. The paper will be Republican, and will oppose the pretensions of the Papacy, and as such it will be the friend of God and man. Let Protestants all over the world bid their co-religionists of France the heartiest God-speed. They deserve the sympathy and prayers of all, and with these and their own determined efforts they will yet redeem that beautiful land from the accursed tyranny of priest and Pope that has crushed it for so many weary centuries.—New York Advocate.

Bishop Simpson on Ministerial Power—Its Attainment.

The attainment of ministerial power should be an object of most intense desire. I do not suppose all may be equally robed with it. It is an attribute of divine sovereignty, and He gives it to whom He will. But when I remember that God calls man to minister, to save souls; that He is glorified by their success; that unto them who ask He has promised they should receive, and that He will fill them with His Holy Spirit, I cannot but think there is a manifestation of the Spirit for each man, that he may be fit for his office.

First, there should be an entire consecration of every moment of time, body and soul, for the service of God. The heart should be made ready for His reception. Like the sacrifices of old, this living sacrifice should be without spot or blemish. "Know ye not that your bodies are temples of the Holy Ghost?" That Spirit is to dwell with us and abide in us. Every faculty and every power belongs wholly to God, and we set it apart for His service. We have a grand and holy mission among men, and yet as Jesus took upon Him the sorrows of the world, so while our mission elevates, it does not separate us from the masses about us.

Secondly, there must be earnest prayer. It is God's pleasure to be entreated, and we must be in a condition to receive. Seeing the responsibility laid upon us and the magnitude of the work and our own insignificance, and that there is no power adequate but the Holy Spirit, we pray for it. So must we wait, as the disciples did, until the Holy Spirit be poured on us from on high. We must wait expecting, not for any miraculous power, not for conscious endowment, but for the full conviction that God will so take possession of our memory and reason and imagination, of our strength and learning, that each and all of them, vitalized by his own power, shall be made to glow with heat that they shall be made to burn their way to the hearts of [illegible] who hear us.

Thirdly, to intense praying must be added fasting. If I am asked [illegible] power, I cannot an[illegible] Jesus said, "This sort goeth not out but by praying and fasting." [illegible] The disciples asked why they could not cast him out. The answer implies different degrees of spiritual power. There is a power sufficient to reach some hearts, but not all, and who that loves his Master does not covet the power to rescue the vilest of the vile? Fasting is a sign of deep feeling, and it adds to its intensity. Who has not felt a sorrow that made him for a time regardless of food? With a dear one on the bed of death, how tasteless and valueless is food! So if there be an intensity of prayer that absorbs the soul we become like Him who said, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of;" and again, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me."

It adds to the intensity of purpose. The men who sought for Saul of Tarsus bound themselves with an oath not to eat or drink until they had seized him. While David prayed for the life of his child he ate no meat until the child was dead. Thus the minister is anxious to receive spiritual power, so anxious to rescue souls from ruin, that sometimes he has no relish for food. His whole power is concentrated on one thing. As the ball, when the rifle is pointed at the mark, strikes the center, so the minister, having one aim, finds the words going direct to the hearts of his hearers. How wonderful the example of Christ! He needed no prayers for Himself. He prayed for others. He continued whole nights in prayer, and He prayed for others as they would not pray for themselves. He needed no fast for Himself, but He fasted forty days and nights in the Wilderness, and after that angels administered unto Him and He came out and healed the sick. Moses on the mountain of God came down with shining face so that the people could not gaze upon him until he was veiled. So the minister coming out of his closet is gifted with words that pierce to the hearts of the people. This brings to us the most solemn thoughts with reference to our congregation. Immortal souls come to listen to the utterances of the Savior. God has stirred them by His Spirit, and if they are saved, it must be through our words. It may be the last time that some one may hear. If we knew who it was, how we would try to preach Jesus! Our eyes are sealed to destiny; but that person is in the congregation, and we must draw the bow at a venture and trust to divine direction. When I have heard, as I have frequently, of persons present in assemblies where I have preached, who have been called away by accidents, or disease, I have never regretted that sermon was not more beautiful, but that it was not preached with more power. I cannot conceal my conviction that this power would be more universal but for negligence of those of us who preach.

If there is one thing above all others that I desire for myself and covet for you, young gentlemen, it is this ministerial power—this baptism of fire. Seek for this more than for learning, wisdom of oratory. To be able to preach one sermon like Livingstone's would be worth a life of service.

If the Bible be true, and you are called to the ministry, you are lifted out of the common service of life. Your highest glory will be to appear as living, walking Christ's among men; and you will feel with the apostle, "For me to live is Christ."—Yale Lectures.

Indian Missions.

Father Wilbur, who for years has labored among the Indians, says: "Make the tree good, then the fruit will be good. The heart is the place of reform, or to begin reform, with the Indians. If we fail to give moral character to the Indian, we can give him nothing that will do him real and permanent good. If we succeed in building up moral character so he is no longer a thief, a liar, a drunkard, a profane person, a polygamist or a gambler, but a man of industry, integrity, sobriety and purity, then he no longer needs the gifts of the government or the charities of anybody. He then becomes a man like other good men, and can take care of himself. To do this work needs a minister all the time with the people."

The legislative committee of the New Hampshire Legislature, on woman suffrage, reported against giving women the right to vote in school district meetings, also on liquor questions and in elections where they are tax-payers.

Friends of the Negro.

The last North American Review has a very interesting series of papers on the question of negro sufferage. Harper's Weekly, of which George William Curtis is the editor, in speaking of these papers, says:

The names of the writers will command attention, for they are Senators Blaine and Lamar, Governor Wade Hampton, General Garfield, Alexander H. Stephens, Wendell Phillips, Montgomery Blair, and Thomas A. Hendricks. With the exception of Mr. Blair—who is always an exception—they agree that the negro can not be disfranchised, which is the practical point of discussion. As for enfranchisement, Mr. Blaine and Mr. Garfield show that there was really nothing else to do. The question was whether the State lately in rebellion should be restored with their political power increased by rebellion, and nothing of slavery changed but the name. The increase of power was conceded as inevitable under the Constitution, and the negro was enfranchised as the best security of his rights, and consequently as the surest guarantee of the peace and order of the States concerned. Mr. Blaine's summary at the end of the discussion is conclusive. Statesmanship is doing the best thing practicable when action is imperative. The dilemma offered to the Republican party was a choice of evils, and it chose the least. Mr. Lamar's paper is ably and calmly written. It is the work of a man who has suffered and who has seen much suffering, and who has been schooled to moderate expression. It is interesting to compare his paper with that of Mr. Phillips, who holds that the great Republican blunder was the refusal to confiscate and to give forty acres to every freed family, and who thinks the South is quietly awaiting a chance to do what it failed to do before. Happily, however, time and changed institutions count for something in national progress.

Mr. Lamar and Mr. Blaine state certain things as facts, in exact contradiction. Mr. Blaine asserts that the negro vote is terrorized and suppressed in certain districts. Mr. Lamar denies that there is more disturbance than is usual every where and at all elections, and that the change of the political character of the negro vote is due to his preception of the truth that he has been used as a tool to despoil his natural allies, the old master class. But we revert to our former reply to Mr. Lamar, when he made the same general statement in the House, in reply to General Garfield, three years ago. If the master class had shown themselves to be the real friend of the negro, the carpet-bagger could have done nothing. If the master class had surpressed and punished Ku-Klux, the negro would have been its warmest friend. If the master class had dealt generously with labor, and provided schools, and done what natural allies always and instinctively do, there would have been no question of the virtual unanimity of the negro vote for Tilden in 1876. But who were Ku-Klux? the master class. Who practically connived at their crimes?—the master class. Who framed the black codes?—the master class. Who were the bulldozers in Louisiana?—the master class. Who were the red shirts in South Carolina?—the master class. Why where the jury laws and the national election laws neccessary?—because of the master class. Why was the color line drawn?—because experience had taught the negro distrust of the master class. It was not carpet-bag eloquence that did it. It was the the midnight scouring and hunting and harrying, and the scornful indifference of the master class.

The situation of that class was pitiful, and no honorable man will forget it. But neither must that master class forget that when it had the opportunity to show how much of a natural ally and friend of the negro it was, it hastened to pass the black codes. And now it shows the natural alliance and its friendship by stuffing the ballot-box against him, and by making it physically impossible for him to vote. Mr. Blaine shrewdly points out not only that Democrats like Mr. Hendricks constantly and strenously opposed negro suffrage, but now, when they accept it, it is only because it is either practically suppressed or made Democratic. Mr. Lamar, as a sagacious Southern Democrat, and Mr. Hehdricks, as a type of the Northren Democrat, ought to understand that no Democratic argument can prosper which assumes any regard or friendship or care for the negro upon the the part of the Democratic party. Charles Stuart and Archbishop Laud might as well have appealed to the friendship for Cameronians and Puritans. The problem of the Democratic party in the Southern States is to obtain a confidence which it might have had without trouble. The bane of the Southern and therefore of national politics is the color line. That will be a peril while it lasts. It is not to be obliterated by force or fraud. The shot-gun can shoot it away, nor the tissue ballot juggle it off. While it lasts it is a danger, and it can be removed only by proved justice and good faith. On no other grounds can there be any alliance between the heirs of the old Democratic party and its victims. Every sign of such a disposition we shall gladly hail and acknowledge, and one of the first and most promising signs will be local justice toward bulldozers of every kind and degree.

The Burmah Massacre.

A London dispatch, dated March 8th, says: "Particulars have not arrived from India respecting the recent shocking tragedy in Burmah, mentioned in these dispatches of February 20. Magioce Woongyle, who for a long time had enjoyed the confidence of the King, and who had taken many steps toward establishing something like a constitutional and settled form of administration, suddenly incurred the displeasure of the King, was dismissed from office and put under arrest. The King believed that this minister had not only been corrupt in respect to the finances, but disloyal to himself. A strong cabal composed of the King's favorites, urged him to return to his former despotic system of government, and so wrought upon his mind that he presently threw into prison his brothers, the Princes, and ordered them to be treated with great cruelty. They were there for some time before the order was issued for their execution. They were almost starved, and their limbs became so emaciated that new irons had to be put upon them, as the old ones were found to be too large. On the day of the massacre the young King, who had for some time been leading an extremely dissipated life, was wrought upon to such an extent that it is said he was intoxicated at the moment he gave the order for the execution of the Princes and their relations. The order was immediately carried out, and eighty-eight persons were butchered.

The Senate of the Forty-sixth Congress has a Democratic majority of eight over all. The House of 293 members may be analyzed as follows: Democrats, 146; Independent Democrats, 2; Republicans, 127; Greenback Democrats, 7; Greenback Republicans, 5; vacancies, 6;—four Congressmen to be elected in California, one in Texas and one in New York.

The Clerk of the United States Court in Virginia has issued writs for the arrest of five State judges, charged with the violation of the Federal election and jury laws. The Governor of Virginia has instructed them to refuse to give bail and go to jail, and that they will be released on a writ of habeas corpus, and the fight between Virginia and the United States will then fairly begin.

By the final treaty between Russia and Turkey the latter will have to pay the Czar $166,000,000, and $5,335,000 to Russian subjects in Turkey for damages sustained during the war. Of course Turkey can't pay this, but it is not unlikely that Great Britain will foot the bill and foreclose on what remains of the Ottoman Empire for her pay. Turkey owes England now about $1,000,000,000.

A San Francisco dispatch, of the 13th, says: "S. D. Field, Superintendent of the Electric Light Company of San Francisco, has combined the principles of several electric machines, so as to work the electric light and telegraph wires at the same time. To-day one of his machines here worked fifteen different circuits, varying from 100 to 480 miles long. This is the first successful experiment of the kind."

On Saturday night, 1st inst., about ten o'clock a party of six or eight masked men called at the cabin of an old negro, Abe Wooten, living in the 9th district eight miles from Manchester, and demanded admittance, which being refused they set fire to the cabin in two or more places. Finding that he and his family—wife and four children—would be burned if they remained, the old man rushed out and was seized by the maskers, carried one hundred yards or so and shot to death.

We are to have a national quarantine. The law provides for the detention and disinfection of vessels coming from infected ports, and establishing a Bureau of Health, composed of seven members, and a Board of Health of seven members, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The Bureau is to make all necessary sanitary regulations and quarantine rules, and will supervise the marine hospital service. It does not interfere at all with the State quarantine regulations, but provides for the active co-operation of the Government with the local authorities.

Nature and the Gospel.

The tendency of scientific thought at the present moment is to say that if there be a God in the universe, we cannot discover Him or understand His nature; thus, while allowing us to be theists in theory, compelling us almost to be atheists in practice. They say that no worship of a Supreme Being is possible—at least no intelligent worship; for if we bend before any shrine, it must be before an altar like that at Athens, inscribed to the "Unknown God." They have travelled along the whole line of material phenomena up to the time of the primeval gases and atoms: they have searched the remotest spaces of the universe with the aid of the telescope and have explored with the help of the microscope the worlds of the infinitely little and have returned from every voyage of discovery with the report that they find no supreme mind, the creator and upholder of the universe. They can discover no intelligent cause, few marks of design, and no lofty purpose in the order of things. All that they acknowledge is the existence of some tremendous force which they know not how to name. We are thus to be consigned to the bewilderment of absolute ignorance.

Now when you part company with these agnostics and begin to study nature with those who profess to be theists what do we find that nature seems to teach as to the character of the Being we call God? If the nature of God is embodied in the laws of creation can we call Him a good and benevolent Being who cares for the happiness of His creatures? Nature has no mercy for our mistakes and weaknesses. Even the poet says that nature is "red in tooth and claw" with the blood of her victims. The stronger animals destroy the weaker or leave them to perish. "The survival of the fittest" is the law of creation. The strongest race of animals prey upon the weaker and the more powerful of the same race exterminate the weaker, so that it is only the strongest that have a chance to live. Then, again, there is no tenderness towards man in the realm of the natural world. The operation of its laws goes forward at whatever expense of life, whether human or animal. If a ship puts to sea just before the storm is coming on, the storm is not postponed or held in check for the sake of those on board; she must go down if she is not strong enough to withstand it. The lightning kills those whom it strikes without pity and the earthquake engulphs a whole city of human beings without giving them the chance to escape. The whirlwind and the tornado fulfil their errands with a like ruthless disregard and sweep human lives to destruction as if with infernal glee. John Stuart Mill thought there could not be an Omniscient and Omnipotent Being at the helm of the world or he would not permit this awful destruction to go forward. There is no note of mercy or redemption throughout all the wide realm of nature but stern, pitiless, resistless law. This is the revelation of God in nature.

Let us now turn to the revelation of God in Jesus Christ. The fundamental and wide-reaching thought of that revelation is that God is the Great Father of the human race, loving all with a father's heart. He loves the whole world—the strong and the weak, the bad and the good, and sent His Son into the world to declare that love and to seek and to save them that are lost. If that love had any preference, it was for those that were weakest and most miserable, for the guiltiest and those who had most need of His tender mercy. "I am not come," said Christ, "to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Redemption for the lost, [illegible] for those who had most [illegible] fallen, pardon for the guiltiest—prodigal was the grandest message of that Gospel Christ came to utter. If men would hear His call and repent,—if they would change their lives and be obedient to the Father's will, their past evil should be obliterated from their [illegible] and from the Father's [illegible] was taught in the parable of the prodigal son, and as Christ showed in His treatment of [illegible] who came to Him. He [illegible] that that would not leave us [illegible] the life of the lower animals, [illegible] evil for evil, and whose [illegible] of life is revenge for evil [illegible] but that we ought to [illegible] [illegible]

If in nature self-preservation was the first law of life, in Christ it was self-sacrifice which was supreme law. He sacrificed Himself on the cross to show us the nature of the Father's love and to proclaim in one sublime act that God was reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their tresspasses unto them. And this teaching sank so deeply into the minds of the Apostles and especially into the mind of Paul that they constantly said that the strong should bear the burdens and infirmities of the weak and not seek to please themselves; that thus the helpless should be lifted up into a life of self-help and not be left to perish. Love, pity, mercy toward all, of whatever degree, was the great Christian rule, because God had love, pity and mercy toward all, of every degree and condition. This is the revelation of God in Christ.

Senator Windom's Project.

We have received from Rev. A. K. Davis, of Macon, Miss., an urgent request to publish the speech of Senator Windom, on the plan of the colored people leaving the South to settle on United States land in the West, and to advocate the movement. We have not now at hand a copy of the Senator's speech, or we would publish portions of it. As to the general plan of the colored people moving away from the South to escape persecution and ostracism, we have as yet seen no plan proposed that we consider feasible. The African fever has about run its course, and we predict that there will be no general immigration of colored people from any Southern State. On the other hand, the agitation of such a movement will lead to great distress of mind and loss of property. We believe the true line of policy for the colored people of the South is to develop among themselves such an independence of character as will command the respect of all good poeple, and will protect them from bulldozers. The questions of elevating the Freed people and of harmonizing the races must be solved on Southern soil. They are questions of tremendous magnitude, but either there is no God and the drift of the world toward liberty of thought and action has been an accidental blunder, or these problems will be solved. We not only believe that they will be solved but that they are being solved. The blighting mildew of generations of American slavery cannot be wiped away in a day.

A Good Temperance Move.

The representatives of the different temperance organizations of the city have united in forming a Temperance Alliance for the purpose of securing, if possible, an article in the State Constitution to be framed by the coming Convention, which shall prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks throughout the State on Sunday.

A Temperance Alliance has been formed which is to meet as decided at the adjournment of each meeting, and to continue as an organization until after the adjournment of the Constitutional Convention. The following are the officers:—Wm. McLaughlin, president; Dr. J. M. Watkins, first vice president; J. B. Hinton, second vice president; Alexander Caughey, third vice president; Y. A. Woodward, treasurer; F. A. Johnson, secretary; W. C. Ogilvie, assistant secretary; J. W. Harmon, marshal.

This is a very commendable movement, and these gentlemen should receive the commendation and assistance of all. There is an evident waking up throughout the State on the necessity of temperance reform. In twenty parishes of the State the police juries have adopted rules which forbid the liquor trafic on Sunday.

The New Orleans Preachers Meeting.

This meeting composed of preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in New Orleans and vicinity meets every Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the session room of Ames Church. The meetings of late have been specially interesting. At each session forty-five minutes are devoted to the study of the discipline, and the same time is given to the study of the International Lesson for the following Sunday.

Yazoo City Ahead.

Yazoo City leads in the canvass for 1879 in Mississippi. That noble church lead by Rev. G. Brooks, the pastor, and Presiding Elder Bradford has sent a cash list of seventy-five subscribers. Nobly done. The silver communion set and engravings of John Wesley have been all sent, and presiding elder, pastor and [illegible] happy.

[illegible] other Mississippi churches are nearly ready for their communion sets. Which one will stand next to Yazoo City?

A Good Appointment to a Good Work.

Rev. A. E. P. Albert, of Houma, La., has been appointed District Deputy Right Worthy Grand Templar for the State of Louisiana, with authority to organize lodges of Good Templars whenever he can in the State. Mr. Albert is one of the most cultivated and successful colored ministers of the State, and has accepted this important position with a view of extending the order of Good Templars among the colored people of the State. We congratulate our friend on his entrance upon this new and much needed work. This work will not interfere with his pastoral labors. The order of Good Templars is simple in its organization and effective, and is a total abstinence temperance association. There are in this Order over two millions of people in different parts of the world. Ministers of all denominations and active Christian workers of all classes are among its members. Brother Albert will be glad to correspond with any friends in any part of the state who want to organize a Good Templar's lodge. Mr. Albert enters upon this work by the appointment of Mr. Thomas H. Jones, Grand Worthy Chief Templar of the State; who, in his official capacity representing all the Good Templars of the State, will cordially and actively assist him. Any communications directed either to Rev. A. E. P. Albert, Houma, La., or Mr. T. H. Jones, Algiers, La., will be promptly replied to.

The Popular Science Monthly, conducted by E. L. and W. J. Youmans, and published by D. Appleton & Co., 549 551 Broadway, New York. Five dollars per annum. We have received the January, February and March numbers of this most valuable Journal. We do not know where we would look for a series of more varied, instructive and interesting articles upon those sciences that relate to natural phenomena or to education or scientific knowledge in general. The articles are from the pens of the leading scientific men of different countries and thus faithfully represent the drift of current thought. Take the March number as an example of all the rest. Its principle contents are the Electric Light, by Prof Tyndall; Science and Socialism; The Three Years of Childhood; The Chemical Elements; Atheism and the Church; The Sting of the Honey Bee; Experiments with Living Human Beings; Is Conscience Primitive; Fires and their Causes. These with the Editors Table, Literary Notices, Popular Miscellany and Notes form as rich a feast as any one could desire. We advise our readers to subscribe for this monthly without delay.

Among the contents of the April Scribner will be illustrated papers on "Actors and Actresses of New York," "John Ericsson," (a sketch of remarkable interest and freshness), "Henry Bergh and his Work," "H. M. S. Pinafore for Amateurs," "The Stickeen River and its Glaciers," "The Measure of a Man" (by William Page), and "In a Snailery," and other papers on "The Tendency of Modern Thought as seen in Romanism and Rationalism," and a "Journey to a Political Convention," together with stories, poetry, and full and varied departments, and an Index of Volume XVII. As there are two volumes to the year, Scribner is now eight and a half years old.

A young man, lately of Drew Seminary, writes from Samokov, Bulgaria, January 1, 1879: "Since I have been here the Russian officers have entertained me very kindly and have insisted on having anything and everything which I brought from America, saying, "Because it is from America we must have it as a token," and they are willing to pay any price. I am glad our Mission is to be continued here. To-day the Bulgarians are holding Christmas. On the New Year we all assembled in the girls school room of our Mission in the presence of all our missionaries, and the gifts were distributed to the children after the American fashion.

The Berean Question Book for 1879 comes to us late, but not too late to receive our hearty commendation. It contains every lesson of the year, with Golden Text, Outline, home readings of the International Series for 1879. It also contains a Descriptive Index, explaining the proper names of persons and places mentioned in the years lessons, and short Catechisms on Temperance and Missionary Work. Dr. Vincent was assisted in its preparation by Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, Rev. B. F. Vincent, Miss Julia Coleman and others.

A Pulpit Hymn Book.

We will send post paid a splendid pulpit hymn book for $1 50. This is the new hymn book, and is bound in sheep, and contains the ritual for pulpit use.

New Orleans University.

The second term of this Institution which was so aptly styled by one of our late conference Committees, "the pride of our conference" has just closed. During the term every room has been filled to its utmost capacity. Our chapel service has been well attended and the improved earnestness of the students has been a marked feature.

Every suggestion of the Faculty is met promptly by the members of the school, and the work was never more encouraging than now. Our Theological Department has maintained its rich promise at the opening of the term.

The growing interest of the members of these able classes speaks very highly of the management of Prof. Johnson, and we fondly anticipate the time when we may be able to look upon a class of noble young men, throughly drilled in the text books of this Department, in the usages of our church, and in the spirit and power of the Gospel of Christ, taking work in the Louisiana and neighboring Conferences.

The Sunday-school on sabbath afternoons is well attended, and a growing interest is manifest in both scholars and teachers. The report of the Delegates to the State Sunday school Convention, which was recently held at the Frst Presbyterian church in this city, was received with marked interest.

Not the least interesting feature of the work in this University is the Saturday afternoon sewing class, where young ladies conected with the University and others living in the vicinity are taught needle work by ladies of the newly organized missionary society. Indeed every branch of our work is being pushed to its utmost capacity. On the 17th of this month the third and last term of the the year will begin and we anticipate the fullest and best term, every way, the University has ever known. Our boarding hall is working most satisfactorily.

Let our friends who propose to come in this term come promptly. We can accomodate only a few more. We now have on the roll of present attendance one hundred and thirty students. We wish this number increased to one hundred and fifty and we shall be satisfied.

It is true that our teachers are hard worked, but we are all willing to put in all our time and strength.

The Normal Class is organized to begin work at the opening of this term. Any young gentleman or ladies who wish to teach will do well to attend this term. The Normal Class which is organized the last term of each year, is for the purpose of fitting teachers for positions in the public schools.

J. S. BEAN.

The City.

Murder! Suicide!! Murder!!! Suicide!!!! Day after day—with scarce an exception—a murder or a suicide.

The serious illness of Prof. C. G. Forshey is announced. He had been sick for some time but during a late thunderstorm was stricken with paralysis.

Boarding officer W. R. Hardy at the quarantine, a hundred miles below the city, reports that the Norwegian Bark Sleipher arrived there from Rio Janeiro with yellow fever on board. The captain died on the voyage. It is fortunate that so positive a case occurred first for it will lead to strict quarantine at once, and reduce the probability of fever reaching the city.

The Mayor and his council have made a personal inspection of the cemeteries reported by Dr. Holt to be in such a bad condition. The Mayor says that though abuses might have existed, he was satisfied that there was at present no cause for complaint which could be remedied. The city, unfortunately was is no condition financially to adopt such a perfect system of drainage as would render its outskirts more healthy, and that, though the condition of the cemetery was not all that could be wished, yet it was as good as possible under the existing circumstances.

"It is a singular feature of our times," says the London Watchman, "that an age which has seen the conversion of the Sandwich Islands, of Madagascar, the South Sea, of the Kerens, of the Teingus, an age which has seen the destruction of the Pope's temporal power, an age which has seen the doors of China and Japan thrown open to the herald of the cross, should be an age which encourages despair of the ultimate victory of Christianity over the world."

St. Nicholas evidently does not let its high standard shut out hunting stories and tales of adventure for boys. Two such papers are announced for its April number,—one a marvelous story of a bombshell, the other an account of "A Morning Call from a Panther."

Dallas District.

MR. EDITOR:—The winter has been very hard on us and the churches are so open that it was often impossible to hold meeting to any advantage. At Dallas, January 18 and 19, the Lord was with us. We protracted the meeting a few nights and had some five or six conversions. The membership here is only eighty in number but they are a live little band. They estimate four hundred dollars for their Pastor's support this year and forty dollars for the Presiding Elder. The Sunday School numbers about forty scholars. Rev. Brother Rice and Miss Weeb both take an active part in all of the church work and help the church greatly. The church is not finished yet and is in debt some to the Church Extension Society. But the brethren are at work and will pay fifty dollars soon, as they have raised most of it already. The Pastor, Rev. H. Swann, is up with the times and is doing good work, the good result of which will be found in after years.

January 24 we came down to Corsicana. Here we have nothing and the prospects are not flattering. It will take some time and much expense to the Church. The town or city is a nice one and is the county seat of Nevarro county. Battle Creek is twenty-five miles south-west of here in the edge of this county and partly in Hill county. Here we have 95 members in the Church and about 30 or 40 sholars in the Sunday School. They have a church house that has been built some two or three years and never finished. It is a box building about 20x30 and has no pulpit, no seats, but the pastor, Rev. J. Prince, was to go to work on it at once and fix it up. The settlement is mostly colored and own the lend on which they live. They are good people and will make the church a good charge with the proper attention. Land sells very cheap and can be bought on easy terms.

From there we went to Grosbeck Circuit where we found a membership of about 225, but the Sunday School I could not learn much about and the pastor has not had time since Conference to organize it. They have school some times. This work is in Limestone county. Springfield is the county seat. We have some little churches on this work and with the right care it will be a good work. I did not find out all about this place. Just as we got through with the eleven o'clock service I received a dispatch that my wife was very low and it being some distance to the rail road I had to leave. The work lies from four ten miles west of the Houston and Texas Central Rail Road.

The next visit was to Waco where we have four charges bearing the name of Waco, when they all would make about two good appointments, Waco, Mount Zion and Gatesville. The first named place is in Waco and has fifteen members and a small Sunday-school. They have a very good little church which the trustees claim, and any man that don't suit them they will lock out, so I learn. Gatesville is about forty miles south-west of here, and is the county seat of Coryell county. About this work the pastor, Rev. A. Davis, could not say much. Waco Mission has one preaching point 12 miles north of town, and one 6 and another 12 miles south. The membership of this mission is 116 in the Church and 30 in the Sunday-school. The day was cold and we soon got through here and returned to town. They have a very nice little church six miles from town.

East Waco Circuit has three charges: one ten miles southwest, one fifteen miles east and the other eighteen miles northeast, the membership is about one hundred church members and eighty-seven Sunday-school scholars. They have no house worth speaking of, the pastor lives in Waco and has not been able to work up this work on the account of having no horse. If his one hundred members will put in twenty-five cents each they can get him a good pony. May the Lord help them to do so.

Weco St. James is a good charge with about two hundred and twelve members and a good Sunday-school. As the pastor will report this work as soon as the meeting is over I will leave it.

Bremond and Long Branch has about sixty members. The quarter was held by Rev. G. Wilson. So I cannot say much about it. Milford has only eighteen members and eleven in Sundey-school. Marlin is a nice little place, the county seat of Falls county. As I noticed the pastor had written you the other dey I will not say any more at present about Marlin. The circuit is from seven to twelve miles south-west and has a membership of one hundred and eighty. They had no Sunday-school when I was there. The pastor, Rev. G. Wilson, is doing all he can to get good churches on the work and has built two since conference. The rest of my district I will report at another time when the men get to their works, if they ever do.

OUR SOUTHERN METHODISM

TEXAS.

Rev. A. R. Norris, San Antonio: "My Sunday School is alive and is still increasing. The church is in a prosperous condition. Bro. L. Carper was sick, but recovered and finished up his work on his first round. He preached a glorious sermon last Sunday night."

LOUISIANA.

Rev. A. E. P. Albert, Houma: "There is a strong sentiment in our church here against the use of fermented wine for sacramental purposes. We welcome this sentiment and shall exert ourselves to adopt the unfermented juice as soon as convenient. Could not some Christian merchant in your city be persuaded to keep it on sale for convenience of our churches in this State, that no doubt would prefer and adopt it generally. Our Zion is enlarging. Pray for us."

Presiding Elder Work in Texas.

Mr. Editor:—I went from Anderson, where I wrote last, to Millican and spent about five days. Bro. Jefferson, the present pastor, met me at the depot, and gave me a cordial welcome. Our people at Millican have been struggling for years against opposition, which long since would have overcome a less energetic people. I want to give honor here to whom honor is due. God has given our church in this place open, noble women who have carried the cross, and amidst the most trying circumstances, and when, perhaps, the brethren would have given up in despair, their faith failed not. They said if the old church goes down we will go down with her, all shall perish together.

God bless those noble souls. Bro. Jefferson is a good man, and he is doing all he can for the Master and the Church. We had about thirty mourners on Sunday-night, and the church was greatly blessed. On Monday night we had the best love feast held by me during the round. Bro. Jefferson intends to build a new church this year; he says they have about $175 on hand, and with a little help from the Church Ex. Society they can build a good church. Thursday went from Millican to Bryan where the last conference was held, you were there, and will remember how well we were taken care of. Bro. Lee was here three years and commenced with no house and but very few members. He has left a beautiful church and quite a large membership and this against terrible opposition. Bro. Brown, the new pastor, was waiting for us at the depot, and certainly did all in his power to make me pleasant. If you did not know Bro. Brown before one glance would convince you that he was a Methodist preacher. His people love him very much, they say the Bishop took one good man away, but gave them another. Preached five times for them while there and attended to all the duties of a presiding elder except holding love feast. We had a glorious meeting. The church was blessed and a large number of sinners came forward and said pray for us. Was gone from home this trip a little over two months, preached about fifty times, held all my love feasts except one and remained after preaching, and labored with mourners sometimes until late at night. We had a number of conversions, and many united with the church. Revivals are going on still at nearly all the churches. Bro. Lee at Hemstead writes me his meeting is still going on, and several have been converted. Bro. Guest at Courtney is still having revival meetings.

Sherman, March 6.

Letter from Washington.

Dear Editor:—I am now here at my new appointment, with my family—arrived Feb. 13. We found brethren and sisters awaiting us with gladness, and they deserve great credit for the manner in which they received us. On Saturday night, March 1st, we held our first quarterly love feast with great joy. Eight persons were received into full membership. Our presiding elder, J. Matlock, was with us, and on Sunday the 2d preached twice and administered the sacrament to 118 persons. We have raised a list of 22 subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN. We have had a revival meeting for the last two weeks, resulting in the return of nine back sliders and an altar crowded with convicted sinners. On March 6th a brother from the M. E. Church, South, preached an excellent sermon for us, after which seven persons came to the altar asking to be prayed for.

Letter from Columbus, Miss.

MR. EDITOR:—We came to this place just after the close of the last Annual Conference and, as usual, set out on Sabbath morning to find the Methodist church. On entering we found that a few persons had assembled for the purpose of having Sabbath-school. We were surprised to see the attendance so small and so little interest manifested. No Lesson Leaves were used; indeed, they seemed sadly deficient in every thing that is necessary to render a Sabbath-school lively and interesting. And, as we sat there comparing facts and figures, we could not help thinking that there was a great fault somewhere, and if, as we believe, the future Church may be judged by our Sabbath-schools, there was certainly a gloomy outlook for Columbus. And this, too where the membership (if we have been correctly informed) numbers nearly three hundred. Hearing that Bro. Jones, who had officiated as pastor for the past three years, had returned from Conference and was to deliver his farewell address that night, we went expecting to hear a good discourse. His text was well chosen and his opening remarks most excellent; but, just as we were becoming interested, a few persons sitting near the pulpit became, so noisy we were unable to hear any more of the sermon; a circumstance we regretted exceedingly, as it is in all probability the last opportunity we shall have of sitting under the sound of his voice. The following Sabbath the pulpit was occupied by the new pastor in charge, Bro. R. F. Penny. He is the right man in the right place, and since his arrival has been laboring almost incessantly for the good of the church, and if its members will sustain him by their prayers and aid him by their contributions, he will make this one of the first charges of the State. Already there is a very perceptible change for the better. Congregations are increasing in numbers and becoming more orderly. Sixteen additions have been made to the church and the Sabbath-school is beginning to prosper. Last Sabbath being the first in the month the time was taken up in hearing the verses committed to memory by the pupils. Miss Mary Richards carried off the prize by reciting 48 verses—the largest number. The whole number of verses recited was 120.

The Freedwomen.

WORK PROPOSED.—The purpose is to employ Christian women to visit the houses, and churches and Sunday-schools of our colored people, and to labor especially for the salvation of the souls and bodies of the colored woman. Mothers' meetings, and meetings for girls and young women will be organized; also sewing-circles, where the simpler duties of household work will be taught and instructions given as to personal habits and tastes. Special efforts will everywhere be made to increase attendance upon our Sunday-schools and churches, and the New Orleans University. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in New Orleans alone fourteen churches among the colored people with a membership of over 3000. This membership represents a population of over [illegible]. Our work will be at first in connection with these churches, whose pastors will be our advisers and assistants.

MISSIONARIES' HOME.—We have rented and [illegible] a house, No. 318 Second street, where our missionaries will reside, and where meetings can be held when ever desired.

VOLUNTARY HELPERS.—Besides those who are employed and give their whole time to the work there are many who would be glad to give a part of the Sabbath; or a day or two of each week to this work of the Master. Such will please call at the Home or on Mrs. Hartzell.

OUR PRESENT MISSIONARIES.—At present the following are our missionaries: Mrs. A. M. Ryder, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, of Normal, Illinois; Miss Lizzie Thompson, of Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephens, of New Orleans.

MONEY.—No work of this kind can be carried forward without money. No debts will be made. All money given will be conscientiously applied, and a published report given. We have some cards on which is printed a simple pledge to raise ten dollars in ten cent subscriptions. Send for a card and help us, or if you prefer it send us what you can direct.

THIS COLUMN.—This column of the SOUTHWESTERN has been devoted to our work, and in it will be found the announcements of meetings, extracts from letters, notes of progress, incidents connected with the work, etc.

PRAY FOR US.—This work is as much missionary work as that done in Africa, in India or Mexico.

It was not an easy task, but slowly, step by step, the faults which were rapidly forming into vices, were met, called by truthful names, the results made clear. If Mattie shrank under the close personal application, and she did sometimes, despite the old effort to appear unconcerned, there followed quickly, earnest words of appeal, and all praise that could be spoken.

Miss Grey hardly hoped for immediate results, she was herself learning the wisdom of patient waiting; but was encouraged by Mattie's gentler manners and improved appearance.

By this time she had ceased to be the terror of her class, but her faults were too often painfully apparent. If in words, she never said I am sorry when the old, hard nature had been displayed, her humbled manner spoke volumes. The liking for the teacher was rapidly growing into confidence.

"It is not easy for me to do right, Miss Grey, but I do try; I have been trying for a whole month; to do conscience work in a quiet way, but, but—I must have been very trying to everybody; I used to think everyone disliked me, now everyone seems to help me."

Mattie is doing conscience work still, in simple duties, in quiet ways. The strength of character which she displayed in evil ways is equally resolute for good.

Gen. Cyrus Bussey.

The New Orleans Times gives these words of commendation to our friend, Gen. Bussey, of this city.

"There is no more earnest and indefatigable worker for the commercial interests and prosperity of this city than Gen. Cyrus Bussey. His labors in this respect have been unremitting, and his efforts are recognized and appreciated by those who have the welfare of the city at heart. During the sessions of the commercial convention here last December, he took every opportunity to advocate and advance those interests which are regarded as vital to New Orleans and Louisiana. Gen. Bussey has lately returned from Washington, where he urged upon members of congress, with all of his ability and all the influence which he could command, the importance to this city of the Brazilian mail line bill. He, of course, became thoroughly acquainted, during his canvass of this matter, not only with the means used to defeat this much desired measure in the house, but also with the manner in which other equally important measures to the South were pushed aside or defeated in favor of the interests of more favored sections. Gen. Bussey was careful to satisfy himself as to who are the friends of the South in the next Congress, and who can be relied on for assistance when matters, necessary for the advancement of Southern interests, again come up for legislation. Gen. Bussey, however, is not by any means discouraged. On the contrary, he is very hopeful for the future, and believes that with earnest effort the claims of the South will receive proper recognition at no distant day. As Gen. Bussey is a zealous advocate of the interests of this section, and as he has shown his earnestness by sacrificing both time and money in trying to secure aid from the government for the benefit of those enterprises which would assist very materially in recalling our prosperity, this city at least, while remembering his past services should not forget to give him all possible encouragement in the future in any effort he may make for our interests."

Sunday School.

March 23, 1879.—THE ALL-SEEING GOD.
SCRIPTURE.—Ps. 139: 1-2.
GOLDEN TEXT.—"Thou God seest me."
TOPIC.—"All things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do."—Heb. 4: 13.
[Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.]

Introduction.—Absolutely nothing is known concerning the date at which this Psalm was written. The Psalm is divided into parts of six verses each. The first part treats of God's omniscience, the second of his omnipresence, the third of his foreknowledge, and the fourth consists of a declaration and prayer of the Psalmist. Aben-Ezra very fittingly has called it "The Crown of Psalms."

No Escape from God's Knowledge (1–6).—V. 1. O Lord, thou hast searched me, and known me. Literally, "thou knowest me." "Search," in the original, means to dig—as for precious metals. It represents a very thorough exploring and sifting process. And for what does God so search a man? He is looking for a soul that is lost! He is hunting for a great treasure. In many cases, alas, how hopeless is the search! It is imbedded in sin, and buries itself the more deeply the more it is sought. This searching brings to mind the parable of the woman who lost one of her ten pieces of silver. She lighted a candle, and swept the house, and diligently sought till she found it. In that parable, the woman represents God, and the lost piece of money the human soul.

V. 2. Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising. Of what little things does God take note! We need not fear to bring before him even our most trifling affairs. His care for us extends to everything that affects our welfare. He knows the time when we cease work, and when we begin it—the time of our meditations and the time of our activities—the time when we plan and the time when we perform. Nothing escapes his vigilant knowledge. Thou understandest my thought afar off.

V. 3. Thou compassest my path and my lying down. The marginal rendering of "winnowest" is the true translation. He sifts all our acts. And art acquainted with all my ways. "Acquainted" is used in the sense of familiarly knowing (Job 22:21) and "ways" refer to habits of life. Habits are an index of the man. They most truly tell what he is.

V. 4. There is not a word in my tongue but lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether. "In my tongue," or, as some translate, "on my tongue," seems to refer to words spoken. It matters not how long a time has elapsed, the phonograph retains the words that were spoken into it, and will reproduce them, together with the very tone in which they were uttered. Just as faithful a record is kept in heaven of what men say. "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."

V. 5. Thou hast beset me behind and before. The language sounds very much as if it described an ambushment; but it is not a hostile waylaying that is meant, but a surrounding on all sides that indicates God's wonderful care and watchfulness over all his creatures. Though it is invisible, his encircling presence is none the less real. "In him we live, and move, and have our being." Acts 17:28. And laid thine hand upon me. Man never gets from under that. He can go no farther—do no more than God permits.

V. 6. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high; I can not attain unto it. It was the extent and the minuteness of God's knowledge that drew this exclamation from David. There is nothing too great for him to comprehend—nothing too small to be beneath his notice. Whether we take the telescope or the microscope we look into never-ending vistas of infinity.

No escape from God's Presence.—V. 7. Whither shall I go from thy Spirit, or whither shall I flee from thy presence? With the thought of God's omniscience comes the awe-inspiring thought of God's omnipresence. The one implies the other. If there is no escape from God's knowledge, there is no escape from his presence. Jonah made a futile effort to flee from the presence of the Lord when he took ship for Tarshish. He found that God was upon the sea as well as upon the land.

V. 8. If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. Of course he is in heaven. That would be no place of refuge. It is a mistake for sinners to suppose that they would be happy simply by being in heaven. Of all places, in that they would be the most miserable. If the gates of heaven stood wide open, no sinner would care about venturing in. [illegible] in hell, behold [illegible] Hebrew word [illegible] the Greek "Hades" is an equivalent. It is not a place of torment, but [illegible] to the mythical under-world, where the good and bad alike were supposed to go after death. See Is. 14:9; Matt. 12:40. In the Sheol of those days, or in the place of the doomed as it is now understood, there is no hiding from God. The presence which makes heaven sweeter makes hell the more bitter.

V. 9. If I take the wings of the morning. The rapidity of the progress of light is here referred to. To the uttermost parts of the sea. To the remotest and most unknown parts of the world. The Psalmist affirms that if he could fly with the quickness of light—and it is hardly possible to conceive of anything swifter than that—to the furthest parts of the sea, still he would not be able to outspeed the Spirit of God.

V. 10. Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. The clasp of the divine hand is never loosened. It can stay our progress when it will. His right hand—the hand of power—still holds us.

Vs. 11, 12. I say, surely the darkness shall cover me, etc. The darkness is usually the evil-doer's vail. He commits his crimes under its cover. Night is the time for all the activities of evil. Then the gambling houses, the saloons, the brothels, and all the haunts of sin are in full blast. Then the burglar, the thief, the strange woman, the assassin, begin their work. The day is not able to disclose all the evil that has been wrought in the night. The cover of darkness is one that often is sufficient to shield the perpetrators of atrocious deeds. All the while, to God the night was light about the criminal. "The darkness hideth not from thee: but the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." With a terrible consternation in their hearts at the judgment day, evil doers will realize this fact. In its noonday of revelation every foul deed shall be made known, and every criminal will slink with shame and shake with fear. God's eye is upon us—God's Spirit is ever with us. Let us not seek to escape from his sight or his presence, but rather let us pray with David: "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead in me the way everlasting."

Religious Items.

Mr. Spurgeon's church has 5,045 members.

Methodist papers during February reported nearly 20,000 conversions.

John McDonald and family contributed $15,000 missionary money at a meeting in Canada.

Bishop Wiley says $1000 were raised, within twelve months, from converted Chinese, whose wages amounted to no more than ten cents per day.

Marriages.

At Koscinsko, Miss., by Rev. L. R. Crown, on Feb. 27th, Mr. Hosea Taylor and Mrs. Matilda Larkis. March 5, William Morona and Miss Joan Tipton.

Feb. 29th, 1879, Bazil Brousa to Miss Batay Plummer; March 13, Mr. Tom Mitchel to Miss Rilda Sanders. All of the Parish of St. Landry. Rev. Felix Landor officiating.

At Asbury Chapel, Holly Springs, Miss., March 9, at 8 p. m., by Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Mr. Wesley Williams to Miss Harriett Lea, all of Holly Springs.

Deaths.

Sister Sophia Dunlap, a member of the church at Shubuta, Miss., Feb. 26th. It is said she was 115 years old, and could do ordinary work up to about two weeks previous to her death. She said she was going home to Jesus.

Sister Gracey McCollough, of San Antoino, Texas, passed away on the 4th inst. in full triumph of the living faith. A. B. N.

In Alexandria, La., Jennie Hill, an old and faithful member of the M. E. Church. Her funeral took place March 11th. A large procession followed her remains to the grave.

Among the most remarkable productions of this age and country is Hall's Hair Renewer. Its success is unparalled. It is sought after by rich and poor, high and low, young and old. Inhabitants of foreign lands—the people of Australia, of Europe, and of South America find means to get it at whatever cost. It is because it works like magic. It restores the hair to its youthful color and beauty, and robs approaching age of one of its disagreeable accompaniments. If you are getting bald, try it. Try it if you are getting gray, or if you have any disease of the scalp. Try it if you wish a good hair dressing. It will not disappoint you.—Muncie (Ind.) News.

New Books.

DURATION OF THE COMPARATIVE AGE OF THE WORLD. By Rev. R. Abbey.

This work was published twelve years ago, but the subject discussed is always fresh. The leading object of the author is to show that this earth has before it immense future duration, and that the human race is in the infancy of its being. While the earth is undergoing changes and will undergo a great many more, these changes will be neither greater nor smaller than it is passing through all the while. But he scouts the idea of its being destroyed. It is to be made better, not worse; to be improved, not destroyed; to be preserved, not shattered to pieces and thrown away. On the contrary he anticipates a progress in all things, physical, intellectual and moral until the earth shall be again a perfect Paradise. Yet he looks upon the doctrine of the millenium as a most dangerous form of infidelity. "I hold" he says "that there is and can be no such thing neither now nor ever; that if a millennium and a human second coming can happen at all, then the Christian religion is a falsehood and a failure." This is contrary to the common view of the church. This book contains 360 pages and will repay perusal.

New Publications.

The International Review for March 1879. Of the seven articles in this number of certainly one the very ablest Reviews published in this country, there are no less than five given to important questions of government and finance. One is on Sleep and Dreams, and another on a Forgotten English Poet, together with the usual notices of Contemporary Literature. Such subjects as "The Administration and Civil Service Reform" and "The Currency and the National Banks" challenge particular attention at this time.

The numbers of The Living Age for the weeks ending March 1st and 8th respectively, contain "America Rediviva," Macmillan's Magazine; "Mental Physiology," Edinburgh Review; "About Lotteries," Cornhill; "The Projected Lotteries," Economist; "The Polish Alps," Cornhill; "Daniel Manin," British Quarterly; "Didactic Flirts," Saturday Review; "Music and Science," Nature; "Robert Dick, the Thurso Baker," Chambers's Journal; "Ebb and Flow," Saturday Review; an instalment of "Sir Gibbie," by George MacDonald, and the conclusion of "Within the Precincts," by Mrs. Oliphant, choice poetry and Miscellany. To subscribers for 1879, the publishers still present the six numbers of 1878, containing the first parts of MacDonald's "Sir Gibbie." For fifty-two such numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,000 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10 50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston, publishers.

Harpers Magazine for April has a paper by S. G. W. Beryamin on American Sculpture, illustrated. Abbey contributes a beautiful illustration of Robert Herrick's poem, "To a Bed of Tulips." Colonel Waring, describes the customs of the Tyrolese, and the charms of Innsbruck and Botzen. Helen S. Conant, in "Picturesque Edinburgh," presents the historical and romantic associations of the old town. Frank H. Taylor's "Street Scene in Havana," with characteristic illustrations. The Philadelphia Zoo, is charmingly treated Mrs. M. Howland. Olive Logan contributes an interesting article in a serio-comic vein on the "Ancestry of Brudder Bones," with seventeen pictures which, in connection with the text, convey in a pleasing manner a vast amount of musical information. The principal literary contribution to the number is R. H. Stoddard's admirable paper on the late Richard Henry Dana. In a paper entitled "The Practical Interrogation of Nature," Dr. J. W. Draper admits the reader to his laboratory, and shows by what processes he reached some of the important results already set before the public in his "Scientific Memoirs." Mrs. A. B. Blake writes of "Church Music in America," pointing out its defects and suggesting remedies, showing what resources for good sacred music are accessible in the works of English and Continental composers.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for April is promptly on our table, and fully maintains its well deserved reputation as one of the best, in every respect, published, and worthy of a place in every American household. As this may be regarded the Easter number, the leader is a deeply interesting Easter story, entitled "Winona," by Mary G. Hollister, Missionary at Aintab, Turkey. This is followed by a very instructive paper on "Some Easter Customs," by Mr. Godfrey A. Hudson. Mrs. Heman's beautiful poem is reproduced—"Easter Day in a Mountain Churchyard." Among the stories is one thrilling of character, "On the edge of a Glacier." "David Fleming's Forgiveness" continues to grow in interest. Thomas Middleton has an admirable story, "Dr. Ellerton's Own Case." We have not space, however, to enumerate even the most attractive features of the contents of this richly freighted publication, filling 128 quarto pages, and embracing every style of literature; the reader cannot fail to be interested, entertained and edified. The illustrations are profuse, and of great artistic merit, adding not a little to the interest and popularity of the Sunday Magazine which is certainly a marvel of cheapness, the subscription being only $3 per annum, postpaid; a single copy 25 cents. Address, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, New York.

Dr. Harter's IRON TONIC

Is a Preparation of IRON and CALISAYA BARK, in combination with the Phosphates, Endorsed by the Medical Profession, and recommended by them for Dyspepsia, General Debility, Female Diseases, Want of Vitality, &c., &c.

Manufactured by the Dr. Harter Medicine Co., No. 213 N. Main Street, St. Louis.

The following is one of the very many testimonials we are receiving daily:

Gentlemen:—Some three months ago I began the use of DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC, upon the advice of many friends who knew its virtues. I was suffering from general debility to such an extent that my labor was exceedingly burdensome to me. A vacation of a month did not give me much relief, but on the contrary, was followed by increased prostration and sinking chills. At this time I began the use of your IRON TONIC, from which I realized almost immediate and wonderful results. The old energy returned and I found that my natural force was not permanently abated. I have used three bottles of the TONIC. Since using it I have done twice the labor that I ever did in the same time during my illness, and with double the ease. With the tranquil nerve and vigor of body, has come also a clearness of thought never before enjoyed. If the TONIC has not done the work, I know not what. I give it the credit. Most gratefully yours,

The Value of Time.

As in fire the loss greatly depends upon the time required for efficient aid to arrive, so the result of catarrh greatly depends upon the speedy use of efficient remedies. For over a quarter of a century, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy has been the standard remedy. The positive cures it has effected are numbered by thousands. Each year has witnessed an increased sale. Its reputation is the result of superior merit. If the disease has extended to the throat or lungs, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery should be used with the Catarrh Remedy. These two medicines will speedily cure the most stubborn case of catarrh. See the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a work of over 900 pages. Price, $1 50. Address the author, R. V. Pierce, M. The New Hymnal.

The Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences at their late sessions, made it the duty of every preacher having charge of a station or circuit to see that their pulpits were supplied with a New Hymnal, and all were to use their influence in having the people supply themselves with Hymnals and to use them in the public congregation and in social meetings.

We are now prepared to supply the following styles of the Hymnal at the prices named. Our terms are cash before sending, or we will send by express C. O. D. Specimen copies sent by mail on receipt of price.

Lectures on Preaching

Delivered before the Theological Students of Yale College.

By Rev. Matthew Simpson, D.D., LL.D.

(One of the Bishops of the M. E. Church.)

Cloth, 12mo. Price.................$1.50

These admirable Lectures embrace the following topics, delivered in the order here stated:

Lecture I. The Nature and Work of the Christian Ministry.
Lecture II. The Call to the Ministry.
Lecture III. The Preacher Personally.
Lecture IV. Indirect Preparation for the Pulpit.
Lecture V. The Preparation of a Sermon.
Lecture VI. The Delivery of a Sermon.
Lecture VII. Ministerial Power.
Lecture VIII. The Influence of the Pastorate on the Pulpit.
Lecture IX. Collateral and Miscellaneous Work.
Lecture X. Is the Modern Pulpit a Failure?

It is needless to say that these topics are treated in a masterly manner—clearly, forcibly, practically; as becomes both the gravity and importance of the subjects discussed, and the reputation of their author as a "workman who needeth not to be ashamed." No minister should be without them, as none can carefully and thoughtfully read them without profit. In them there is nothing showy, but they present the ripe fruit of the matured thought of a long period of ministerial usefulness and oversight. They are weighty, well-considered teachings.

This book will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Address,

Young Folks' Corner.

A True Story.

BY MRS. S. C. ADAMS.

It was one of those dark gloomy days in December when the clouds seem to embrace the earth, and the sun withholds its shining, and every window-sill and doorway was piled up with snow, that had been falling all night silently; the wind had risen, gathering strength with every coming hour, making the hovel tremble in which lived a poverty stricken family.

Little Tom, thinking this being the day his father received his wages, called, "Mamma, is this the day father is going to the village?" "Yes." "And didn't he promise you some glass for the windows? It is so cold." "Hush Tom, he's sleeping, and what are his promises?"

"What's that?" asked the ill-tempered father, but mother and children kept very still, lest this day would begin as the last one had ended, with blows and curses.

"Tom, you shall go with me," and the father commenced putting on his coat, while the mother wrapped [illegible] as well as rags would [illegible] fearing to trust him in [illegible] gave him a kiss and [illegible] lingering look. Tom [illegible] to catch up with his [illegible] had started down the [illegible] a few min[illegible] forgotten article, [illegible] saw the anxious counte[illegible] mother; he put his [illegible] her neck saying, "It is a [illegible] morning, but God sees [illegible] the clouds, and father's [illegible]

I can get it full of bread. Do send for father."

"Is he at the saloon, Tom?" said the mother. But the little boy, by this time, was again unconscious. The physician, on returning near where he had picked up the boy, heard a groan, and getting out of his sleigh, called loudly: "Anybody lost?" Another groan, and plodding through the deep snow, found the father, with two empty bottles beside him, and being unable to raise him up, had to leave the poor, miserable man, and drive on to the village.

It was Sabbath morning, and some temperance ladies were gathering for an early meeting. They went immediately to the rescue, and had him conveyed to his miserable hovel, laid him on the bed of straw, with scarcely rags to cover him. The scene presented was heartrending. Little Tom was sitting near a few burning embers, crying; his feet were in a bucket of snow, while the mother, with wringing hands, seemed wild with despair.

The family, that afternoon, were carried to the poor house, which is an elysium to the four little girls, for it has a big stove in it. Leaving them to warm themselves, the county conveyance proceeded to the hospital with the frozen father.

The next day a crowd of students brought a man to the table to amputate both hands and feet; but they hesitated as they laid him down, and the Professor said: "You can't do it; he's too far gone, and it won't do to butcher him. By to-morrow the poor creature will be beyond all want." The sudden effect produced by lifting him on the table, or the pain of movement, caused him to give a scream: "Tom, Tom, it's too late, too late!" The students were struck with terror, as if a dead man spoke. The Professor said, "What's too late?" But no word ever escaped the drunkard's lips again, eternity alone unfolding to him the failure of his life.

Think of this, dear children! Poor little Tom maimed for life; the mother and little girls driven to take refuge in the almshouse; the poor father frozen to death—all for whisky! And will you promise now, never to touch that which makes such wickedness and such sorrow?—Our Union.

Work!

A church which fails to do the work which God has committed to it on behalf of the unsaved around it will inevitably die, and ought to die, if it is not dead already. All history backed by revelation, teaches the truth, that outward conditions of prosperity will never insure continuous church-life where faithfulness is wanted. Indeed, the absence of one implies the absence of the other. As Mr. Moody once remarked, in answer to a question concerning the renting of pews, "A live church will live anyway, a dead church will die anyway; these questions make less difference than many folks think. That was a wise utterance of the old colored preacher, which has been quoted as a specimen of native eloquence. Objection had been made to a missionary collection, on account of the extreme poverty of the congregation, and their need of self-help to keep their own fires burning. Said the preacher, "Dey don't die dat way. Show me a church that died from doing too much good, an' I'll make a pilgrimage to dat church by the pale light of de moon, an' I'll stan' on de moss-covered roof and say, 'Blessed am de dead, dat died in de Lord!'" Think of these things.—Evangelical Messenger.

45 Years Before the Public.

THE GENUINE

DR. C. McLANE'S

CELEBRATED

LIVER PILLS,

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

Sexual Exhaustion,
Spinal Disease,
Indigestion,

And other chronic ailments.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONY.

[Extract from the Baltimore "American," December 21, 1878.]

"The Pulvermacher Electric Belt is recommended to general use for the following reasons: First, for its wonderful properties for the cure of diseases of the kidneys, stomach, liver and blood; secondly, for its extreme simplicity, and the fact of its being applied outside, precludes all possibility of any injury being done to the patient, as an external remedy is universally acknowledged to be safe. Another advantage is the facility with which the progress of the disease and cure can be watched, and if the Belt be not quite in the right place, it can be very easily readjusted so as to cover the parts affected. The Pulvermacher Electric Belt, and its perfection, has been hailed with delight, not only by the sufferers who have regained health, enjoyment, and a new lease of life through its beneficent qualities, but by the medical profession, who very frequently prescribe its use to their patients."

PULVERMACHER'S

are indorsed and approved by the most eminent medical and scientific authorities in the world, by the Faculties of France, England, Austria, Prussia, Belgium, and America, and by well-known writers, who refer to the extraordinary cures effected by Pulvermacher's Electric Belts and Bands, in upwards of one hundred medical and philosophical works.

Inhaling Tube!

—AND—

COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday school Publications of the Church:

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 1f.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel, or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

By its great and thorough blood-purifying properties, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt-rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine.

Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Rose Rash, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, White Swellings, Goitre or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.

In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest Coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. Sold by druggists.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets

SIZE OF PELLETS.

THE "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC.

No use of taking the large, repulsive, nauseous pills, composed of cheap, crude, and bulky ingredients. These Pellets are scarcely larger than mustard seeds.

Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them. They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For Jaundice, Headache, Constipation, Impure Blood, Pain in the Shoulders, Tightness of Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations from the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious attacks, Pain in region of Kidneys, Internal Fever, Bloated feeling about Stomach, Rush of Blood to Head, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Purgative Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may be said that their action upon the animal economy is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative impress. Age does not impair the properties of these Pellets. They are sugar-coated and inclosed in glass bottles, their virtues being thereby preserved unimpaired for any length of time, in any climate, so that they are always fresh and reliable. This is not the case with pills put up in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes. For all diseases where a Laxative, Alterative, or Purgative, is indicated, these little Pellets will give the most perfect satisfaction. Sold by druggists.

CATARRH

SYMPTOMS.—Frequent headache, discharge falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, thick mucus, purulent, offensive, bloody [illegible]. In others, a dryness, dry, watery, weak, or inflamed eyes, stopping up, or obstruction, of the nasal passages, ringing in ears, deafness, hawking and coughing to clear the throat, ulcerations, scabs from ulcers, voice altered, nasal twang, offensive breath, impaired or total deprivation of sense of smell and taste, dizziness, mental depression, loss of appetite, indigestion, enlarged tonsils, tickling cough, etc. Only a few of these symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY

produces radical cures of the worst cases of Catarrh, no matter of how long standing. The liquid remedy may be snuffed, or better applied by the use of Dr. Pierce's Douche. This is the only form of instrument yet invented with which fluid medicine can be carried high up and PERFECTLY APPLIED to all parts of the affected nasal passages, and the chambers or cavities communicating therewith, in which sores and ulcers frequently exist, and from which the catarrhal discharge generally proceeds. Its use is pleasant and easily understood, from directions accompanying each instrument. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures recent attacks of "Cold in the Head" by a few applications. It is mild and pleasant to use, containing no strong or caustic drugs or poisons. Catarrh Remedy and Douche sold by druggists.

Our Freedmen's Aid Society

ELEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

The Eleventh Annual Report of the Freedman's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church is at hand with the compliments of the Corresponding Secretary, Rev. R. S. Rust, D. D. Each minister will receive a copy of the Report, but all our readers should have some of the many important facts embodied in this report. We therefore glean some. Our readers will understand that the work of this Society is to establish and maintain schools for the education of colored young men and women in the Southern States.

FINANCIAL.

This Society has collected and disbursed during eleven years $715,852 40.

The Society has real estate in school property in the Southern States amounting in value to more than a quarter of a million of dollars.

The Financial Statement for twelve months ending July 1, 1878, is as follows:

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE THIS YEAR.

Dr. Rust says: 1. By the financial statement submitted, it will be seen that we have collected and disbursed $63,402 85.

2. We have sustained in the field seventy teachers.

3. We have taught 2,940 pupils one-half of whom are preparing to preach or teach.

4. We have erected two spacious and commodious school edifices, one at Greensboro, North Carolina, at an expense of ten thousand dollars, the gift of Lyman Bennett, Esq., of Troy, New York, and another at La Grange, Georgia, costing four thousand dollars, one-half of which was the gift of the colored people, and the entire work on both buildings was performed by colored mechanics.

5. The scholarship in our schools has been greatly elevated.

6. We have a quarter of a million of dollars worth of school property in the South.

7. One hundred thousand people have been taught by those educated in our schools.

8. There is an awakening among [illegible] young men in our seminaries in reference to missionary [illegible] Africa, and a number of [illegible] decided to enter the [illegible] as soon as their preparatory [illegible] are completed.

Total	2,940

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT.

Dr. Rust gives some of the most evident signs of improvement among the Freedmen of the South. There has been a great advance in intelligence. It is estimated by General Eaton, Commissioner of Education at Washington, that the [illegible] population of colored people, of school age, in the Southern States is 1,57[illegible], and the enrollment is 57[illegible], being about 36 per cent. Adding the pupils taught in the schools of our Freedmen's Aid Society, the American Missionary Association, the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches, the Society of Friends, and private schools, the number of colored pupils in the South in attendance at school during a portion of the year can not be less than 600,000. This grand result has been acheived through the agency of the Freedmen's Bureau, the Benevolent Societies of the North, and the Public and Private Schools of the South, among which may be mentioned the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the American Missionary Association, sustained by the Congregationalists which, by common consent, have secured prominence by the character and extent of their work in behalf of the freedmen.

There has been advance in morality. There has been an increase in wealth. The following is an illustration:

"The Comptroller of Georgia reports that there are 84,164 colored voters in that State who own 457,635 acres of land, valued in the tax lists at $1,244,104, and also city property valued at $1,790,725, besides about $1,000,000 worth of horses, mules, cattle, and hogs, and $2,100,000 in other property not enumerated, making an aggregate of $6,134,829." Colonel Preston, of Virginia, says: "In my tax district, in the county of Rockbridge, Virginia, there are about 6,000 inhabitants, two thousand of them blacks. The latter are assessed for about $50,000 of real estate and $10,000 of personal property, and are rated for about $1,800 tax, of which they pay $1,500, not more than $300 being returned insolvent." The official records of Montgomery, Alabama, state that "in that city and suburb, there are 457 colored persons holding real estate. The aggregate assessed value is $110,146; personal property $19,281; total $129,427. The largest amount assessed to any one person is $3,720."

No people contribute more liberally, according to their means, towards the building of churches and school houses, to the support of their pastors, and the general benevolences. The church property owned by colored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, consisting of 1,751 plain, [illegible] houses of worship, valued at $1,7[illegible], and 167 humble parsonages, valued at $74,105, aggregate $1,[illegible]. Our colored members contributed in 1878 for the Missionary Society, $5,171 12; for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, $159 04; for Board of Church Extension, $1,070 80; for Tract Society, Sunday-school Union, and for Freedmen's Aid Society $5,047 15.

THE OTHER SIDE.

While there is much to encourage, the work of saving the colored people of America has its discouragements.

At a meeting of persons connected with the Protestant Episcopal Church, held at Baltimore a year since, it was stated that "of five million colored people of this country, one-third had, since the war, risen to a higher civilization and a higher plane of life, one-third had gone down to a lower plane, and one third were left victims of circumstances." This estimate is a discouraging one, more so, probably, than the facts in the case authorize. While we rejoice in the third that has risen to a higher plane, we must do all in our power to rescue the other two-thirds from their degradation.

THE FREEDWOMEN.

The necessity of giving more direct effort to save the Freedwomen has been fully discussed and plans are maturing by which cultivated Christian women will be sent as missionaries into the homes of the colored people of the South to teach and encourage their young women and mothers.

APPORTIONMENT FOR 1879.

The conferences of the whole Church are asked $75,000 for this Society for 1879. The great bulk of this will be raised in the conferences in the Northern States, but the South must do its share. Of the conferences last year Cincinnati heads the list in the amount given to this cause—$3,007 02. Out of the 9,404 pastoral charges in the whole church 3,250 took no Freedmen's Aid collection at all.

LET EVERY PASTOR DO HIS DUTY.

The work of this Society is second to none in importance in the church. Let every pastor give the facts to the people and see that the annual collection is taken.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, Astor Place, on Thursday, March 6th, at half past three, p. m., Wm. H. Allen, Esq., LL. D., President, in the chair.

The Rev. Albert S. Hunt, D. D., read the nineteenth Psalm and opened the meeting with prayer.

The Committee appointed at the last meeting of the Board presented a minute to the memory of the Hon. James B. McKean, which was adopted and placed upon the records.

The death of Hon. A. B. Hasbrouck, who had been for more than a quarter of a century a Vice President of the Society, was announced, and Messrs. W. H. Crosby and Fredrick H. Wolcott were appointed a committee to prepare a minute commorative of his character and services. Before the adjournment of the Board they presented a minute, which was adopted and placed upon the records.

One of the Secretaries made a statement of the progress of the Society's work in the South and Southwest, as noted during his recent visit to the section. Respecting the colportage work in Texas, particularly, he reported that during the last eighteen months, the aggregate number of days of service rendered by the colporteurs in that State was 4,250; miles travelled, 44,704; families visited, 44,359; families found without the Scriptures, 8,643; of these, 6,677 were supplied, and 28,000 volumes of Scriptures distributed.

Grants of books were made, amounting to 62,000 volumes, including 25,000 for the New York Bible Society, 243 for the work in foreign lands, 10 volumes and in raised letters for the blind, 16,000 for sale and distribution by the Society's agents and colporteurs in the Southwest, and to various societies and individuals in other parts of the country.

The receipts of the month of February were $89,037 17, being an increase of $1,204 91 over the corresponding month of the previous year. Copies of Scriptures issued, 54,235, being an increase of nearly 10,000 over the month of February 1878.

Intellectually the idea of God is a great idea. It enters the mind, as sunlight would startle a man who is groping along a path that overhangs abysses in the midst of starless gloom. The idea God cannot enter into the mind, and mingle quietly with the common thinking. Wherever that idea goes, it carries with it revolution, elevation, supremacy.—Joseph Parker, D. D.

A Glimpse into Central America.

[Extract from a letter written by the daughter of Rev. D. Terry, of our Mission Rooms, New York.]

Yesterday there was a feast to the name of Jesus, or El nombre de Jesus. A procession marched from the cathedral past our house and round the Plaza. First came the band playing a schottische; then came some small boys singing, then another set of musicians, and after them three boys holding huge silver candle-sticks with most disreputable looking tallow-dips in them. After these youths came the priests clad in gorgeous apparel and swinging censers, then under a green satin canopy were the Padres reading from small books that made me think of the one John ate in his vision. I forgot to say that, after the boys with the candles, John the Baptist, clad in black velvet and gold lace, was carried out for an airing, and behind the priests came the Lord, with a lot of gilt spikes around his head to represent a halo. It is very curious such a crowd of women as followed. You know the women do the praying and the men the sinning in this country.

The other day, while driving out we stopped at a friend's house at the edge of the Sabanna, or Park. The gentleman of the house took me up into the observatory to see the surrounding country. Mountains on every side, and green—green up to the tip-top peak; they seemed so near, so clear is the atmosphere, that I thought all I'd have to do to get there would be to walk across the Sabanna and through a little clump of trees, and I'd be there. But, lo and behold, they were twelve and fifteen miles off, and the lowest was a peak 12,000 feet high. As you near the southern latitudes numbers or figures increase in a greater proportion than even gravity.

After feasting my eyes on this wonderful panorama of mountain scenery I descended into the garden, where oranges and citrons, bananas and lemons, pine-apples and strawberries, grew in wildest profusion; even the "forbidden fruit" was there. Poor Eve, I forgive her. Both fruit and tree are very beautiful. When I neared the house again, all of a sudden I stopped short and caught my breath, for right before me, rising six feet in the air without putting out a single branch, was a rose-tree crowned with a perfect diadem of blush roses, and right opposite to it was a companion tree of red roses. Why, it almost made me cry it was so exquisitely beautiful. Then when I came home both my hands were grasping a huge bunch of lovely cape jasmines. O, I do so wish you could see the flowers, flowers, flowers!

The Heart of General Logan's Family.

Not long ago Manning Logan, son of Senator John A. Logan, of Illinois, joined the Trinity M. E. Church, of Chicago, in full membership. He had been on probation for six months, and the pastor called young Logan, (aged twelve,) with other probationers to meet him in his study for preparatory examination. It happened that all the companions, except one, were in the country. There appeared at the study only the two boys and the colored sexton, whose probation had also expired. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Crafts, said: "As your companions are absent, if you wish, you can as well postpone your reception into the Church in full membership till they return after vacation." Manning said: "I prefer to be received now, as I may be away attending school when the boys return." It was so arranged. After they left the study the other youth said: "I would not be received if I were you. You will be alone as I wait for the others. You will have no companion but that nigger." Manning replied: "I don't care for that, his soul is just as white as any body's. I don't believe God sees him as a nigger. He is a Christian; and I will go with him, besides, because he might be embarrassed without any one with him."

On the following Sabbath the twain—the colored sexton, and the son of one of the great war generals, and Senators of the United States—stood side by side before God's altar, where there are no distinctions of race or color; where there is neither Greek nor barbarian, bond nor free, white nor black.

This is an open window through which we can look into the family training and sincerity of the man who faced a majority of 20,000, when he left his old political friends in Southern Illinois to stand by the Union, when the Union could not spare another tier of States. Judging by the battles he fought, and by the speeches he made in the Senate after the war was shifted from the walls of Richmond to the halls of Congress, and by the heart he carries and imparts to his children, it will be safe to trust Senator Logan anywhere.

One can hardly fail to put this incident by the side of the treatment now received in Washington by the wife of Senator Bruce, (colored). Neither wife nor friend of any Conservative Senator, south of Mason and Dixon's line, has ever recognized her existence socially. Senators from both parties in the North have been represented at Mrs. Bruce's receptions. The war of ideas is not yet ended.—New York Advocate.

The Title "Reverend."

Does it accord with the meekness and lowliness of heart which Christ enjoins on His followers that any of these should voluntarily assume this lofty name which is a perogative of Omnipotence? The title was unknown during the primitive Christian centuries, and, indeed, appears to have been generally adopted only within the last two hundred years. It was taken up by the Episcopacy, as well as by the Romanists, but was denied to the Dissenters, with whom, however, gradually growing in estimation it came into general use.

To which the Christian Observer very properly replies:

This is from an article in the Christian Neighbor, proof-sheets of which have been sent to all the religious papers. The title "Rev." is simply a courtesy and a matter of convenience. It is not given by any ecclesiastical action. It belongs to all who are professionally teachers of religion, and serves to distinguish them from others as "Dr." distinguishes a practioner of medicine, and "Hon." a member of the legislature. If Christ said, "Be not ye called rabbi;" He said also, "Call no man master." If we reject the title "Rev." on this ground, we must also reject the title "Mr." and "Mrs." which are variations of "master."

The Ecclesiastical Grumbler.

Isn't there sombody in your church that is alwaye talking about the coldness of the brethren, the divisions that abound, the low state of piety, the conformity to the world, who is continually confessing other people's sins instead of his own? My word for it, that man is the cause of much of the evil that he complains of, and magnifies it by his complaining. (Those who choose can put she and her in this last sentence instead of he and his.) Tell such grumblers the fable of "Bell Clapper." The bell in which it was hung was cracked, and the clapper was always complaining of its sad fate in being hung in such a bell. A good many unsophisticated people pitied the clapper, and condoled with its sad lot. At length the spirit of Diogenes, the old cynic, who could not endure shams of any kind, came along. He heard of the clapper's complaint, and said: "Before you make any more fuss about the bell, remember two things. First, you cracked it; and, second, nobody would know that it was cracked if you did not tell them." The moral is obvious, but those who need to ponder it, will be the last to see it.—Herald and Presbyter.

Mr. Gough in England.

The London Christian World says: "Mr. Gough's visit to England has undoubtedly done much to impress the public mind with the evils of intemperance. There is everywhere shown a disposition to more seriously consider the whole question of alcoholic beverages, and to grapple more earnestly with the evils resulting from their excessive use. Christian men and women have especially been brought to feel that nothing more opposes the progress of the gospel than drink, and that it is incumbent upon them to do all that they can to destroy its baneful influence. They will be, therefore, glad to learn that there are now no less than thirteen private or semi-public asylums in these islands for the cure of inebriates. In North America there are thirty-two. The movement is extending among other countries, to Germany, Italy and Norway."

Enthusiasm.

The wildest enthusiasm is reason when it is directed to the glory of God and the good of souls; and all your worldly maxims of prudence, and forbearance, and moderation are out of place in connection with doing the will of our Father in Heaven. We cannot abandon ourselves too heartily, too unreservedly, to the operation of God's Spirit, and allow Him to drive us hither and thither to do whatsoever He willeth. In the judgment of man enthusiasm is to be repressed. All earnestness of a "meddling kind," as they say, that would make our own lives uncomfortable, that would urge us here and there neglecting our own ease, and ignoring the special commendation of those who are nearest to us is to be sacrificed at all costs, and shunned at all hazards; but when we come to sounder teaching, and when we listen to the voice of our God, who speaketh from heaven, we learn that (these are Christ's words): "He that loveth his life shall lose it, and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal. Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." The men whose names are honored to-day are men who have served their generation at their own expense.—Dr. Patterson.

The Prospect of Kansas.

The Atchison Champion sums up a few items showing the prosperity of Kansas. We doubt if any State can show a better record for the period:

Since 1865 the people of Kansas have broken and put under cultivation over 6,000,000 acres of prairie, have organized forty counties, and have built over 2,800 miles of railway. The State has over 2,000 postoffices, of which about forty are first-class, and over 200 are money-order offices. It has 4,520 school-houses, valued, with grounds and furniture, at $4,525,225. It has nearly 650 churches, valued at over $2,000,000. It has over 200 newspapers, of which twelve are issued daily. It has over 700 mills and factories. It has over 200 banks. It has over 25,000,000 rods of fence. It has a State House, State University, State Agricultural College, State Normal School, two Asylums for the Blind, and an Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb. The assessed value of the taxable property for 1877 was $137,826,643—the real value was not less than $229,000,000. The total value of its farm products, include live stock, for 1877, was $66,380,547, and the value of the same for the year 1878 exceeded $75,000,000. Of the seventy-five organized counties of the State, sixty are crossed by railroads.

Faith in Science.

Says the Christian Guardian: A story is told about the Prince of Wales and Dr. Lyon Playfair, showing that his Royal Highness has strong faith in science. Both were standing near a cauldron, containing lead which was boiling at white heat. "Has your Royal Highness any faith in science?" asked the doctor. "Certainly," replied the prince. "Will you then place your hand in the boiling metal, and ladle out a portion of it?" The prince then lifted out some of the boiling lead with his hand, without sustaining any injury. It is a well-known scientific fact that the human hand may be placed uninjured in lead boiling at white heat, being protected from any harm by the moisture of the skin.

Our Population in 1880.

The Two Revelations.

In a previous article we have compared nature and the Gospel in their characteristic differences. The question is, if there is at least opposition between the two revelations which are we to accept? or if both are to be received, how are they to be reconciled? In the one we have a God of inflexible law, law which has no pity upon our mistakes and no mercy for our sins—a law which gives all the advantage to strength and all the disadvantages to weakness. In the other we have a Father full of infinite tenderness for our mistakes and transgressions, proclaiming deliverance and salvation, a law of love which can repair and renew a ruined life and build it up again, in the case of the weakest and most defiled, and teaching self-sacrifice and not self-preservation as the supreme law of life. Are we to see a contradiction between them, the one honoring the tyranny of strength, the other honoring the claims of weakness, the one utterly casting out the sinful, and the other proclaiming a possible redemption for all—are we to say that both revelations cannot come from the same Being, and that the one must be chosen to the rejection of the other? Or is there any possible way of reconciling them so as to believe that the God of nature is also the God revealed in Christ, and that the God in Christ is also the God of nature? Christ, who was the medium of the higher revelation, saw no inconsistency between them. He constantly spoke of the Father as the same Being who was acting in the world of nature and in the world of souls. He was always connecting them in various ways. He connects them when he says that not a sparrow falls without your Father. If the stronger hawk seizes the weaker sparrow and makes it his prey it is not without your Father. The same Being rules in the world in the world of the sparrow as in the world of man and all his nobler interests. The same Great Father clothed the lily of the field as arrayed Solomon in all his glory. The God, who clothes the grass of the field which to-day is and to-morrow is cast into the oven, clothes you, O ye of little faith. It is an ascending argument from the lower to the higher, from matter to spirit, from the transient to the abiding, from the action of God in nature to the action of God upon man. He always saw God painting pictures and enacting parables in nature, of what He was doing in the higher kingdom of the spiritual man. The parables of Christ are wonderful examples of the correspondences or harmonies which He saw existing between the works of God in matter and His works in mind. The grain of wheat cast into the ground, except it died, did not bring forth fruit, so we must die to our lower animal self if our nobler self is to spring up with a greater or a more abundant life. The shepherd who goes outside to the wilderness to seek his lost sheep leaving behind him the ninety and nine which are safe in the fold, is but a picture of the spirit universe in which the great and good Heavenly Shepherd—the eternal Father—comes in the person of His Son to seek and find this lost, strayed world, which has wandered from its moral orbit. Christ, with His wide sweeping Divine glance saw in both kingdoms, the working of the same Heavenly Father, and did not feel that there was any discord between the two revelations.

Another thing to be noted, accounting in some measure for the differences in the revelation, is the difference of the spheres in which the revelation is made. In the one sphere—in the sphere of Nature—God cannot reveal so much of himself—of His highest self—as He can in the realm of mind. That the fact that the law of the brute creation is the law of self preservation, and that in order to preserve and sustain their own lives, they destroy the animals which are weaker than themselves. They are incapable of understand any higher law. In the very nature of things they are creatures of low capacity as compared with man and could not be made to act out of any law of benevolence and self sacrifice. They have no moral nature, no power of [illegible] to think upon the [illegible] of [illegible] and with no [illegible] of justice. There is [illegible] speaking, no real [illegible] between the law of [illegible]

Union Sunday School Anniversary.

The Sunday Schools and Congregations of Ames and the three German Methodist Episcopal Churches of this city held a Union Sunday School Anniversary on the 16th inst., in Ames Church, corner of St. Charles and Calliope streets. The large audience room was crowded, the old people taking back seats and the gallery—the crowd of children filling the body of the house.

Rev. J. C. Hartzell presided, and in his introductory remarks stated that it was intended to hold each year a series of anniversary exercises which should include all of the eighteen sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday Schools in the city. Twelve years ago this church did not have a Sunday school in New Orleans. Now it had eighteen. Truly such a growth in so short a time could only be by the blessing of God.

The exercises lasted for nearly two hours, commencing at 11 o'clock, A. M. Bro. Elias Smith made the opening prayer. Each school met at its accustomed place and marched in procession to the Church.

The singing was an interesting feature of the occasion. All the schools joined in singing several popular Sunday school hymns. The German school sang two hymns in German, which were greatly enjoyed by all.

AMES CHURCH SCHOOL.

Master Walter Priess, of Ames school, gave in a clear and expressive manner a few words of welcome; after which Rev. A. A. Johnson, the Superintendent, gave a report of the condition of the school, as follows:

"On January 6, 1878, the first Sabbath in that year, this church enrolled 129 scholars, 9 teachers, and 6 officers. The average monthly attendance of scholars during the year was about 50. There were 36 new members received, and about 44 withdrew, leaving the school on the last Sabbath of the year with 121 scholars, 10 teachers and 7 officers. The collections amounted to $51.05, most of which was devoted to missionary purposes. The library consists of about 300 volumes, such as are very instructing to the scholars.

The work of the school was greatly retarded during the latter half of the year in view of the presence of yellow fever, but is now reviving with rapidity."

SECOND GERMAN SCHOOL.

Master Eddy Dannenmann made a short speech in behalf of this school in which were given words of encouragement to the good work. The superintendent, Mr. C. Wundenberg, reported the school as follows:

"On March 3, 1878, the school had 14 teachers, 3 officers, and 172 scholars, and in March 3, 1879, the school had 12 teachers, 3 officers, and had 228 scholars. A large supply of Sunday-school Advocates are taken, also Lesson Leaves.

THIRD GERMAN SCHOOL.

Miss Mary Pfeifer representing this school recited "The Family Bible" with good effect.

Mr. Henry Wellman, superintendent, then reported as follows:

The Sunday-school consists of six officers, twenty-three teachers and one hundred and eighty scholars. The exercises commence every Sabbath day at 9 o'clock and close at 10:30 a. m. The scholars are divided into eight Bible, eleven spelling and two infant classes. The teachers attend regularly to their duties, all work faithfully, in perfect union. The children of all denominations attend as regularly as can be expected and behave very well.

We are sorry to say that we have lost two active teachers and seven scholars through the epidemic of last summer. Their deaths will long be felt in our midst. Our Sunday-school collections for the past year amounted to $64 95, which added to $52 65, the balance of the previous year, makes a total of $117,60 now on hand.

The item of "spelling classes" was explained by Bro. Wellman. He said that many of the German children were in the public schools and could only read English, and so had to be first taught to spell and read German before they could be taught the scriptures in German.

ADDRESSES.

W. R. Lyman, Esq., President of the Louisiana State Sunday-school Association, Rev. J. Braun, M. D., and General Cyrus Bussey gave short and interesting addresses. Bro. Getchel, of Cincinnati, who organized Ames school twelve years ago was present and spoke of the joy of his heart at beholding such a growth as the large audience present indicated.

The Constitutional Convention

The election of delegates to the Convention soon to meet to frame a new Constitution for Louisiana has past and we give the names of those elected below. On the whole, as far as we can judge, the delegates are more conservative than it was feared would be elected. It was the Bourbon wing of the Democracy that forced the Convention upon the State, and a few weeks ago it seemed evident that that body would be packed with [illegible] and enemies of [illegible] suffrage and free public [illegible]. In this we are glad to note [illegible] of disappointment. Out of the delegates over 30 are Republicans, some of whom are good strong men and among the Democrats we notice a fair sprinkling of representative and able men:

The following delegates to the Convention are known to be elected. In many instances there were no contests:

Democrats 69, Republicans 28, Independents 4, Nationals 1. To be heard from 11.

The City.

Herring & Co., of New York, who are the ablest safe makers in the United States, have an agency at No. 61, St. Charles street, New Orleans. Their long experience has enabled them to make Commercial or Banker's Fire Proof safes, and burglar proof and Banker's chests which defy the elements, and afford absolute protection to valuables entrusted to them. Eighteen of these safes went unscathed through the great January fires in New York, preserving their contents intact in every case.

The Conflict in Congress.

That our readers may understand the issue now raised in Congress by the Democratic majority in Congress, we quote the following from Harper's Weekly. The Democrats demand the repeal of the laws which provide for the appointment of United States Supervisors in elections when elections are held for United States officials:

It is important to bear in mind the exact question raised by the Democrats proposing to stop the government if the President does not consent to the repeal of certain laws. The Democrat papers naturally try to confuse the issue by asserting that the laws ought to be repealed, and that the House is the immediate representative of the people. But the chief question is not whether the laws mentioned ought or ought not to be repealed, whether a majority of Congress or of either House shall usurp all the power of the government. The Democratic position is a threat that if the President honestly discharges his constitutional duty, the government shall stop, and the country be plunged into anarchy. It is a scheme of revolution to destroy all the checks and balances of our political system, and to concentrate all power in a part of one branch of the government. The sophistry that defends such a scheme is as transparent as it is impudent. The assumption that all the provisions of the constitution was to give way to the majority of the House as against the Senate, or a majority of both houses as against the Executive, is an assertion that our government is like the revolutionary French republic of the terror, when the will of the majority of the Convention was the supreme law. It was in full view of the consequences of the absolute and unchecked sway of of the majority of a single body that our constitution was framed. It is, fortunately, wholly free from any taint of Celtic republicanism. It is the work of men of the English speaking race, who proposed to avoid by English methods the dangers against which both English and French experience warned them. Ours is no republic of the Convention or of the National Assembly; it is a republic of co-ordinate and carefully distributed powers, and "the people" are represented in every part of it, and the rights and authority of every part have an equal popular sanction.

"We, the people of the United States," who framed the Constitution, did not intrust the legislative power to one House alone or to two Houses alone, but "we" gave a large part of it to the President. "We" had the courage and good sense to provide efficient barriers against the chances of haste and corruption and passion in one House or in two Houses, and provided in the veto a power of revision and of reconsideration. The President is as much the representative of the people as a member of Congress. He is a part of the legislature, bound to his duty by as solemn an oath as any member, and made by the people their defense against the rash or unwise action of Congress. If he should renounce his convictions, and sign an important bill against his most solemn judgment, on the ground that Congress had passed it, he would ignominiously betray the trust which the people had confided to him, and the Constitution which is the guarantee of public liberty. The power of the veto becomes operative only when a law has been passed by Congress, and to plead that a majority of Congress desires the passage of a law, and that he must therefore sign it, would be to plead that he must annul a vital part of the Constitution, and refuse to perform a solemn duty. If both houses may attempt thus to coerce the President to their will, so may either House attempt to coerce the other, or the President to reduce Congress to submission. They all hold their power from the people, and if Congress may say to the President that it will stop the supplies and the government unless he signs a bill which it wishes to pass, so may the President say that he will not sign the supplies unless it passes a bill which he desires. Our government becomes impracticable if each branch is to threaten to stop it when it can not have its own way. If Congress may attach the repeal of the National Election Law to a supply bill, it may attach any other measure to it in the same way and under the same menace. If the menace were carried out, the subversion of the government would be accomplished.

This is the Democratic proposition, and, so far as this is concerned, argument about the expediency of repealing the laws in question is totally irrelevant. However bad the laws may be, they can not be so mischievous in their effects as stopping the government. Such a policy may well startle and alarm the country, and warn it of the consequences of a party ascendency which begins with such an act. Republicans will gladly accept the Democratic challange to defend the wise and just constitutional division of power in the government, and they will unitedly resist the attempt to usurp all powers and absorb them in one branch. If the Democratic party prefers this issue to that of "fraud," it will find the contest quite as difficult, and the country quite as patriotic and intelligent and united in defense of the Constitution. When the argument in favor of the repeal of the law is exhausted, the conflict has not begun. It is not a question of the wisdom of the laws, but of the method of their repeal. The house must not be burned down in order to roast the pig. It is, indeed, refreshing to see a real issue emerging from the cloud of personalities in which the election of 1880 seemed to be hopelessly enveloped. Nineteen years ago it was a favorite Democratic doctrine that the Constitution could not be constitutionally maintained. But the Republicans proved its vitality and efficiency. Mr. Beck's defiance now is substantially a declaration that the Constitution shall not stand against the will of a Democratic majority in Congress, and that if the President does not yield to its behest, the country shall be thrown into confusion. The country, however, sees clearly that if this course is to be tolerated in the passage of one bill, it can be pursued in that of all bills. If the supplies are to be stopped unless the President, whether he approves it or not, signs the repeal of the election law, the supplies can be stopped in the same way unless he signs any other bill that may be presented to him—a fiat-money law, a repeal of the national banking law, an anti-Chinese law; in fact, any repeal or any bill. In the conflict which the Democrats have now proclaimed, the President is the representative of the Constitution, of the public peace, of American patriotism, and in upholding him in his constitutional action the Republican party becomes once more the united party of constitutional liberty.

Wrighthe Chinn.

Wrighthe Chinn was born in Virginia near Richmond, and was raised in Lexington, Ky. She was religious from childhood. In April 1820 she was married to Rev. Scott Chinn. Her maiden name was Hunt. She came a slave to New Orleans with her slave husband in 1849, the property of Judge Robinson. She fell asleep in Jesus March 4, 1879.

The name of Scott Chinn has been associated with the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Louisiana since its re-organization in 1866. His wife was a worthy companion of this old hero who still lingers among us. She was a good wife. She had lived in peace with her husband for almost fifty-nine years. She was a favorite in whatever church she worshipped. She was always an active and earnest Christian. She was an affectionate mother. In late years she was a great sufferer, but was always patient and cheerful. Her death was triumphant. A few moments before dying she exclaimed, "I am almost to Jordan." Soon after she sang two stanzas of

"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand."

Just as the second stanza was completed she passed away without a sigh.

We spoke last week of the funeral services.

Jefferson Davis.

The New York Methodist the most conservative Methodist journal published in America, has the following to say of Jefferson Davis and his apologists in the late debate in Congress on the question of putting him on the pension rolls because he fought in the Mexican war:

"Is it possible that the point of Mr. Davis' case is anywhere obscured so that men do not see it? The fighting has been (in a national sense) forgiven and the fighters have been reclothed with civil rights. But somebody conspired to destroy this government, and Davis stands for that somebody. His light punishment—and it is very light—represents the sum of outstanding penalty for treason. There can be no more serious mistake than to suppose that his restoration to civil rights would be just like, or at all like, the restoration of other men to such rights. Mr. Davis represents the insolent and wicked minority that rushed the South into disunion by lies, frauds and terrorism. His Southern victims ought to despise him; if they do not, they will do well to remember that the North draws the line at him."

The French floating battery Arrogante foundered off Hyeres in a gale, on Wednesday. Forty-seven men were drowned out of the crew of 122. The storm arose during practice and the Arrogante sprung a leak.

OUR SOUTHERN METHODISM

TEXAS.

Rev. E. Lee, Hempstead: "We have to build a new church. The people are poor."

Rev. J. R. Carnes, Giddings: "Our church is up again, also our parsonage. Work in good condition."

L. R. Kimbro, San Antonio: "We are pleased with our minister, Rev. A. R. Norris. He is the best read of any we have had."

Rev. James Jarmon, La Grange: "My first quarterly meeting was held at Giddings on 15th and 16th. My church appears to grow."

Jos. Skeete, Bryan: "Conference could not have sent an abler man than Rev. Brown to suit the place. He is commanding with system."

Rev. Jesse Grant, Lawrence:—"Our congregation is good; 142 at Sunday-school a week ago; 53 at Wednesday night prayer meeting; and 25 at Sunday morning class meeting."

Rev. E. Dibble, Harrisburg: "We have a protracted meeting going on. Since commencement we have one conversion, 8 probationers, and 21 at the altar seeking salvation. All is prospering."

Rev. A. Campbell, Seguin: "A new house of worship has been dedicated under the pastoral care of Rev. John Wright. The church and lot is worth $700 or $800. Our membership is weak at this point,—about 30. I found them badly scattered when I came here, but they are getting together now."

G. H. Richardson, secretary of the Tabernacle Church, Galveston, Rev. V. M. Cole, pastor, writes us that a revival meeting has been in progress for two weeks, resulting in between twenty and thirty conversions. It is anticipated the church will be greatly strengthened.

Rev. Taylor Moore, Texarkana: "I have taken in four members and six on probation; and baptized three children. Sister Wiley and Mr. Alexander were united by me on the 17th inst. My quarterly meeting will commence April 2. Sunday-school is growing rapidly. Rev. G. C. Cook of the Baptist church was admitted as a member of my church on the 16th."

Rev. G. W. Townsend, San Antonio: "Presiding Elder Carper held our quarterly conference at Floraville, and we had a good time. There were many mourners at the altar. I have organized the Sabbath-school there. There are now three schools in good faith. There are but a few people who can read on my circuit, but I am getting them into the notion of taking the paper."

Rev. Conrad Haney, Sherman: "Our meeting is doing well. Father was with me nearly two weeks at the beginning and did a good work in the church. About forty sinners have been converted, the altar is full every night. Bro. Carhart has been out at his colony for several weeks. I am much wearied, but strong in the determination to 'fight it out if it takes all summer.' The M. E. Church South has began revival efforts. We are trying to enlist the other churches in the work and girdle this stronghold of the devil with meetings."

Rev. M. Henson, Austin: "Our quarterly conference which convened at Simpson's Tabernacle, Feb. 15, was left open to March 6 to finish the business. Elder Gates is a judicious presiding officer. He planned to get a board of trustees, and but for his able assistance we would have waited a long time for it. The first board is as follows: George Graham, Abraham Cliegg, Lafayette Franklin, Henry Reed, Wm. Givens, Sr., Patrick Dickerson, Samuel Scott. We will lecture at Wesley Chapel on Saturday night for our conference school. Plan of visitation: Calvert 22, 23; Waco 29 and 30 March; Dallas, April 5 and 6. We may raise $500 on this round, to meet the liability due 15th of March. To meet it somebody will have to borrow money. Rev. S. Gates was elected Treasurer last month. Any aid from friends abroad will be thankfully received. Our school is prospering finely under the supervision of Rev. G. O. Richardson. At present there are nearly 40 pupils, new ones coming from abroad every week."

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. Scott Jones, China Grove: "My work is very large, the churches prospering."

Rev. A. Handy, Canton: "There were eight accessions at chapel on Sunday; one of the candidates was 68 years old."

Rev. G. W. Barney, Macon: "We are repairing our church. The Sabbath-school is doing well. The superintendent, J. W. Longstred, is a hard worker. Presiding elder Dunn was with us on the first and second instants. Eighty-nine partook of the sacrament; ten children were baptized."

Rev. J. Pickens: "We had a splendid time during our first quarterly conference. Elder Bradford opened with prayer, gave us wholesome advice, and administered the sacrament. We have a Sunday-school with 92 members."

Rev. A. Lemon, Martinsville: "I reached my work Feb. 1, finding the people in high spirits, awaiting my arrival. The entire work is in a prosperous condition. We had a glorious meeting last Sunday. There were 16 accessions to the church. Our Sabbath-school is well attended by children and adults. May the Lord prosper the work throughout the State."

Rev. W. H. H. Gallion De Kalb: "The first quarterly conference at the church was held on the 15th and 16th with J. W. Dunn, elder presiding. He was gladly received, and the business conducted in love. He preached two sermons for us. Three white citizens, John Poland, Bush and W. Rosenbam have proven good friends to us here. We are poor, but have adopted the dollar system of collections. Pray for us."

TENNESSEE.

Rev. G. Irwin, Grant: "I have been burdened down with a sickly family. I trust I will be able to pay for my SOUTHWESTERN before long, for I think so much of it."

Rev. J. Braden, Nashville: "There were several conversions at the college during the past few weeks. We have had a good year in school matters. Our medical commencement was a grand success. We have a new site for a new building for our medical school."

LOUISIANA.

Rev. Reese Thompson, Mansfield: "We are preparing to cover the church here and ceil it inside."

Rev. W. A. Primus:—"I found the people scattered, they had been without a pastor for so long; but I hope in a few weeks to give an encouraging report."

Good Example, East and West.

A pastor in an Eastern city writes to our Church Extension Secretary, saying, "Last year my Church gave to Church Extension $42. This year I delivered an address on the subject, and took a collection of $173, an increase 400 per cent. I have always insisted that what all the people want is information and zeal shown by the pastor." Just so. If not informed, how can they know its merits, and if the pastor don't care, the people can't be expected to.

A Western pastor writes to Chaplain M'Cabe twice, as follows (first time): "Have just read your circular of Jan. 25th. My heart burns within me in view of the magnitude of this work. I am serving a rural charge, and propose taking my Church Extension Collection and collection next Sunday. You may count on me for at least $10, and as much more as I can get."

Second time: "Early last week read your circular and was strangely warmed by it. I prayed earnestly over the matter, and fasted—did all I could to place myself where God could use me. Prepared a sermon and preached last Sabbath on Hag. i. 4: 'Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your ceiled houses, and this house lie wasted?' I warmed with my theme, and called for Subscriptions, and where only $5 were raised last year secured reliable pledges of $58.50. It suprised the people and delighted us all. Praise the Lord." Let this good work go on. Oh for more prayer and fasting over the great work the Church has to do. Let every body do all they can to place themselves where God can use them.

Fraternal Aid.

Rev. J. M. Vance desires us to publish this, a response to appeals to lift the debt of his church (Union Chapel) in this city.

REIDSVILLE, N. C., March 11, 1879.

Rev. J. Madison Vance, Sr.:

MY DEAR BROTHER—This is a small sum, $1, but it is the best that we can do at this time. We are building ourselves. We give it freely and wish that we could do more, and hope you may be able to meet your bill. Yours truly,

A Concert.

GALVESTON, March 4, 1879.

Dear Editor.—After long practice my Sunday-school gave a Bible concert at the M. E. Church. Prayer was offered by Rev. Paul Douglas. The little ones performed their parts very well. The seats were filled with spectators. Admission was free. The concert accomplished much good.

Superintendent East End Sunday-school.

The Freedwomen.

WORK PROPOSED.—The purpose is to employ Christian women to visit the homes, and churches and Sunday-schools of our colored people, and to labor especially for the salvation of the souls and bodies of the colored women. Mothers' meetings, and meetings for girls and young women will be organized; also sewing-circles, where the simpler duties of household work will be taught and instructions given as to personal habits and tastes. Special efforts will everywhere be made to increase attendance upon our Sunday-schools and churches, and the New Orleans University. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in New Orleans alone fourteen churches among the colored people with a membership of over 3000. This membership represents a population of over [illegible]. Our work will be at first in connection with these churches, whose pastors will be our advisers and assistants.

MISSIONARIES' HOME.—We have rented and furnished a house, No. [illegible] Second street, where our missionaries will reside, and where meetings can be held when ever desired.

VOLUNTARY HELPERS.—Besides those who are employed and give their whole time to the work, there are many who would be glad to give a part of the Sabbath; or a day or two of each week to this work of the Master. Such will please call at the Home or on Mrs. Hartzell.

OUR PRESENT MISSIONARIES.—At present the following are our missionaries: Mrs. A. M. Ryder, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. L. Hathaway, of Normal, Illinois; Miss Lizzie Thompson, of Dwight, Illinois, and Miss M. J. Stephens, of New Orleans.

MONEY.—No work of this kind can be carried forward without money. No debts will be made. All money given will be conscientiously applied, and a published report given. We have some cards on which is printed a simple pledge to raise ten dollars in ten cent subscriptions. Send for a card and help us, or if you prefer it send whatever you can direct.

THIS COLUMN.—This column of the Southwestern has been devoted to our work, and in it will be found the announcements of meetings, notes of progress, in [illegible] the work, etc.

PRAY FOR US.—This work is as much missionary work as that done in Africa, in India or Mexico.

Address all letters to
Mrs. J. C. HARTZELL,
Lock Box "B," New Orleans, La.

of our women referred to above. They have opened an institution where colored women are taught the duties devolving on them in the tender relations of daughter, wife and mother. The status of its women determines the condition of a people. If the bulk of these women can receive some kind of a training concerning their domestic obligations, we feel certain when they pass away, their offspring after them will be to an extent fitted for their respective spheres in life. The intelligence and civic virtues of the coming man must be taken in by the child in the daily routine of home-life. The work undertaken by the Methodists intend, as much as possible, to meet the wants of the race in this particular. In its immediate effect this work will be more beneficial than the numerous schools and colleges scattered throughout the South for our benefit. Northern charity which may seek to elevate us by the shortest and most effective method should enter this new field of labor, even if it should therefore give us fewer churches and fewer schools. We cannot wish this enterprise too much success. It has our hearty co-operation; and we hope other bodies may soon be disposed to enter among us and emulate the work of the followers of the great Wesley.

A Notable Wedding.

On Thursday evening, March 13, before the regular hour for preaching, our beautiful church-house was crowded almost to its utmost capacity, of both white and colored, all anxiously awaiting the arrival of Mr. R. H. Harbert and Miss Amanda Wright, (the happy pair to be joined together in holy wedlock), attended by Mr. A. J. Johnson and Miss Lizzie Davis. The intended hour, 8 o'clock, having arrived, the eyes of the anxious throng were centered upon the handsome pair as they slowly passed up the ladies' aisle to the altar, before which they stood arrayed in tasteful apparel. While the ceremony was being performed a breathless silence pervaded the whole congregation. [illegible] which pronounced them man and wife, and congratulations received from [illegible] friends, the bride and groom with many of their friends retired [illegible] church in a beautiful [illegible] to Mrs. Dollie Norman's (the mother of the groom) quiet home. The colored brass band of Co[illegible]bus saluted us as we passed along. There the fatted calf and many other dainties were served up. The table was beautifully decorated with all kinds of nice things nourishing [illegible] to body and mind. There we [illegible] ourselves in a manner not to be surpassed by aristocrats. All who were present were well pleased. Mr. and Mrs. Harbert are active [illegible] of our church. [illegible] scholars. Bro. Harbert [illegible] christian and is aspiring to the ministry. He is a blessing to us here, both in the Public school and in the Sabbath school, and will be a blessing to any community in which he may work. Long may this happy pair live, be successful and live lovingly together. May they be as stars that dazzle the world with their glimmering light [illegible] with their good [illegible] bright examples. And [illegible] eye of our loving Father [illegible] and keep them under [illegible] of his protection and [illegible] world to be made better [illegible] living in it. Amen.

Yours respectfully,
GEO. W. SMITH.

QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Hints for Teachers.—The secret of a successful quarterly review lies: 1. In reviewing every Sunday. If the weekly review be rightly conducted, in the quarterly the climax of interest will be reached. 2. In grouping the old facts in new relations. The same lesson should not be twice reviewed in the same way. If the teacher or superintendent should continue to review the lesson after the same stereotyped form, each Sunday, before the quarter is over that would come to be an almost insufferable monotony. Care, therefore, should be taken to make each review in some respects a novel one. The familiar facts can be reproduced in new lights—can be made to illustrate and enforce some new truths. In such a method there is an inexhaustible variety that will be rewarded by increasing interest.

Whatever method may have been used in teaching, only one is proper in review—and that is questioning. Review day is test-day—the day that tells whether the teacher has done his work well or not. The question should be direct, simple—easily answered with a word or two. Avoid involved interrogations. Ask those which, to those who have studied the lessons, clearly point to the answer. Do not let them, however, contain the answer within themselves, and make use of none which can be answered by Yes or No. None can ask pertinent and appropriate questions who have not thought them out beforehand. Therefore study the art of questioning.

In the present quarter's lessons there are six that are historical and six that are poetical. Of the six historical lessons, two concern the building of the temple, two are about the building of the walls of Jerusalem, and two relate to God's law. Of the six poetical lessons, three refer to the blessed man, and three to the omnipotence of God. In the latter grouping, the lessons have to be broken up from their regular order—in the first they come in the same succession in which they were studied. For the convenience of the teacher we arrange the lessons in the following scheme:

HISTORICAL.

THE TEMPLE—
I. The Second Temple.
Foundation laid.
II. The Temple Dedicated.
Passover observed.
Truths: 1. Lay right foundations.
2. Ye are God's temple.
Dedicate yourselves to God.

THE WALLS—
III. The Mission of Nehemiah.
VI. The Builders Interrupted.
Truths: 1. Pray for God's good hand upon you.
2. Pray—watch—work.

GOD'S LAW—
V. The Reading of the Law.
VI. The Keeping of the Sabbath.
Truths: 1. Search the Scriptures.
2. Remember the Sabbath day

POETICAL.

THE BLESSED MAN—
The Sinless Man.
VII. The Way of the Righteous.
The Forgiven Man.
X. The Joy of Forgiveness.
Whose strength is in God.
XI. Delight in God's House.
Truths: 1. Avoid evil companions.
2. Repent, confess, be forgiven.
3. God's house, the house of the soul.

THE OMNIPOTENT GOD—
Triumphing over kings.
VIII. The King in Zion.
Creating a new heart.
IX. Prayer of the Penitent.
Omniscient—omnipresent.
XII. The All-Seeing God.
Truths: 1. Christ's kingdom will triumph.
2. "Shapen in iniquity."
3. The Christian always safe.
The sinner never.

A Minister at Work.

GARDNER STATION, TENN.

MR. EDITOR. Please allow me space in your paper, as I think the brethren would like to know just what I am doing for Christ. Through the power of the Lord, I am still standing at my post, preaching the gospel of Christ and him crucified to dying men. This is a very hard place. After receiving my appointment from our beloved Bishop Scott, who presided over last Annual Conference held in Murfreesboro, Tenn., I started to my appointment, and arrived here on the 6th of Dec., 1878. Found my work in a very bad condition; the members being scattered as sheep having no shepherd. The roving wolf that the appostle Paul speaks of was in among the members. Some had joined the African M. E. Church, and the remainder of them would not come out to preaching. Therefore nearly all my hearers would be sinners, sometimes all sinners. When that would be the case, I would ask them up near the pulpit and ask some of them to sing a song, which they would gladly do. Then I would go through the usual exercises and preach to them as though I had a house full of Christians. [illegible] would stick my pants in my boots and wade through the snow and mud to their houses; [illegible] the voice and sing and pray with them. Now the clouds have begun to move away; the sun has begun to shine; and now when I preach, if the weather is good, the house is filled with Christians and sinners. We have a fine public school taught by W. I. Jamison, from Nashville, numbering 70 pupils. Bro. Jamison is a fine man. I also have a Sabbath-school numbering 50, with 8 officers and teachers. It increases every Sabbath. I believe the promises. "Go preach my gospel," says Christ, "and lo! I am with you, even unto the end of the world." Brethren pray for me. Through the epistles of Rev. J. Braden, D.D., I have gained much strength. I am praying for a revival.

Yours in Christ,
J. D. HAY.

Memorial of Rev. John J. Shumpert.

The SOUTHWESTERN conveyed to us the sad intelligence of the death of Rev. John Joseph Shumpert, and it has filled our hearts with sorrow. I can scarce give expression to the thoughts that arise or to the feelings of my heart. From our earliest boyhood we had grown up together. We attended Shaw University, and were licensed as local preachers at the same time in Asbury Chapel; admitted on trial in the Mississippi conference and ordained as deacons and elders in the same class. Our close intercourse was maintained for several years, and I was enabled to form a just estimate of those qualities of head and heart which he exemplified. I knew his heart as he knew mine. His energy of character and indomitable perseverance, the traits that command success, were "known and read by all men" who came within the circle of his acquaintance. Often have we taken counsel together. Never will I forget the time in 1871 and in 1873, when death had desolated my home, the kind and tender words he spoke. All knew him—how full of sympathy and tenderness he was. That heart that lies so still to-day never throbbed but with generous impulses. But so it is, and we submit to the Divine will. But what a sense of loss we feel—what a vacancy in the Mississippi Conference. On the 24th ult., one of her most promising young men went out. A short but busy and eventful life was closed, a warm heart ceased to beat, and a weary, overtaxed brain ceased to throb.

Bro. J. J. Shumpert was born in Stawamba county, State of Mississippi, March, 1849. So, that at the time of his death, he was nearly thirty years of age. He was converted to God when about eighteen years old, and immediately joined the M. E. Church South, and in 1869 all the members of Pleasant Grove Church united, with Bro. Shumpert, to the Old Mother M. E. Church, under Rev. Levi Boone. From that time on till the close of his earthly life he was a sincere, devoted, earnest and active christian.

In 1871 Bro. Shumpert entered school at Shaw University. Among his studies was theology, under the late lamented Dr. A. C. McDonald. During this time he was active in class-meetings and Sunday-school work, in Asbury Chapel. In 1872 he was licensed as a local preacher. In 1873 he was admitted on trial in the Mississippi Annual Conference and elected to deacon's orders, ordained under missionary rule and stationed at Natchez. But on account of unfavorable circumstances he was removed to Hazlehurst. There he did a glorious year's work for the Lord and was greatly beloved by the people. In 1874–75 he was stationed at Okolona, and in 1876–77 was stationed at Aberdeen. At these places he labored faithfully and successfully, but his health at this time had become greatly impaired. A cough, which had followed him from infancy, was developing alarming symptoms. Bro. Shumpert came to the Conference at Oxford in 1878 with the full intention of being transferred to the Arkansas Conference, thinking, as did many of his brethren, that it would improve his health. But being obedient he submitted to the authorities of the Church and was stationed at Vicksburgh. Several of his brethren said then that would be his last appointment. The first part of the year his health seemed to improve a little and, and with the help of his brethren, succeeded in repairing the church. In a short time he had won the highest praise and admiration from the Church and friends in Vicksburg. At our late Annual Conference at Yazoo City his health had declined so much that he was not able to attend. At his own request a superannuated relation was granted him. Thus he slowly declined till on the morning of February 24th the weary wheels of life stood still.

The proposal to establish clergy co-operative stores is being actively discussed by English Churchmen. A legal journal points out that the act renders it unlawful for "any spiritual person to engage in any trade or dealing for gain or profit." This, however, does not apply to a benefit society, and it is now being argued whether or not a co-operative store comes under this category.

Deaths.

Margaret Narem, a faithful church member for eight years, died March 11, at State Line, Miss. She left a husband and five little children to mourn her loss.

ALEX MARTIN.

Bros. Edward Brier, George Hall and sister Wrightbe Chinn, members of Harmonia Benevolent Association, and of the church, have passed away in full triumph. Sister Chinn belonged to Union Chapel; Edward Brier to St. Paul's Church; George Hall to Wesley Chapel.

M. E. BROWER.

Mrs. Cennie Bell died at her residence at Petersville, March 16, in the 79th year of her age. She was born in Tennessee in 1800, and resided in that State until 1845, after which she was brought to Travis county, Texas. She was once an active member of the M. E. Church, but during slavery, seeing her ill used, fell from grace; but has been on probation for years. Just before she died she said she was not afraid to die, for she was trusting in the Lord, and so fell asleep. We trust our loss is her eternal gain. She leaves a husband, several grown children (being the mother of 13 children, 37 grand children and a host of great grand children) and many friends to mourn her loss. Our Petersville Church takes its name after her son, Peter Bell, who bought and deeded the lot to the church, being a worthy member of the same.

MACK HENSON.

Austin, Texas, March 19, 1879.

Edward Brier was born in Maryland, and died in New Orleans La., March 9th 1879, aged 79 years and 7 months.

Bro. Brier has long been a faithful member of the M. E. Church. United in 1838 with the Gravier St. Church, and was made a leader in 1848. He afterwards removed to Wesley Chapel bringing 30 members with him, for whose conversion he had labored. He afterwards removed farther up town, and on account of his infirmities found it desirable to remove his membership to First St. Church where he had been a worthy member and class leader, up to the week of his death. To a friend who came in to see him he remarked, "I am still in the field." He asked her to sing and pray with him which she did, using the hymn of his own selection "Amazing grace," etc. As the friend was taking leave of him he said, "if I never see you again in this life meet me on the other side of the river." He died triumphantly, and remarked to his pastor a few moments before his death, that it was perfect peace with him and his God, and though suffering terribly in body, it was all bright beyond. In his death we have another evidence that "to live a holy life, is to die a blessed death, and we are down with pain and sorrow when we have yielded up our breath." Bro. Brier was buried from Wesley Chapel. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor Rev Henry Green assisted by Brothers Forest, Vance, Hodge and Brower.

DIED.—Wednesday, March 12th, 1879, in New Orleans, La., in the 36th year of her age, Mrs. Maria M. Edwards, a native of Richmond, Va., and for about 60 years a resident of this city.

This venerable Christian woman who for more than fifty years had borne the name of a disciple of Jesus, and had witnessed a good profession, "fell asleep," passing gently and quietly to the heavenly rest. Full of years and goodness, her walk and conversation adoring the doctrine, she was gathered like a shock of corn fully ripe. "Amid the labor and strength" of the fourscoure years her patience was great and her faith enduring to the end. In her home where her example and precepts gave light and counsel, and her church where she walked worthy her vocation she leaves the savor of a good name, which God's word tells us is better than ointment poured forth; a memory fragrant with truth, love and kindness, so that "Being dead she yet speaketh." "How blest the righteous when she dies; when sinks a weary soul to rest. How mildly began the closing eyes. How greatly heaves the expiring breast.

Life's duty done as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies,
While heaven and earth combine to say,
"How blest the righteous when she dies."

FATHER TOM AND THE POPE; or a Night at the Vatican. By John Fisher Murray. Philadelphia, T. B. Peterson & Brothers. Price 50 cents.

It is a satire on the Romish Church, and details the visit of Father Tom, an Irish priest, to the Pope, and the interchange of courtesies that took place. It will be found entertaining.

New Publications.

Golden Hours for April, is a repository of choice selections of reading matter and illustrations for boys and girls: "How the buttoned Boots Matched," "The Sensible Pig" and other stories and sketches are entertaining. Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, publishers.

The contents of the Princeton Review, published at 37 Park Row, New York, for January 1879 are: The Conscience as a Witness for Christ; The Monetary Conferences of 1867 and 1878; Moral Government; Political Effect of the Decline of Faith in Continental Europe; The day at Cæsarea Phillippi; The Pulpit and Sceptical Culture; The Surrender of Fugitives from Justice; The Philosophy and Causality; Causes of Commercial Depression. Four of these articles are by distinguished writers of Europe and the rest by able writers of our own country. It is very noticable how discussions of current topics are freely intermingled with those of a profoundly metaphysical and theological character. "The Pulpit and Sceptical Culture," by Stuart Robinson, of Louisville, is upon a subject of profound interest to every pastor, and it is discussed with characteristic force. "The Causes of Commercial Depression," by Prof. Thorold Rogers, of the University of Oxford, commends itself to special consideration in these times of general presure. We now, as before, specially commend this Review as unsurpassed for the variety, solidity and ability of its articles, and all at the marvellous low price of two dollars a year.

Dr. Harter's IRON TONIC

Is a Preparation of IRON and CALISAYA BARK, in combination with the Phosphates.
Endorsed by the Medical Profession, and recommended by them for Dyspepsia, General Debility, Female Diseases, Want of Vitality, &c., &c.
Manufactured by the Dr. Harter Medicine Co., No. 213 N. Main Street, St. Louis.
The following is one of the very many testimonials we are receiving daily:
Gentlemen:—Some three months ago I began the use of DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC, upon the advice of many friends who knew its virtues. I was suffering from general debility to such an extent that my labor was exceedingly burdensome to me. A vacation of a month did not give me much relief, but on the contrary, was followed by increased prostration and sinking chills. At this time I began the use of your IRON TONIC, from which I realized almost immediate and wonderful results. The old energy returned and I found that my natural force was not permanently abated. I have used three bottles of the TONIC. Since using it I have done twice the labor that I everdid in the same time during my illness, and with double the ease. With the tranquil nerve and vigor of body, has come also a clearness of thought never before enjoyed. If the TONIC has not done the work, I know not what. I give it the credit.

Conference Proceedings.

The Quarterly Conference of Mount Zion for 1879, was held March 17, Presiding Elder in the chair.

R. Anderson was elected secretary pro tem. There were no complaints and no appeals. The pastor reported eight members received by letter, one child baptised and that the church was beginning the year pleasantly. The report of committee on estimating preacher's salary was received and adopted: to pay the pastor $8 a week, house rent and fuel. Presiding Elder's pay, first quarterage, $25.

The Sunday-school is organized into a Missionary Society. No change made in the Board of Trustees. Bros. H. C. Armston and Wiley Hunter were granted local preacher's licenses. Stewards reported by public collections $70.70, Missionary Society $25, total $95.70; paid pastor $50.95, presiding elder's quarterage of $6 was met. The indications are favorable.

WATCH YOUR WORDS.

Keep a watch on your words, my darlings,
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet, like the bees' fresh honey,
Like the bees they have terrible stings.
They can bless, like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life;
They can cut, in the strife of anger,
Like an open two-edged knife.

Let them pass through your lips unchallenged
If their errand is true and kind;
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind;
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompts the words, let them be unsaid:
They may flash through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on a heart like lead.

Keep them back, if they are cold and cruel,
Under bar, and lock, and seal;
The wounds they make, my darlings,
Are always slow to heal.
May peace guard your lives, and ever,
From this time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the beautiful words of truth.

What a Boy Did.

About two hundred and sixty years ago a poor lad of seventeen was seen traveling on foot in the south of England. He carried over his shoulder, at the end of a stick, all the clothing he had in the world and had in his pocket an old purse with a few pieces of money given him by his mother, when with a throbbing, prayful heart, she took her leave of him on the road, a short distance from their own cottage.

And who was John? for that was his name. He was the son of poor but honest and pious people, and had six brothers and five sisters, all of whom had to labor hard for a living. He was a goodly lad, and at fourteen was disappointed in gaining a place as parish clerk, and with his parents' consent set out to get employment.

[illegible] of Exter, where he [illegible] but as he looked on the beautiful cathedral, and in the bookseller's windows, a strong desire sprang up in his mind to become a scholar, and at once he set out for the University of Oxford, some two hundred miles off, walking the whole way. At night he sometimes slept in barns, or on the sheltered side of a hay-stack, and often met with strange companions. He lived [illegible] bread and water, with [illegible] a draught of milk as a [illegible]

[illegible] at the splendid city of Oxford, his clothes nearly worn out and very dusty, his feet sore, and [illegible] depressed, he knew not [illegible] do.

He had heard of Exeter College in Oxford, and there he went, and [illegible] great delight was engaged [illegible] into the kitchen, to [illegible] and kettles, and that [illegible] work.

[illegible] while scouring his pans, he [illegible] reading a book. [illegible]

Children who are sick are placed under the care of nurses; and the dead are deposited in a species of crypt, where they are covered with quick-lime, in order that the flesh may be speedily consumed.

Once each month the same deputies of the Li-pou make their regular visit of inspection. They inform themselves as to the number of children, and substitute fresh nurses where needed, or in place of those who have reached the limit of their engagement, which never extends beyond three years. In short, they see for themselves whether every thing is in order, and correct abuses if any have crept it. This institution is open at all times to those who, have no children of their own, wish to meet this want by adopting from among the wards of this hospital, a child whom no one can claim, and whose age is such as to lead them to hope for as warm a love as they would receive from an own child.—Sunday Afternoon.

Improve all your opportunities for doing good and making others happy. Sow beside all waters. Scatter blessings with both hands. be a fountain of good to your fellowmen. Do all you can, under the blessing of God, to make them good and happy. Life comes but once to each of us. But it comes laden with the interests of immortality. What we sow here we shall reap hereafter.

Centers or wooden frames are put under the arches of a bridge, to remain no longer than till the latter are consolidated, then to be taken down, and perhaps burned. So sinful pleasures are the devil's scaffolding on which to build a habit; and when that is once formed and fixed, the pleasures are sent for fire-wood, and the hell begins in this life.—Coleridge.

True faith is the soul's outward, not its inward look. The object on which it fixes its eyes, is not the heart's every varying frames and feelings, but the never varying Christ. If you would be sure of your path at night, you do not look down to the ground at your feet, but away to the light in the window, that shows clearly the way to your home.—Baillie.

A schoolmistress, while taking down the names and ages of her pupils, and the names of their parents, at the beginning of the term, asked one little fellow: "What's your father's name?" "Oh, you needn't take down his name; he's too old to go to school to a woman," was the reply.

It is said that when John Wesley was told that his congregation consisted largely of servant girls, he replied he was glad of it, as they had the care of the children and if the servant girls were converted they would train the children in the fear of the Lord.

King Henry III, used to say he would rather spend one hour with God in prayer than hear others speak of Him for ten.

VERMIFUGE.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eye-lid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,
DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE
will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant.

The genuine DR. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrapper.

DR. C. McLANE'S
LIVER PILLS

are not recommended as a remedy "for all the ills that flesh is heir to," but in affections of the liver, and in all Bilious Complaints, Dyspepsia and Sick Headache, or diseases of that character, they stand without a rival.

AGUE AND FEVER.

No better cathartic can be used preparatory to, or after taking Quinine.

As a simple purgative they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated. Each box has a red wax seal on the lid with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS. Each wrapper bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

Dr. J. M. Howe's
Inhaling Tube!
—AND—
COMMON AIR, WILL CURE
CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.
Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:
It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.
Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E. Conference, says:
I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday school Publications of the Church.
I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 tf.

ANTI-FAT

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is the great remedy for Corpulency. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. It acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Taken according to directions, it will reduce a fat person from 2 to 5 pounds a week. In placing this remedy before the public as a positive cure for obesity, we do so knowing its ability to cure, as attested by hundreds of testimonials, of which the following from a lady in Columbus, Ohio, is a sample: "Gentlemen—Your Anti-Fat was duly received. I took it according to directions and it reduced me five pounds. I was so elated over the result that I immediately sent to ACKERMAN'S drug-store for the second bottle." Another, a physician, writing for a patient from Providence, R. I., says, "Four bottles have reduced her weight from 192 pounds to 182 pounds, and there is a general improvement in health." A gentleman writing from Boston, says: "Without special change or attention to diet, two bottles of Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me four and one-quarter pounds." The well-known Wholesale Druggists, SMITH, DOOLITTLE & SMITH, of Boston, Mass., write as follows: "Allan's Anti-Fat has reduced a lady in our city seven pounds in three weeks." A gentleman in St. Louis writes: "Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me twelve pounds in three weeks, and altogether I have lost twenty-five pounds since commencing its use." Messrs. POWELL & PLIMPTON, Wholesale Druggists, of Buffalo, N. Y., write: "TO THE PROPRIETORS OF ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT: Gentlemen—The following report is from the lady who used Allan's Anti-Fat. 'It (the Anti-Fat) had the desired effect, reducing the fat from two to five pounds a week until I had lost twenty-five pounds. I hope never to regain what I have lost.'" Anti-Fat is an unexcelled blood-purifier. It promotes digestion, curing dyspepsia, and is also a potent remedy for rheumatism. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet on Obesity sent on receipt of stamp.

WOMAN

By an immense practice at the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, having treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman, I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and positive remedy for these diseases.

To designate this natural specific, I have named it

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon personal observation. I have, while witnessing its positive results in the special diseases incident to the organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. On its merits, as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. (For conditions, see pamphlet wrapping bottle.)

The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhea, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing-down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, and Female Weakness. I do not extol this medicine as a "cure-all," but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.

Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, a book of over 900 pages, sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.

Favorite Prescription sold by Druggists.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair,

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

to note is that our Conference did not run into a color line conference, although in some respects the work in the State was arranged on that basis. Majority rules at one session of a conference sometimes do not amount to much by the next session with some men—even good men. Policy is sometimes preferred to principle! Out of the seventeen admitted six were white and the remaining eleven were somewhere between white and black. Where can we draw the much desired color line? Well, we thank God we have good reasons to believe that a very large majority of the thirty preachers in the conference are against catering to the diction of Southern prejudice. What the future will develop we cannot now tell, but we expect to push the battle to the enemy's gates, and we have no doubt but that these heroic soldiers of the cross and genuine Methodism will bring many trophies to the Master ere another conference session comes. Only let the church stand by us with her prayers and her benevolences and in a few years these brethren will sound the trumpet of a free and full gospel from every hilltop and from every vale in this wicked land.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

The Colored People in Texas.

MR. EDITOR: I am spending a few days with my family, after being away from home a little more than two months. Will commence my second round on the first of April.

In this letter I want to say something about the colored people and their future in Texas. I am forced to the conclusion, after observing closely their manner of living and habits of industry, that they will ultimately own the largest part of the land in many of the best farming counties in Texas. I know their enemies will laugh at this, but twenty years from now will find this to be a fact. I will give a few reasons:

First, it is a fact that cannot be denied, that they make the cotton, corn and sugar of this State, and if they were taken away there would be very little of it made. They are a necessity to the large plantations; and without them the land lords would starve.

Second: where they buy land the whites gradually sell out to them, cutting up their large farms into smaller ones.

Third: They are the working people of this State, not ashamed to do any drudgery, even down to blacking boots, if there is money in it. Where whites will starve they will make money, and they are learning to save it to put into more land. Many, within my own knowledge, own three or four hundred acres of as good land as the State affords. Some have one hundred acres, and some more, under fence and in a high state of cultivation.

Fourth: Where they buy large tracts of land they carry the news to other parts of the country and induce their people to emigrate, so that very soon there is a large [illegible], the whites, in the mean time, having gone to some city or town, and if they cannot sell they [illegible]; the failure to collect rents, together with heavy taxes, eat up their farms in a few years so they [illegible] to sell at low figures. [illegible] also lead the ignorant [illegible] the matter of education. [illegible] whites complain of high [illegible] and keep their children at [illegible] the colored people will send [illegible] children if it takes every cent [illegible]. They will also have [illegible] church property and more [illegible] in ten years from now, in [illegible] to ministers, if they in[illegible] fact, as they have in the [illegible].

Yours truly,

W. L. MOLLOY.

The Negro Nemesis.

The South sounds a note of alarm to which the North cannot be indifferent. The negroes are emigrating in thousands, principally from Mississippi and Louisiana, and the ruling whites are aghast at the prospect. All over these two States the old cabin homes are being deserted, the few poor traps are being sold, and the money invested in tickets for St. Louis. In a word, the longsuffering blacks are leaving the scenes of sorrows as dark as any that ever filled the cup of race persecution to its bitter brim. Kansas is their Promised Land, and, in the same spirit that has so often before moved masses of misery to seek a better land, even though the pathway to it lay through the wilderness, they are journeying thitherwards as best they may. The Southern press, startled at the proportions of the exodus, turns aside even from the joyful contemplation of the political paradise regained at Washington, to discuss this sudden surging of the waters of black discontent. The St. Louis Globe cries out that "the exodus of negro plantation hands from the South has got to be a subject serious not only for the States from which they come, and to Kansas, from which they all start, but to St. Louis." It calls upon the authorities to bestir themselves. "St. Louis," it says, "is threatened with the influx of thousands of negro families who are absolutely without means." By way of explaining the exodus, it represents that the negroes have been fooled by ticket agents into believing that, if they reach St. Louis, the will be carried free to Kansas, and there provided with the legendary forty acres and a mule.

This explanation does not explain. Hundreds of blacks are already wandering through the streets of St. Louis, homeless and destitute, and the news of their wretched plight must have got back to the plantations. Still they come! The Globe, indeed, refutes itself in the same article, for it goes on to tell how "a telegram was received from S. W. Davis, of Vicksburg, asking whether he could not get fifteen of his hands to go back, but none of the men or women would return." Its own reporter thus records what be heard among them, words full of simple, touching pathos:

"Childer," addressed an aged darkey to the rest of the company, "this yar genneman 'forms us what we have 'ready larned—that we've been fooled' bout that raillerd and land and mewl biz. And then this year genneman asks us whethr we'd not go back to Egypt. Childer I've gibben him the 'wing ob olo Mississippi a knows what you thinks, and I told him you'd rather jine hands and walk into Jordan's tide. And was I not right, childer?" And the "childer" all said "yes."

The most pathetic passages of Uncle Tom's Cabin may be searched in vain for a more naive avowal of the black man's remembered wrongs. Nor does the St. Louis Globe leave us without further light on this wholesale migration of the freedmen. At the landings all along the Mississippi hundreds of negroes are camped, many of them with their household goods around them, waiting for boats to take them off, and waving their hats whenever an upward bound steamer appears. Surely all this is not accounted for on the theory that ticket agents have fooled them with glowing visions of Kansas. The stream of pilgrims is too broad and deep, the impulse directing it too bitterly earnest, to be the mere trick of ticket agents.

The Globe knows better, the whole South knows better, and the country at large will not need to have the exodus explained. This torrent of colored humanity is rushing Kansas-wards, from where? From Mississippi chiefly. It is the freedman calling checkmate to the Mississippi plan! From Louisiana, too, the wave of black emigration is rolling in upon St. Louis. It is the sequel to that monotonous head line—"Louisiana Outrages." The worm trodden so long has turned at last. Again we quote from the Globe's mournful Jeremiade:

"The white people of Mississippi and Louisiana are alarmed at the [illegible]. They are afraid that [illegible] which has hitherto [illegible] their plantations will de[illegible]. In some counties [illegible] cannot be employed at [illegible] the usual rates."

[illegible] more than the [illegible]. It is not alone the [illegible] plants [illegible] with it, if the exodus goes on, the political ground is slipping from under its feet. As Senator Blaine remained it at the opening of the last session, population is the basis of Congressional representation. The negroes gives to the South thirty-five seats in Congress. Under the Mississippi plan, ruthlessly applied in every State where a negro majority exists, if honestly counted, these thirty-five seats are all held by Democrats. Now the negro is going out from the land of his martyrdom by thousands. If the tide is not turned back, the census of 1880 will show the South to be entitled to a score or so less seats in Congress. Where, then, will be the boasted Bourbon Restoration? Gone forever and a day. With the negro vote vanished, or largely reduced, as a basis of additional representation, Southern pretensions will be as airy and unsubstantial as the stuff that dreams are made of, and resurrected rebeldom will be ready for its second funeral before it has hardly had time to get out of its first grave-clothes.

Well may the State that sends Davis as eulogist to the Senate Chamber pause and ask itself if the Mississippi plan is, after all, sound statesmanship. The tendency of the negro to cling to his home, in spite of untold hardships, is proverbial. If the smoke of his cabin fire no longer goes up, and his back is turned upon the spot where all his tenderest recollections linger, we need no Southern editor to tell us why. The whole character of the colored race, trusting, superstitions, emotional, and blindly devoted, as it is, alike to persons, places, and principles, is a sufficient key to the strange scenes at St. Louis. Naturally, the black is not an emigrant, adventurously seeking strange lands. His instincts are such as blind him as with hooks of steel to his home. We know, therefore, that this is a tearful pilgrimage that he has undertaken. The course of social ostracism, the anathama of race hatred, the blight of a political reign of terror, have all been needed to tear him from the soil whereon he was born and bred. Mississippi has worked out her "plan" to its remorseless end. Proscribed, persecuted, whipped, murdered, hunted from the polls, and, when all else has failed, cheated at the very ballot-box itself, the negro at last has struck his tent and is in quest of a new home. And wherever he goes, he will carry the death-warrant of Southern supremacy in his pocket and will be his own all sufficent Nemesis.—Boston Traveller.

Politics in the Pulpit.

The minister should ever announce great principles which lie at the foundation of society—principles affecting the rights of man and the duties of the government. But, valuable as are these topics, they should be but occassional and incidental. Sometimes, passing from these broad principles, the minister suffers himself to use the pulpit to promote the interests of a favorite political measure, which inures to the benefit of a party, or to the aspiration of some individual. Such a course ever lowers the tone of the pulpit, and offends some of the congregation. It requires skill and tact and heroism to utter the high moral requirements of the law of God, and yet to avoid such declarations as in times of high party excitement may foster mere party or personal interests.

Still worse is it when the minister allows himself to be personally drawn into a political canvass. Parties are nearly equally balanced, and those in the minority fancy that the personal influence of the preacher may turn a sufficient number of votes to make them triumphant. Hence they urge him to be a candidate. They dwell upon the great issues at stake. They tell him how greatly good men are needed in office, show him what a vast work he may perform, and endeavor to show him that it is really his duty to accept the nomination. Sometimes, alas! he is persuaded to do so; he leaves his pulpit, engages in the canvass, mingles and is absorbed for the time being in the pending issues. These instances are comparatively rare, and the minister conscientiously believes he is doing right; yet my conviction is that the result is always disastrous, both to himself and the Church. It is disastrous to himself, in that his status is lowered even in the estimation of his political friends. They selected him not because they cared for him, or really desired his services, but because he was an available candidate. They flattered him to use him, and they henceforth regard him as a man that may be flattered and used. Had he declined the proffered nomination; had he said, "I have but one work to do; I must preach Christ and him crucified," he could have occupied a position of higher moral eminence. But by those outside of his own party he is simply regarded as one who is ready to use his ministerial influence for the promotion of his personal ambition. If unsuccessful, years will pass away before he can regain the high moral influence which he once exerted. If successful, his thoughts are turned from the pulpit. The questions which he considers, the associations in which he mingles, and the applications for office and assistance constantly pressed upon him, divert his attention from that course of reading and that character of mental study which gave him efficiency and power in the pulpit. As the result he either returns to his ministry at the close of his official period a weaker and less efficient minister than before; or, what is more likely, having embarked on the political stream, he is borne onward by the current, never to return again. Thus one whom God has called to the ministry is, to that extent, lost to the cause of Christ. But the most disastrous result is, that the public understand that those who profess to be called of God have such convictions as bind them to their work; that they are ready to exchange it for any position they may consider more lucrative or more honorable. As one minister accepts such a nomination, the public infer that all would do so, if they were equally pressed; and hence that the ministry is regarded by the ministers themselves, not as a divine calling, but as an inferior position which they use as a stepping-stone to something higher. In this way the character of the ministry in general suffers immensely; while the individual, at the best, can be but slightly benefited.

I have stated this case in its least exceptionable form. Much worse is it when a minister seeks a nomination, when he voluntarily abandons the pulpit to mingle in party strife, or when he accepts of a clerkship, becomes an agent for insurance societies, or for selling pianos, or sewing-machines, or patent medicines. Such men, I believe, do immense injury to the cause of Christ. It is proper, however, to say, that these remarks apply only to those who have health and strength for the pulpit, and who are approved and desired by the Churches. When a minister's health becomes so impaired that he is unable to take a regular pastoral charge, it is right for him to engage in any honest calling for a livelihood; and when the Churches, for any cause, do not desire his ministerial services, he should be at perfect liberty to engage in other callings and duties; and to retire altogether from the active ministry.

Quite possibly all these cases have their root in the lack of a clear conviction of a divine call to to the ministry, or of deep earnestness of spirit; for without earnestness a man accomplishes but little good. The earnest man, the man of convictions, who sees a perishing world, and believes God has sent him to help in rescuing it, will not turn aside from his high and holy calling. He will bear privation, face difficulties, and endure hardships, and meet even death itself, rather than turn to the right hand or to the left from the path which God has marked out. All the causes to which I have alluded contribute to the inefficiency of the pulpit, and give some color of reason to those who proclaim the pulpit to be a failure. Yet all these instances, though to be deeply regretted, form but a small percentage when compared with the great body of efficient and devoted ministers who are toiling in the Master's vineyard.—Bishop Simpson.

Reverend.

In a single passage only in the Bible do we find the word Reverend mentioned. It is in the ninth verse of Psalm cxi., "He sent redemption unto His people; He hath commanded his covenant forever; Holy and Reverend is His name." Of all ecclesiastical dignitaries, the Pope alone, the self-elected vicar of Christ, lays claim to the title of "Holiness;" but under what warrant does a Protestant ministry, making no claim to the infallibility, arrogate to itself the co-eminent title of "Reverend?" Does it accord with the meekness and lowliness of heart which Christ enjoins on His followers, that any of these should voluntarily assume this lofty name which is a prerogative of Omnipotence.

The title was unknown during the primitive Christian centuries, and, indeed, appears to have been generally adopted only within the last two hundred years. It was taken up by the Episcopacy, as well as by the Romanists, but was denied to the Dissenters, with whom, however, gradually growing in estimation, it came into general use. Nevertheless, the Friends, the Mennonites and probably a few other denominations (numerically small) of German derivation, are pronounced in the disuse of it. Concerning the origin of the term the following item from Notes and Queries (First Series, vol. vi., No. 150) may be of interest:

"During the seventeenth century the word 'reverend' was usually coupled with 'learned,' as in the following case: Vaughan, in his Life of Dr. Jackson, thus commences it: 'Being earnestly desired to deliver some character of the reverend and learned Dr. Jackson,' etc. Bishop Patrick, too, in his Annotations on Solomon's Song, viii, 7, quotes 'the reverend and learned Dr. Hammond.' And beneath the portrait of John Kettlewell, prefixed to his work on the Apostle's Creed, we read that it is 'The true effigy of the reverend and learned Mr. John Kottlewell.' But yet neither of these divines need the epithet as a prefix to their names in their works. It is clearly a title of modern usage, neither sanctioned nor required by any law, or canon, and from the growing inconveniences that attend its use, it may the more easily be discontinued, if judged necessary."

Mention is also made of the fact, in a recent number of the same periodical (Fifth Series, vol. v.) that upon the Judicial Court of the Privy Council of Great Britain having decided in 1875 that "reverend" is not a peculiar title of office or dignity, but one of courtesy, applicable to those who are worthy of reverence, several of the clerical subscribers to one of the English papers desired that the same might be sent them without the prefix "Rev." to their names.

There are evidences warranting the belief that an increasing number of Christian ministers would be glad to rid themselves and the church at large of this self-assertive designation. While lack of faith and of a willingness to be little in the world's estimation may have, perhaps, almost unconsciously operated with many to prevent a giving up in this matter, yet others (of whom may be instanced a Presbyterian of large attainments and much humility of mind, not long deceased,) clearly discerning the pointing of the Holy Spirit herein, have been constrained to drop the title, while sincerely desiring to be no more addressed thereby.

Recently, an article upon the subject appeared in a Methodist paper, the Banner of Holiness, wherein the writer, beside calling attention to the unseemly laudatory notices of ministers at the present day, inquires how such language might have sounded in the apostolic era, and applies the modern titles to some of those ancient worthies, as thus: Rev. Simon Peter, D. D., Rev. Paul D. D. LL. D. The Advocate of Holiness publishes the article as worthy the serious attention of its readers, and appropriately concludes: "How has the fine gold become dross! When will such folly come to an end, and ministers be simply servants of the Lord Jesus Christ? 'Call no man master,' and be ye not called Rabbi."—L. in Christian Neighbor.

The Relation of Students to the Missionary Cause.

The great Missionary movement in this country had its origin in the heart of a student. It is not three-quarters of a century since Samuel J. Mills, then a student in Williams College, was fired with an intense longing for the salvation of the heathen. He was in the habit of meeting with several companions for prayer in a grove near the College. One of these meetings was interrupted by an approaching thunder-storm, and the five young men sought shelter behind a neighboring hay-stack. It was then and there that Mills proposed to send the gospel to the heathen, and said, "We can do it, if we will." After further consideration and earnest prayer, a society was formed in College, which was the first Missionary Society on this continent. As a result of this effort, influences were soon set in operation which led to the formation of the American Board, and, as an outgrowth of this small beginning, we now have in this country sixteen Missionary Boards, employing nearly one thousand men, and annually expending about two million dollars. Truly the stone which was cut out of the hills of New England has become a mountain.

Not only does the missionary movement owe its origin to students; its present and future prosecution largely depends upon them. Missionaries, and the means with which to maintain the work, ever have and ever will come principally from educated men. The cause appeals to us at this time with an earnestness which we cannot treat lightly. A great deal has been accomplished, but infinitely more remains to be done. Is it not a fact that the cause of Foreign Missions is really the chief question of Christendom? Look at the problem for one moment. Nearly three-fourths of the human race are absolutely ignorant of the way of salvation. The Churches in all Christian lands are sending less than 3,000 men into this vast field. America furnishes about 1,000 of this number. In other words we employ 50,000 men to preach the gospel in this country to our 40,000,000, and send one-fiftieth of that number abroad to aid in the work for 900,000,000.

Such is a very brief statement of the missionary problem. We cannot entirely solve it, but we can do our part. We can do a great deal if we will. How many of us will?—College Student.

Sanctified Communism.

God's remedy for the evils growing out of some men's great accumulations of the great plundering of others is two-fold. He strikes the hands of unrighteous getters with palsy, and thrills the hearts of righteous getters with love. He went down into Egypt, where political economy had beggared even slaves, denied them straw, and robbed them of children, that others might have palaces and armies, and made those palaces loathsome deadhouses, and those armies corpses. He led out the slaves burdened with wealth. Then, least they should re-enact the dismal tragedy, he gave them this commandment: "Thou shalt not oppress the poor; shalt not keep back his wages overnight; shalt leave grain in the corners, and olives on the uttermost boughs, that by labor they may get them, and not be pauperized by charity." Then if any one is obliged to sell his labor—a kind of slavery that God prefers to unlaboring pauperism—the year of jubilee shall let every man have his own family, land, and self again. Here is political economy that is divine.—New York Advocate.

Christian Waiting.

It is after ploughing, harrowing, seed-sowing and weeding that the farmer waits. The waiting of the sluggard, the waiting of him who is indisposed to exert himself, the waiting which springs from indolence is ignoble, dishonoring to God and pernicious. It is not until we have striven to do our duty in Divine strength; it is not until we feel ourselves hemmed in, unable to take another step that we are to "stand still and see the salvation of God." The apostolic injunction is, "having done all, to stand." It is not until we have labored that we are to learn to wait. To act otherwise would be to play the part of the farmer who may be waiting for a harvest before he has sown his seed.

There can be no waiting without faith. The husbandman waits after his toil because he has faith in the chemistry of the soil, in the germinating power of the seed and in the constancy of natural laws. So faith is the root of Christian waiting, faith in the Divine promises, fidelity, and love. Without such faith there never has been, there never can be, any true waiting.

Christian waiting is also patient. "The husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth and hath long patience for it." He knows that the seed corn has to pass through certain mystic processes ere he can rejoice over the ingathering of the ripe and abundant grain. His waiting is, therefore, quiet and philosophical. So true Christian waiting is a state in which fluttering and murmuring have no place. It is a state in which there is dignified self restraint and sweet acquiescence to that will which is recognized to be infallible and good.

Nor is Christian waiting wanting in expectancy. The waiting of the farmer is not a listless or torpid posture, neither is the waiting of the Christian. It is full of intense desire. It is ever on the outlook. An attendant, who was asked to wake a visitor in time to meet an appointment was lingering hard by for the purpose when some one exclaimed, "What, setting here and doing nothing!" "No," was the quick reply, "I am busy waiting." The man who is truly waiting for the salvation of the Lord is "busy waiting"—busy like one waiting for the day dawn or like one waiting to take the tide at the flood. While waiting patiently we should not do so with drooping head, downcast eyes and limbs relaxed, but with ardent hope and eager gaze, like those who wait for the incoming of train or ship which is to bring to their embrace a long absent one from other lands.

Christian waiting is not optional. The farmer has to wait for the silent and gradual revolution of the seasons. However anxious, he cannot quicken the months in their flight, he cannot hasten the corn sprouts above the brown earth. He is compelled to wait. So with Christian waiting. God does nothing hurriedly. Did the earth with her hills and vales, lakes, rivers and seas, dark mines and gigantic rocks reach her present state in swift work? Did Jesus sweep down from the heavens, as the Savior of man, immediately He was promised? Perfection is not reached in a leap. We must wait. But we should wait in faith, in patience and in ardent expectation, with submission and love and fullest confidence that God will bring forth the results in his own way and time.

On to Texas.

From G. Pandely, superintendent of the Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, we learn definitely of the progress being made in pushing on the railroad leading from New Orleans to Houston, Texas. The eighty miles of splendid road from New Orleans to Morgan's City on Berwick's Bay forms the first link of the road. From this point to Vermillionville, a distance of sixty-three miles, the grading is all done, and the track is being laid at the rate of a quarter of a mile a day. In a few days the train will run to Franklin, and by October 1st it will reach New Iberia, and only a few months more will be needed to reach Vermillionville. This part of the line is being constructed by the Morgan interest.

The next link is from Vermillionville to Orange, one hundred and three miles, a company of which Mr. McCoach, of "cotton tie" fame, is the chief man financially. The company represents vast wealth. The work in this link is being pushed rapidly from Orange eastward. There is some hope of this road being built by next January. The link from Orange to Houston, the terminus, has been [illegible]

The City.

A. J. Dumont is confirmed as deputy collector; R. O. Herbert, warehouse superintendent; J. H. Burch, record clerk; C. C. Antoine, inspector of cigars and storekeeper. These were nominations of Collector Badger, approved by the Treasury Department.

Special Deputy Collector of Customs, General T. C. Anderson, contracted for and obtained a large number of colored laborers from various bulldozed parishes of the State, to go to his plantation in St. Landry parish, where they are guaranteed full protection and security in life, person, and property. Gen. Anderson has always treated his employes humanely and their homes have been unmolested.

The Biography of Rev. Dr. T. M. Eddy is a real contribution to Missionary literature and a memorial movement of a "burning and shining light in the church." The biographer has in his labor of love embalmed the name of many of the Christian heroes whom thousands will delight to see thus honored in a Book which will be read, not only by the host of personal friends made by Dr. Eddy in his life and and ministry; but by thousands of young ministers who will be charmed by an example of such rare industry, zeal, and success.

At present the electoral college has 369 voters, requiring 185 to elect, the Southern States having 138 and the Northern 231. In the next apportionment according to the estimates made, the Southern States will increase from 138 to 157, and the Northern States from 231 to 281, an increase of nineteen in the Southern States and forty-seven in the Northern States.—Washington Post.

Rev. L. Calloway, Lovelady, Texas, say by postal: "I have been very sick since the conference, and it appeared to me one night that I ought to stop the filthy habit of smoking. Tell all the preachers to stop smoking tobacco, or using it, for it will ruin them."

Laying the Corner Stone of Meridian Academy.

The editor and readers of the SOUTHWESTERN will remember that the laying of the corner stone of the Meridian Adademy was to have taken place Aug. 17th of last year, but owing to the yellow fever excitement which broke out a few days before that time we were compelled to postpone it.

The eigbth of May next is now appointed for the occasion, and we invite all friends of education in the Meridian district and elsewhere to be present. The yearly picnic of our Sunday-school is to be held on the same day. We desire as many of the ministers of the Mississippi Conference to be present as possible. The laying of a corner stone on which to build a high school for the education of the colored youth is an unusual occurrence in this State. We kindly ask the assistance of our white friends who have said they would help us in the erection of our building, and have published the same in the city paper. They told us to go forward and help ourselves and then we will help you.

We want every man, woman and child to see the laying of the corner stone and contribute as much as they can for the erection of the building. A great many have pledged a dollar each, some five dollars, and a few twenty-five dollars. We have invited the neigbboring Sunday-schools of the M. E. Church to ask each pupil to contribute twenty-five cents. The colored Masons of Meridian are invited to participate on the occasion. The trustees of Shaw University will manage the collections. There will be other societies out, and with the Sunday-schools will follow the Masons in procession.

We are a poor people, but we have a will to do something for a school building in Meridian.

Our presiding elder, J. W. Dunn, will convene the district conference in Meridian on the 6th and 7th: all the preachers, local preachers, exhorters, stewards, superintendents and one class leader from each charge are expected to be present.

The Right View.

The Methodist Recorder, organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, sums up its views on the proposition of Senator Windom to settle the colored people of the nation in United States lands in the West as follows:

If families here or there feel like moving West or anywhere else, it is their right, their privilege, and their duty; but the idea of "countless numbers," that is the way the emigrationists speak of it, moving anywhere we hold to be bad policy. The negro must prepare himself to continue to work out his salvation, even in blood and tears. It is a hard fate we know, and the only relief one has is in the fact that if we but be the followers of what is right, nothing can do us harm.

This view of the case must in the end, we think, be accepted as right, by all who will carefully and unselfishly consider Senator Windom's proposition.

The Honma Courier has this explanation of the election of Republican delegates from Terrebonne to the constitutional convention:

The reason why, is this: Gov. Nicholls and others—high in the ranks of the Democractic party—promised the people that, if the Democratic party succeeded in driving away the corruptible Radicals from office, money would be plentiful, taxation low, etc. Now what has the present administration done to redeem those pledges? Nothing; but on the contrary, the people pay more licences and taxes than during the Republican misgovernment! That is the reason why the Democratic voters of Terrebonne took no interest in the late election. They say they will never cast another vote unless the rates of taxation are lowered.

Says the New Orleans Observer: "Upon such clergymen as the Revs. Emperor Williams, A. M. Newman, Joseph Gould, A. R. Blunt, Dr. Charles Thompson, T. E. Hilson, L. Gardner, Jas. Vance, Murrill, Roy, and their confreres of teachers, society directors and others, will devote the management of the proposed convention of colored citizens of Louisiana. The Observer is assured that by next Saturday the formal call for the convention unanimously signed, will be announced. Meanwhile public attention is generally invited to the purpose." This convention is proposed for the consideration of immigration and the general welfare of the colored people of the State.

OUR SOUTHERN METHODISM

LOUISIANA.

H. J. Wright, Alexandria: "Net proceeds of the fair, $127 20: clear of expenditures, $89 30. Our debt was $154 40: now it is $62 50. Our improvements to the church property are valued at about $700."

Rev. W. Carr, New Iberia: "We feel as if the Lord is with us. On Sunday, 9th inst., we had a union meeting. The following result was a token of God's promise to his people. First we had a glorious time, second we collected $58 60 for our church debt. We hope to be able to give a full account of our church in our next."

Rev. Hayward, West Baton Rouge, reports that his Sunday-school increased since conference from a small beginning until it now numbers fifty. A missionary society has been organized and twenty-two have joined this. He is hopeful for the work of the year, including a good list of subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN.

S. P. Bell, Cypremort: "Our church is doing well—we have had seven additions to the church since Conference. Our protracted meetings will start the first week in April. Cypremort has awakened and we anticipate a good work here this year. Our Sunday-school numbers 116; every day school musters 100, with Rev. Bro. Beal as principal and myself as assistant."

Rev. Horace Wallace, Holmesville; "I reached my field of labor Feb. 20th, held a leaders' and stewards' meeting on the 21st and on the following Sunday commenced a protracted meeting, which has been continued up to this time, during which 25 persons have united with the church. On Sunday night of our first quarterly meeting, after the sermon preached by our presiding elder, J. Matlock, 13 seekers came to the altar; 11 of them were young men of promise. The congregation gave both the pastor and presiding elder a most cordial reception. The collection on Sunday of the quarterly meeting was $16. The prospect is that this conference year will be crowned with success to the cause of the blessed Master on this charge."

MISSISSIPPI.

F. A. Cotton, Lauderdale: "Have just arrived at this point. It was assigned to Rev. Faulk, but he did not accept it. It is an important work."

Rev. W. S. Harris, Liberty: "When I came here I found the Sabbath-school in very good condition with an average attendance of ten; and now I am very happy to say that we have thirty-five regular scholars. Miss A. M. Pinkings, one of our teachers, is doing all she can to build up the school. Rev. E. Collins cast the seeds upon the waters before he left here, and now they are springing up truly."

Rev. B. F. Penny, Columbus: "Our quarterly conference convened March 8-9. Elder McLachlan was present and left good advice with us. On Sunday night our chapel that seats many hundreds was more than filled. Sixteen have united with the church this quarter. At night one hundred and forty-four communed. So pray for us."

TEXAS.

G. J. Starnes, Victoria: "We are having a very promising Sunday-school, filling in with every variety and age who seem to be very much interested in the Bible lessons."

Rev. W. B. Pullam, Houston; "I have a meeting going on. We had three converts and twenty at the mercy seat for prayer. Our house is crowded every night, and our Sunday-school is advancing. We have two hundred and twenty in average attendance and we feel that the Lord is with us. My congregation is getting better all the time."

Letter from Oxford.

OXFORD, MISS., March 7, 1879.

Editor SOUTHWESTERN: Your invaluable paper is my constant companion and unerring guide, and I am glad to say it has recently found its way to many houses in this vicinity, where newspapers are almost, if not entirely, strangers. It seems that our people are enthusiastic over what the Freedmen's Aid Society is doing in the way of elevating and refining the rising generation. They have determined to extend some aid themselves to that most generous of all benevolent societies. We have formed a society at Buford's Chapel, on the Abbeville circuit, one of whose purposes is to "give all the aid it possibly can to our own Shaw University." I truly believe our society owes its birth to your paper.

Letter from Calvert.

CALVERT, TEXAS, March 10th, 1879.

MR. EDITOR:—I have just closed a quarterly meeting at Calvert and Port Sullivan, of which the Revs. J. W. Robinson and Daniel Sopps are pastors. I find the work at Calvert in a prosperous condition and in a growing attitude. I preached at three and at night to a house crowded to its utmost capacity. Quite a number of persons retired on account of there not being room in our large and commodious building to seat them. Then there were upwards of six hundred persons in the building, and over a hundred of that number stood up not being able to find seats. Bro. Robinson has awakened great interest at Calvert both in church and Sabbath-school. He deserves great credit for the manner in which he has conducted church business here. The Sunday-school's regular attendance is over a hundred scholars. The people all seem to love him, both men, women, children and Baptists. Immediately after the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered to over a hundred and fifty people. All denominations joined in and partook of the glorious feast. I find this a grand people here. All on earth they want is attention, and in a few years they will take as many advocates and compete with any church in the bounds of the West Texas Conference.

Now the same day at 11 o'clock at Port Sullivan we administered the sacrament of the Lord's supper to quite a number of people. The Spirit of God came down on the glorious occasion our souls to bless. We left the church on fire, and a great soul-shining sensation awakened among sinners. I said to you at conference that the Austin District would roll up more subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE than any other District in the West Texas Conference, and I aim to make good my word. I took Brother J. W. Robinson with me and had him to canvass for the ADVOCATE and after he made an earnest talk to my astonishment he a secured a handsome list of thirteen subscribers. I think this speaks loud for a country church. This shows to other preachers what effort can do. The condition of the work at Port Sullivan being large caused me to appoint Brother Robinson to preach too at that point once a month. You will hear from me soon. I remain yours in Christ,

Letter from Shreveport.

SHREVEPORT, LA., March 20th, 1879

Editor SOUTHWESTERN—It is with much pleasure I endeavor to let we are getting on at this time. I you know how can't say but little concerning the times in the business of our country, for we are having our share of the dull times and the scarcity of money, but religiously we can't complain, for it seems that the prospects are brightening before us for a good crop year to gather in loads for Jesus. The first quarterly conference was held here in St. James Church on the 15th inst., in which we had a good time, with presiding elder Samuel Davage in the chair. Every member of the conference seemed to be so filled with the love of God that it made time pass off sweetly.

The presiding elder and Rev. H. T. O. Abbott surely did feel the Spirit of God. The members of the church are all united in every cause. The elder preached Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and would have preached at 7 o'clock in the evening, but it rained at dark, and we could have no meeting.

Love feast was held Monday night. At one time during love feast it seemed as though we all were filled with the Holy Spirit of God, that we are the children of God and his army, and are continually moving on to that city and building not made with hands but eternally in the heavens. Over two hundred and fifty persons spoke, many from St. Paul's Church and other churches of our city. Bro. S. H. E. Morant, T. Jackson, Samuel Armstead, presiding elder S. Davage, H. T. O. Abbott, and Bro. Perry Hall was in attendance. We can say that we intend through faith to join that heavenly host as it comes down to meet the faithful. Pray for us, Brother. We are having a fine Sunday-school with everything going well, many of the aged members of the church are attending Sunday-school regularly, and as for myself, Brother, I feel as though a great number will be added to the school and church this year. It is happiness and joy for me to work for our Blessed Redeemer. Parson Abbott will begin protracted meetings next week nothing preventing him, as there are many anxious souls hunting for Jesus; and we want them to find him and will help them all we can, we want help too. Nothing more from your Brother, in Christ Jesus.

Independent Order of Good Templars.—Of all the agencies at work to suppress the liquor traffic; drive out intemperance, with its baneful influences, from the world, and raise mankind to his true moral level, the Independent Order of Good Templars, is pre-eminently first and foremost. The principle of the Order is Total Abstinence for the individual, and Prohibition for the State. The doors of the Order are opened wide She knows no color, sex or race. All who desire to work for the reformation of individuals and of State are invited, yea, more than that; all such are most earnestly requested to come. The Order of Good Templars, is nothing less than a grand, universal brotherhood and sisterhood, of all races, tribes and nationalities, joined and cemented together by the most holy and sacred ties, to drive intemperance from the world; reclaim its unfortunate victims; wipe the tears of the suffering children; bind up the broken heart of sorrowing wives and allow gray headed parents to enter their rest in peace. This matter concerns you. Are you a parent? Then this is the very subject for you to investigate. Guard your house, arm yourself and your household against that powerful man, "Strong Drink," who goes about slaying sixty thousand of our young people annually. Are you a young man? Remember the enemy goeth about in the garb of "Strong Drink" seeking whom he may devour. Are you a church member; class leader; minister? Then surely if you are mindful of your high calling, you will "Work for the night cometh when no man can work." We want to institute at least twenty-five lodges within the next sixty days. Can we not do so? Send petition signed by at least ten respectable citizens of your town together with charter fee (eight dollars) to the undersigned, or to Mr. Thos. H. Jones, G. W. C. T., Algiers, La., and charter, hooks, etc., will be immediately forwarded to you.

Houston District, Texas.

MR. EDITOR: I have made my first round upon the Houston district, have held upon all the circuits and stations a quarterly conference and administered the Lord's supper. Thus far I have attended to the duties of the presiding elder. I have found all the pastors Methodist ministers and of course "Christian gentlemen." At Richmond Bro. Noble (and, Mr. Editor, he bears that name with propriety; he is Noble by name, noble by nature and noble by grace) met me at the depot and made my stay very pleasant. There we have a harmoneous and growing church. Through the efforts of the pastor a comfortable parsonage has been erected and paid for. At Stafford I found a pleasant home with a good Baptist family. Here the pastor has an open door and a wonderful opportunity to do a work that shall survive the wreck of worlds.

Spring Station is a large work where we have a number of small churches. Bro. A. Harris, the pastor, is the right man in the right place. He is a man of one work, everything indicates a glorious harvest.

At Lynchburg our work is small, but under the watchful care of Bro. Norwood the weak are putting on strength. Houston circuit is made up of a number of points outside and around the city. Bro. Haywood is attending to this work. Hockley, under the care of Bro. Thomas, is making a good record. Two acres of land have been bought, upon which a comfortable chapel has been erected and all paid for. At the quarterly meeting the pastor received twelve on probation.

You know, Mr. Editor, that I came from New England to Texas. Of course I am a stranger in a strange land. I left Boston Jan. 6, and from that time to this I have seen but one man that I ever saw in New England, but I have daily felt one familiar presence and heard one familiar voice, so my heart has been full of doxologies. The preachers and people have received me with open hands and hearts and I have forgotten that I am a stranger. Never in all my life have I preached to more attentive audiances and most of our meetings have been glorious. God has in a most marvelous manner answered prayer.

Foreign Missions.

A revival at Nynee Tal is among the most interesting items we have from India

The Inspector General of Northern India says: "Almost the only really prosperous native schools are those in large stations superintended by the ladies of the several missionary societies. Without supervision and examination, girls' schools rapidly decline and the attendance and instruction become merely nominal. Supervision and examination by men are, though not always openly, objected to by the people, and the committees, as is natural and right, are unwilling to give offence by what would be considered to be intrusion."

At the monthly meeting of the Missionary Board, March 1st, Bishop Haven in the chair, further aid was granted to our projected interior Mission in Africa. Dr. S. Hunt was elected to fill the vacancy in the Board caused by the death of Dr. Nelson. A communication was received from the Board of Bishops March 3d, notifying the Board of Managers of the appointment of J. M. Phillips, Esq., as Treasurer of the Missionary Society, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Dr. Nelson.

Our missionaries in Sweden say: "God is with us everywhere in an evident manner. Revivals have been going on in many places of the districts, and not a few have been converted to God and received into the church, and then we have had to be glad at the very good success during the new year. Praise to God. Several new working fields are occupied and still more open.

The burden that has been oppressing the congregation at Stockholm, according to the debt of the church, is now diminished. The money came from the Board, and the prospects of success became more bright immediately. The leading brethren and the whole congregation express their thankfulness to the Board for help received, and I feel very thankful too.

It has been a time full of blessings for the church, and in many places there has been an abundant outpouring of the Spirit and extraordinary revivals have taken place. There has been uncommon progress in some places: hundreds have been converted and joined our church. There is a good spirit walking our country. The children of God seem to long for pure hearts, and I think a holy church will be a saving church. May God pour upon us His holy spirit. Some chapels have been dedicated since last conference and the prospects for the future are brighter than ever. Blessed be the Lord that Methodism came to this country. Many of the preachers have a hard work; some of them have from 20 to 30 appointments to be visited regularly, and they must preach nearly every day, sometimes two or three times a day. But the Lord will provide strength for every day. Blessed be his name.

Italian Christian experience in all its aspects is very like that of awakened persons everywhere. Read what occurred under the preaching of the word by a missionary: "A poor old woman of nearly 70 years stood up and said: 'O, sir, the words that you speak open up a new prospect before me; they give me a new life, for my life has been a stormy and cheerless one. But as Jesus is so good, so holy, so loving, do you think that He will forgive my sins which are so great and so many? I feel ashamed to stand in His light. I wish I could live my life over again! Will He forgive such a sinner as I am?'" Brother Scuderi began to read those comforting words of the Savior: "Come unto me," etc. "Him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast him out." "I came to save that which was lost," and so on. The poor woman with, tears in her eyes, said, "O Lord Jesus, receive me, I wish to be thine." Everybody present was moved to tears, and after the little service was over, the poor old woman took hold of Bro. Scuderi by the coat, and said, "Sir, for God's sake do come as often as you can to us poor people, for we have been left in ignorance of God's ways, and have lived like the heathen. We are like sheep left to wander without a shepherd; our priests have said a few words in Latin; we have the mass, we have said the rosary to the Virgin Mary, and that is all we know of religion. Have pity on us, and come to read to us from God's book."

The legislature of Texas passed a law, which is now in effect, putting into market all the public school lands of the State at from twenty to thirty cents per acre. As a result the real estate dealers of the State are giving up in disgust, and the people who have worked hard to pay for lands at much higher price are not pleased.

Your only safety! Total abstinence. The greatest factor to bring back prosperity to the State: Prohibition.

April 6, 1879—SANCTIFIED AFFLICTION. SCRIPTURE.—Job 33: 14-30. Memorize 24-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—"My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him."—Heb. 12: 5.

TOPIC.—Deliverance from the Pit.

(Condensed from the National S. S. Teacher.)

Introductory.—Our lesson falls in the speech of Elihu. The "three friends" were silenced. They had come on a visit of condolence. They had administered consolation by declaring that afflictions were sent by God as a punishment of sin. They had insisted that he must have been a great sinner or he would not be so great a sufferer. Job repudiated their doctrine. He knew from the testimony of his own conscience that he was not a gross and wicked offender. The more they insisted upon his guilt the more self-righteous he became. The trouble in Job's mind was to reconcile God's treatment of him with his righteousness. Many another afflicted man has been troubled with that problem. The question was, How can a God be just who lets the wicked flourish and afflicts the just? His sense of injustice is not entirely allayed, his repinings, especially, are not driven away, but through the clouds by faith he catches an occasional sight of the face of God. Hitherto he had walked by sight—his trials were teaching him to walk by faith.

It is at this point that Elihu speaks. He is full of indignation against Job because he justified himself rather than God, and also against the three friends because they had not been able to answer Job, and yet had condemned him. With many apologies for presuming to teach his elders, he presents a new view of God's dealings with men in the matter of suffering, which he is sure is right. His theory is that it is sent for discipline, and that God ceases to wield the rod when it has wrought its curative work. Affliction is not sent on account of God's displeasure but is one of the measures of his grace. Job had complained that God was treating him as if he was his enemy—Elihu shows him that in so chastening him he was acting as his friend.

God Speaking (14-18).—Elihu explains that God has two ways of saving: 1. By dreams and visions; 2. By chastening. V. 14. For God speaketh. Job had complained that God did not speak. But God was speaking to him all the while though he knew it not. The voice of pain was the voice of God. The Lord was nearer to him than ever he had been before. Elihu meant to repudiate the idea that God is voiceless in his intercourse with men. He speaks to us through his Word, through the conscience, by his providences, as Elihu subsequently shows, and, best of all, by his Holy Spirit.

V. 15. In a dream, etc. In that day God often spoke to men "in slumberings upon the bed." Even now he does not confine himself to the hour of the day, but often draws aside the curtain of the night to make himself known.

V. 16. Then he opened the ears of men. And sealeth their instruction. The soul is in a plastic state, so that he can make an impression upon it as a seal makes an impression upon melted wax.

V. 17. That he may withdraw man from his purpose, And hide pride from man. To hide pride is to take away the occasion for pride.—the disposition to feel proud. It needs to eradicated; for "pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall."

V. 18. He keepeth back his soul from the pit. The pit that is referred to is the pit of perdition. And his life from perishing by the sword.

God Chastening (19-20).—And now Elihu comes to the second part of this division of his address. For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, the scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."

V. 19. He is chastened also with pain upon his bed. Those who have experienced severe sickness know what that means.

Quite vividly is set forth the wasting away of man's powers by disease. How soon is his strength gone! A day may so reduce him that he shall be in strength only like a little child. It shall be a weariness for him even to lift an arm. Sometimes disease carries on its work after a mining and sapping [illegible] is insidious, [illegible] the citadel [illegible] are unnoticed. His soul [illegible] to the grave.

God Delivering (23-30).—V. 23. If [illegible] with him, an [illegible] To show unto man his [illegible] sending tribulations [illegible] servants. [illegible]

After his redemption—the prayer of gratitude. And he will be favorable unto him. He is always favorable to the prayer of thanksgiving. And he shall see his face with joy.

To Job for a long time God's face had seemed to be hiden. He had refused to believe that it could be seen in the midst of such affliction.

Vs. 29, 30. Lo, all these things worketh God oftentimes with men. He speaks often, and chastises often. The latter method is service but it is the process by which the pure gold is brought out of the furnace. To bring back his soul from the pit, etc. That is the end for which he is laboring.

Marriages.

At Durant, Miss., March 21, by Rev. H. Heslup, Miss Lucinda Collins to Mr. Toh Johnson.

At the bride's mother, in Grenada, Miss., March 20, 1879, by Rev. D. A. Williams, Mr. H. Butler and Miss Bella Brown.

On the same day, at the residence of Mr. G. Wolfs, by Rev. D. A. Williams, Mr. S. H. Martin and Miss M. Woods.

Deaths.

On the 26th inst., Rev. J. W. Maddox was killed about 11 o'clock at night at Shuqualak.

G. W. BARNEY.

Macon, Miss., March 29, 1879.

At the burial of Silvie Stewart, a Baptist sister, March 9, in Wallis Co., Texas, Benjamin Smalley, Jr., was called on to read a chapter. He selected Revelation xxi. We believe from what the sister said as she passed away that she felt no evil influence. W. H. JACKSON.

San Felipe, Texas, March 19.

Fell asleep in Jesus, March 10th, 1879, Jennie Hill, a devoted Christian, and one of the oldest members of the M. E. Church. She leaves to mourn her departure a beloved daughter and grandson among other relatives.

Also Bro. Chas. Henderson on the 18th inst. He was one of the best members of the Pineville M. E. Church. Both of these passed quietly away in the full triumph of faith. J. F. MARSHALL, Pastor.

On the 4th day of March, in Jacksonville, Texas, the wife of Bro. H. Hawkins died. She talked with her husband until the last and left a bright evidence of the presence of the Savior with her. Deceased was in her 48th year and afflicted with consumption. Rev. W. L. Molloy writes: "I have known her for years, and know her to have been a refined Christian lady. She was a devoted wife, mother and friend. She was from Evansville, Ind."

The Western Advocate please notice.

Again we are called upon to chronicle the death of one of our members, Bro. Charles Henderson, who had been a faithful class leader in the Pineville M. E. Church here for years past, who served as a steward, sexton and treasurer, and his last words were; "Ready now. Take me Jesus. Just now I told them you were a sweet Jesus. Take me up." His funeral was attended by a large procession of friends and acquaintance. His place cannot be filled in this church.

H. J. WRIGHT.

Alexandria, March 19, 1879.

Denis Gibson was born in Richmond, Virginia, in 1834. He came to New Orleans in 1863 and in 1865 he joined the First street M. E. Church, and remained a faithful and useful member until called by death, March 10th, 1879. Bro. Gibson was a pious, excellent and promising young man in his forty-fifth year. God called him from labor unto reward. Thus passed a Christian gentleman, a dearly beloved leader, and a highly esteemed servant of the Lord Jesus. While we mourn his loss we bow in submission to the Divine will and rejoice in his eternal gain. A wife and relatives mourn his loss here, but rest in the assurance of reunion on the bright plains of immortality. In his death the church has lost a star, and heaven has gained a jewel. His funeral was attended by Revs. Emperor Williams, Henry Green and Graham Bell.

DIED.—In New York city, on the 9th inst. Mrs. Eunice Southworth, wife of Dr. M. A. Southworth, in the 43d year of her age.

All who were so fortunate as to form the acquaintance of Mrs. Southworth, during her visit last summer, among friends here, are more than pained by the above announcement. Here was a lovely character, and there are none among us who will not most deeply sympathize with the husband to whom she had been united less than a twelve-month. They were married in the Episcopal cathedral at Dallas, Texas, in 1878, and their visit in Little Falls was a part of their bridal tour, and is recollected with much pleasure by their friends here. Dr. Southworth has been extremely ill since the death of his beloved wife, and his sister was last week summoned to his bedside. We are glad to announce that he is now slowly improving.—New York Paper.

New Books.

YOUNG FOLKS' HISTORY OF ENGLAND. By Charlotte M. Yonge. Cincinnati: Hitchcock & Walden.

This volume is uniform with the same author's histories of Germany, Greece, France and Rome. It is a 16mo of 415 printed pages, choicely illustrated, and neatly bound. The boys and girls will be delighted with it.

New Publications.

The Sunday-school Journal for April has been received. Phillips & Hunt, New York, publishers.

The April number of the Nationnal Repository maintains the high reputation which this magazine has earned. An illustrated sketch of the "Upper Hudson," by Dr. E. Wentworth, late editor, is both readable and instructive. A description of "Geneva" follows, by Rev. G. Draper. Mrs. E. S. Martin writes of "Versailles and its Associations;" D. C. Macdonald gives a rare account of Holland, as "A Queer Little Country;" while Mrs. Bell Tevis Speed tells us of a "Conteur Moraliste"—a French Moral Story-teller—an intimation that some story tellers in France are not quite moral. Dr. Alden furnishes personal anecdotes and "Recollections of William Cullen Bryant," in a charming manner. Edward B. Heaton describes the "Big Horn Mountains;" and Mrs. Dickinson concludes her story "Among the Thorns" with a rose-colored denouement. Selected articles and poems with the "Editorial Miscellany," make up a well filled number. The National Repository is published monthly at $3, a year, post-paid. Hitchock & Walden, Cincinnati, Chicago, or St. Louis.

The famous author of the famous story, dear to every boy's heart, "Tom Brown's School Days at Rugby," Thomas Hughes, contributes a capital short story of English boy-life to the April St. Nicholas, which Miss Kate Greenaway of London delicately illustrates. "Olive Thorn" tells of a training school for "Little House-servants" in New York, and the children's lessons and games, with illustrations by Miss Jessie Curtis. "Horace E. Scudder" writes about "Little Puritans"—and two large drawings add a great interest to his work. "Harriett Prescott Spofford" has Part 1 of the story of "Astronomer." "Eyebright," by Susan Coolidge," is continued, and a "Jolly Fellowship" has an entertaining installment in which the heroes and heroine try to place upon her throne a recently discovered African Queen. Celia Thaxter and Lucy Larcom furnish some charming verses. There is a story of a boy's wonderful bravery in "Spoiling a Bombshell," a translation of a German fairy story, Milton's life pleasantly told, and there are ever so many other things of interest to old and young. November and December numbers are free to new subscribers for 1879. For sale by Book and News Dealers. $3 00 a year; 25 cents a number. SCRIBNER & Co., New York.

The numbers of the Living Age for the weeks ending March 15th and 22d, respectfully, have the noteworthy contents: Felix Antoine Dupanloup, Bishop of Orleans, by C. de Warmont, Nineteenth Century; Magazine Writers Blackwood; An Old Friend with a New Face, by Thos. Hughes, Macmillan; Virgil, by Frederick W. H. Myers, Fortnightly; On the Migration of Birds, by August Weissman, Contemporary; William Etty, Temple Bar; The French Expedition in Equatorial Africa, Pall Mall Gazette; The Archimadrite Palladius, Academy; Etna, Spectator; A Diary of Milton's Age, Athenæum; together with installments of "The Bride's Pass," by Sarah Tytler, and "A Doubting Heart," by Miss Keary, and the conclusion of "Sir Gibbie," by George MacDonald; choice poetry. For fifty-two such numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,000 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with the Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston; publishers.

Wide Awake opens its April number with a quaint frontispiece by Robert Lewis, a ship-board scene of the thirteenth century, illustrating the historical story by Mrs. Curwen, "The Maid of Norway." Followed by an instructive illustrated paper about "April Fools and Other Fools," J. F. Packard; spirited account of "Mardi Gras in Nice," by M. J. North; a delightful illustrated story of child-life in one of our frontier forts, by Mrs. Le Bontillier of Dakota. An amusing story is "The Forbes-Doolan Affair," written and illustrated by Mr. Bishop, the author of "Detmold" in the last year's Atlantic. Three serials, "The Dogberry Bunch," St. Olave's" and "Don Quixote, Jr.," are each capital in their way. Two articles of value, are biographical in their character, viz.: No. IV. of the "American Artists" series, by Mr. Benjamin, relating to Wm. M. Chase, with portrait and studio drawn in pen-and ink by Mr. Chase himself; and No. XXIII. of the "Poets' Homes" series, about Col. Paul H. Hayne, the well-known Southern poet, written by Charles F. Richardson, and accompanied by a portrait and view of the poet's Georgia home at "Copse Hill." There are several illustrated poems, "Funny Uncle Phil," by Amelia Daily-Alden, and "A Hop," by Mrs. Carr. Several funny drawings by "Bos," Francis, Cox, will keep the family in good humor until the May number comes. Only $2,00 a year. Ella Farman, Editor. D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston.

Sunday Afternoon for April has a story which illustrates some of the workings of the pauper letting system; others entitled Jack, and did God make that Man in Vain?; and a sketch of Isabella T. Hopkins of Palliasy the Potter. Mrs. Helen Campbell gives a resume of the Tenement House Question, describing the very successful tenement houses erected within a few years in Brooklyn, N. Y., and discussing the matter in its general bearings. The first of two papers on The Mormons by T. L. Rogers, being mainly historical and showing the treasonable attitude maintained towards the United States. The Howgate Scheme of Arctic Discovery gives information as to the details of this project. E. Gardner gives suggestions as to building churches. Christianity and the State is by Oliver Johnson. A New Chapter on Wages suggests a plan for the laboring classes to secure instruction in the higher as well as more practical parts of trades and as to earning wages at the same time. Calvin the Sinner, and a satire on the current rage for Decorative Art by Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney. The poets are Lucy Larcom, Elizabeth Akers Allen, and Elaine Goodale, one of the two young sisters in Berkshire County, Mass., whose recent poems have attracted wide attention. Under the title of Mint, Anise and Cummin the editor handles a circular recently sent out from Boston which aimed at promoting a revival. He also talks about College Frands and Our Laws and Law Makers. There are, as usual, The Still Hour and Literature.

Scribner for April has special attractions. From a long a varied table of contents of twenty-five papers, stories, poems and miscellanies, the following are selected as of special interest: John Ericsson, the Engineer, the great inventor, the competitor of George Stephenson, to whom the world owes the Monitor, the steam fire-engine, the screw propeller, etc., etc., and, last of all, the solar engine, of which the first full and authentic account is here given, prepared by W. C. Church, editor of the Army and Navy Journal. "Actors and Actresses of New York," by J. Brander Mathews, with illustrations of some of the leading members of the profession in character, Miss Jewett as Sara in the "Danicheff," Mr. Coughlan as Charles Surface, Mr. Beckett as Bob Acres, Mr. Gilbert as Sir Peter Tenzle, Mrs. Booth, Mr. Broughman and others. "Henry Burgh and his Work," the story of the man to whom we are indebted for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, with a history of the society's work, and many entertaining anecdotes, by C.C. Buel. "H. M. S. Pinafore,' for Amateurs," showing how this popular opperetta is fitted for amateur production, with a hint at stage directions, etc., and three views of the deck of the "Pinafore," as seen at the Standard Theatre, New York. "In a Snailery," by Ernest Ingersoll, one of our foremost young naturalists. "The Stickeen River and its Glaciers," a graphic description of Western scenery, with drawings by Moran reproduced by "process." "The measure of a Man," an account of the interesting re-discovery of antique measurements, by Wm. Page. "The Tendency of Modern Thought," a paper on Romanism and Rationalism, by Rev. Dr. C. C. Tiffany. "Half-witted Guttorm," a charming tale of Norwegian life, written for Scribner by Kristofer Sanson, and transleted by Boyesen; "Franlein," a short story by Adeline Tafton; "A Journey to a Political Convention," by an anonomous writer; Poems, New Inventions in the World's Work; the first of the series of papers on "The Scribner Brazil Expedition" will appear in the May number. The series will comprise six richly illustrated articles. For sale by news-dealers. $4.00 a year; 35 cents a number. Scribner & Co., New York.

Miserableness.

The most wonderful and marvelous success, in cases where persons are sick or pining away from a condition of miserableness, that no one knows what ails them, (profitable patients for doctors), is obtained by the use of Hop Bitters. They begin to cure from the first dose and keep it up until perfect health and strength is restored. Whoever is afflicted in this way need not suffer, when they can get Hop Bitters. See "Truths" and "Proverbs" in another column.

Compound Oxygen.

To the feeble convalescent, and to the over-worked student, or professional man, or man of business who finds himself slowly losing vitality and the power to do his best; who knows that his health is gradually giving way, and that if no help can be found, a break-down in the near future—fatal, it may be—is inevitable, "Compound Oxygen" offers an almost certain means of relief and restoration. Send for our Treatise on "Compound Oxygen," which gives the largest information and many remarkable testimonials from widely known and eminent public men. Sent free. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1112 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Crowning Discovery.

All the "phones" of this phonetic age are surpassed in practical benefit to mankind, by the discovery of Allan's Anti-Fat, the great and only known remedy for obesity, or corpulency. It produces no weakness or other unpleasant injurious effect, its action being simply confined to regulating digestion, and preventing an undue assimilation of the carbonaceous, or flesh-producing, elements of food. Sold by druggists.

ELLSWORTH, Kan., July 13th, 1878.

BOTANIC MEDICINE Co., Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—Allan's Anti-Fat reduced me seven pounds in one week. Yours respectfully,

MRS. TAYLOR.

The Standard of Fashion.

Under this name Andrews' Bazar is known to all the best authorities on Woman's Toilette in the United States and Canada. The wide experience and cultivated taste of the editor and proprietor, W. R. Andrews, insure the most exact reflection of what is more tasteful and artistic in the world of fashion. The arts of the household, both useful and ornamental—such as decoration, floriculture, needlework, the cuisine, etc.—receive the fullest attention, and the literary departments are represented in the contributions of the most gifted men and women in the land. Topics treated in the magazine may be generally classified as follows: fiction; poetry; criticisms of books, music, the drama and art; biographies; essays; personal sketches; wit and humor; and personal paragraphs, original and selected. The writers for Andrews' Bazar are also contributors for such magazines as Harper's Monthly, Appleton's Journal, The Atlantic, etc. A vast mass of brilliant literature, beside the fashion departments is furnished for One Dollar per annum; single copies, 10 cents. Address, W. R. Andrews, Cincinnati, Ohio.

This age is a progressive one, and improvements are continually suggesting themselves in almost every department of human life. Labor-saving inventions and machinery are eagerly sought for, to accomplish in a few hours' time, what usually was the toil of days and even weeks. The farm, the household, the workshop, the factory, all possess unmistakable evidences of this wonderful age of progress. It remained, however, for the eminent house of Lord & Taylor, well known as one of the leading dry-goods firms of New York City, to introduce vast improvements in the old shopping method, and to make "shopping easy" for every lady in the country. There is now no excuse for ladies to fatigue themselves with travel, and to undergo its hundred and one annoyances, when they can purchase every article needed for the wardrobe or household without leaving their homes. Messrs. Lord & Taylor will send, on application, free of charge, samples of any of the newest piece goods for Spring and Summer wear, which they advertise, with prices attached to each. Selections from these are readily made; orders for goods received, filled by the house, and returned by fast trains to the purchaser. This surely is a material improvement for the slow method of former days, as by this system time, money, labor and annoyances are all saved. The business standing of this eminent house makes this announcement worthy of attention, as they can be relied upon implicitly to accomplish whatever they advertise to do.

Dr. Harter's IRON TONIC

Is a Preparation of IRON and CALISAYA BARK, in combination with the Phosphates.

Endorsed by the Medical Profession, and recommended by them for Dyspepsia, General Debility, Female Diseases, Want of Vitality, &c., &c.

Manufactured by the Dr. Harter Medicine Co., No. 213 N. Main Street, St. Louis.

The following is one of the very many testimonials we are receiving daily:

Gentlemen:—Some three months ago I began the use of DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC, upon the advice of many friends who knew its virtues. I was suffering from general debility to such an extent that my labor was exceedingly burdensome to me. A vacation of a month did not give me much relief, but on the contrary, was followed by increased prostration and sinking chills. At this time I began the use of your IRON TONIC, from which I realized almost immediate and wonderful results. The old energy returned and I found that my natural force was not permanently abated. I have used three bottles of the TONIC. Since using it I have done twice the labor that I ever did in the same time during my illness, and with double the ease. With the tranquil nerve and vigor of body, has come also a clearness of thought never before enjoyed. If the TONIC has not done the work, I know not what. I give it the credit. Most gratefully yours,

TROY, O., Jan. 2, 1878. J. P. WATSON, Pastor Christian Church, Troy, O.

Lectures on Preaching

Delivered before the Theological Students of Yale College.

By Rev. Matthew Simpson, D.D., LL.D.

(One of the Bishops of the M. E. Church.)

Cloth, 12mo. Price..................$1.50

These admirable Lectures embrace the following topics, delivered in the order here stated:

Lecture I. The Nature and Work of the Christian Ministry.
Lecture II. The Call to the Ministry.
Lecture III. The Preacher Personally.
Lecture IV. Indirect Preparation for the Pulpit.
Lecture V. The Preparation of a Sermon.
Lecture VI. The Delivery of a Sermon.
Lecture VII. Ministeriel Power.
Lecture VIII. The Influence of the Pastorale on the Pulpit.
Lecture IX. Colleteral and Miscellaneous Work.
Lecture X. Is the Modern Pulpit a Failure?

It is needless to say that these topics are treated in a masterly manner—clearly, forcibly, practically; as becomes both the gravity and importance of the subjects discussed, and the reputation of their author as a "workmen who needeth not to be ashamed." No minister should be without them, as none can carefully and thoughtfully read them without profit. In them there is nothing showy, but they present the ripe fruit of the matured thought of a long period of ministerial usefulness and oversight. They are weighty, well-considered teachings.

This book will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Address,

LITTLE MARY'S GOOD MORNING TO GOD.

"Oh, I am so happy," the little girl said,
As she sprang like a lark from her low trundle bed.
"It is morning, bright morning; good morning, papa,
O give me one kiss for good morning, mamma.
Only just look at my pretty canary,
Chirping his sweet good morning to Mary.
The sunshine is peeping straight into my eyes,
Good morning to you, Mr. Sun, for your rise
So early, to wake up my birdie and me,
And make us as happy as happy can be."

"Happy you may be, my dear little girl,"
As the mother stroked softly the clustering curl,
"Happy as can be, but think of the One
Who wakened this morning both you and the sun."
The little one turned her bright eyes with a nod,
"Mamma, may I say good morning to God?"
"Yes, little darling one, surely you may,
Kneel as you kneel every morning to pray."
Mary knelt solemnly down, with her eyes
Looking up earnestly into the skies.

And two little hands that were folded together,
Softly she laid on the lap of her mother;
"Good morning, dear Father in Heaven," she said,
"I thank Thee for watching my snug little bed,
For taking good care of me all the dark night
And waking me up in the beautiful light.
O keep me from naughtiness all the long day,
Blest Jesus, who taught little children to pray."
An angel looked down in the sunshine and smiled,
But she saw not the angel, that beautiful child. —Selected.

Train the Boys for Business.

There is one element in the home instruction of boys to which, says a Boston paper, too little attention has been given, and that is the cultivation of habits of punctuality, system, order and responsibility. In too many households boys from twelve to seventeen years are too much administered to by loving mothers and other female member of the family. Boys' lives during those years are the balcyon days of their existence. Up in the morning just in season for breakfast, nothing to do but start off early enough not to be late; looking upon an errand as taking so much time and memory away from enjoyment; little thought of personal appearance except when reminded by mother to "spruce up" a little; finding his wardrobe always where mother puts it—in fact, having nothing to do but enjoy himself.

Thus his life goes on until school ends. Then he is ready for business. He goes into an office where everything is system, order, precision. He is expected to keep things neat and orderly, sometimes kindles fires, file letters, do errands —in short, become a part of a nicely regulated machine, where everything moves in systematic grooves, and each one is responsible for correctness in his department, and where in the place of ministers to his comfort, he finds task masters, more or less lenient, to be sure, and everything in marked contrast to his previous life.

In many instances the change is too great. Errors become numerous; blunders, overlooked at first, [illegible] matter of serious [illegible]; then patience is overtasked, [illegible] is told his services are [illegible] wanted. In Memoriam.

Rev. Rufus Spaulding was born in Crompton, Lower Canada, Dec. 12, 1804, and died at the residence of Dr. Joseph Jones, in San Antonio, Texas, March 12, 1879, aged 74 years and three months.

He was converted at seventeen, and felt called at once to the work of the ministry, but declined to follow his convictions. After three years he yielded, joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, was licensed the next day after admission, and within two weeks was employed by the Presiding Elder. At the next session of the New England conference in 1827, he was admitted on trial, and two years later into full membership. He filled the following appointments in the order given. Tolland Circuit, Conn.; Dorcester, Mass.; Church St. Lynn, Andover, and Charlestown. During this year he was married, and appointed by the Young Men's Methodist Missionary Society, Missionary to Africa, with Rev. Osgood S. Wright, of Zion's Herald. In November 1833 the party, consisting of Messrs. Spaulding and their wives, and Miss Farrington, sailed from Norfolk, Va. It is remarkable that they were entertained in Norfolk by the same family that entertained Melville B. Cox, sailed from the same port, on the same day of the same month, in the same ship, Jupiter, and under the same captain, Knapp.

They came to Monrovia bay, and anchored outside the bar on New Year's Eve, and held a watch meeting on board. As fellow passengers they had Sheriff Roberts, afterward Governor; Lieutenant Governor Williams, and several missionaries of the Presbyterian board. The next day they landed, and the first Sabbath Mr. Spaulding preached and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the last time they partook together, and for several, the last time on earth.

The Liberia Annual Conference was held soon after, at which Mr. Spaulding presided and made the appointments. He also organized a Conference Temperance society, probably the first on the African continent.

On a visit to the gave of Cox, the missionaries became infected with the deadly malaria of the place, and soon sickened. Mrs. Wright died; a few days later Mr. Wright followed her. Mr. Spaulding and his wife partially recovered, and as soon as possible returned to America, after an absence of six months.

He procured a monument and sent it to Liberia to mark the graves of Cox, and Mr. and Mrs. Wright. He also brought back the effects of Melville B. Cox to his brother Gershom F. Cox. Among them was a pair of silk half hose which were presented to Mr. Spaulding, and which by his request are to be presented to Bishop Haven, who has stood by the grave of Cox and seen the monument.

After his return to America, Mr. Spaulding received one appointment, but his health failed before the year closed, for one year was superannuated and then located, and so remained until death. He engaged in farming, and in the book and stationary business in Dubuque, Iowa. He accumulated some property, gave his three children a good education, and had a good home. Death swept away wife and all his children, misfortune wasted his property, and alone, with slender means and poor health, came to San Antonio in 1876. He procured a comfortable living by renting his Health Lift as long as he could attend to business. Six months ago he became too feeble to do this, and was taken by Dr. and Mrs. Jones to their home, and cared for as tenderly as his own children cou'd have done.

His disease was painful, but his spirit was patient and sweet. His Christian character, tried as by fire, exhibited the pure gold, burnished, it gave only the sweeter fragrance, and he suffered and died triumphing in Christ Jesus.

He was a pure, reproachless man, a genial companion, of great intelligence and good culture, and a minister of great ability. He was respected and loved by all who knew him.

The funeral services by his request, were conducted by Rev. M. A. Daugherty of the Methodist Episcopal church, by whose invitation all ministers present participated. They took place at the residence of Dr. Jones and were attended by a large number of mourning friends who had shown him many attentions. The Masons who had been kind to him, buried him with the ceremonies of their order.—San Antonio Courier.

DR. C. McLANE'S

CELEBRATED

LIVER PILLS,

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of haying left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. MCLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

Inhaling Tube!

—AND—

COMMON AIR, WILL CURE CONSUMPTION IN ITS EARLY STAGES.

Send for Circular. The Tube, with full directions, postpaid. Sent on receipt of $3.50, or call at his residence, Passaic, N. J.

The Rev. N. N. Beers, of the M. E. Church Wayne, Steuben Co., N. Y., writes:

It is now nearly thirty years since I commenced the inhalation of the common air under your instructions, and I have undiminished confidence in it as a remedy for consumption and other throat and lung diseases. It is in harmony with Nature's laws. I have now been preaching twenty-seven years since my recovery from a condition of tuberculosis, in which a council of physicians said it was impossible for me to live longer than three months. My lungs to-day are as sound as any man's can possibly be.

Yours affectionately, N. N. BEERS.

The Rev. B. M. Adams, of the N. Y. East M. E Conference, says:

I thank the Lord that I ever saw you. The Inhaling Tube I obtained of you almost twenty years ago has been a wonderful blessing to me, and I am glad, through my recommendation, to many. I think Schureman Halsted's life was lengthened years by it. His chest enlarged, although he was over fifty years old when he commenced using it and he led the Lord's battles with a shout long after the doctors told him he must stop. Many other dear friends of mine have had their lives lengthened by its use.

From Rev. J. H. Vincent, D. D., of the Sunday School Publications of the Church.

I have used your Tube at times for several years, and have unbounded faith in its philosophy. n2 79 tf.

TRUTHS.

Hop Bitters are the Purest and Best Bitters ever Made.

They are compounded from Hops, Buchu, Mandrake, and Dandelion,—the oldest, best, and most valuable medicines in the world and contain all the best and most curative properties of all other Bitters, being the greatest Blood Purifier, Liver Regulator, and a Life and Health Restoring Agent on earth. No disease or ill health can possibly long exist where these Bitters are used, so varied and perfect are their operations.

They give new life and vigor to the aged and infirm. To all whose employments cause irregularity of the bowels or urinary organs, or who require an Appetizer, Tonic and mild Stimulant, these Bitters are invaluable, being highly curative, tonic and stimulating, without intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are, what the disease or ailment is, use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick but if you only feel bad or miserable, use the Bitters at once. It may save your life. Hundreds have been saved by so doing. $500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help.

Do not suffer yourself or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.

Remember, Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged, drunken nostrum, but the Purest and Best Medicine ever made; the "Invalid's Friend and Hope," and no person or family should be without them. Try the Bitters To day.
